STATEMENT OF REASONS

Chairman Joan D. Aikens
Commissioner Lee Ann Elliott

At issue in MURs 3664, 4171, and 4289 is the unequal and prejudicial treatment accorded the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary, General and Compliance Committees. Regrettably, our colleagues determinedly pursued reporting violations related to travel by President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle on Air Force I and Air Force II contrary to the recommendation of the Audit Division staff, and twenty years of precedent.

I

MUR 3664 was generated by a complaint filed on November 2, 1992, by the Democratic National Committee. This was a case of first impression concerning an interpretation of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) as to whether estimates of expenditures for travel on Air Force I and II should appear on periodic reports before invoices for the travel were received by the Committees.[1] Since the

[1] The regulation provides in pertinent part that, "A debt or obligation, including a loan, written agreement to make an expenditure, the amount of which is over $500 shall be reported as of the inception of the Federal Election Campaign Act (FECA), no incumbent presidential campaign ever reported such expenditures before receiving an invoice. The Commission never previously challenged that consistent practice, and upon amending 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) in 1990 the Commission stated that it intended to "follow[ ] current policy." See 55 Fed. Reg. 26385 (June 27, 1990).

Audit Division staff informed the Commission virtually every time MUR 3664 was placed on the Commission agenda that the Audit Division interpreted "date of incurrence" to mean the invoice date (i.e., the date demand for payment was made rather than the date services were rendered: in this matter, the date a trip was made.) The rationale presented by the Audit Division for this practice is that it is not always possible for the auditors to calculate the date a committee actually incurred a debt, hence, for administrative convenience the date of invoice is used as the "date of incurrence" in analyzing whether a violation occurred. Therefore, the matter was not referred by the Audit Division for enforcement action.

Nevertheless, the Office of the General Counsel (OGC) pursued MUR 3664. Since the Audit Division did not refer it, OGC staff hand-calculated the actual travel dates from other records provided by the Committee and used those dates, rather than invoice dates as the "date of incurrence." We believe this was excessive and unnecessary.

We expressed our reluctance to pursue MUR 3664 from the beginning. The Commission originally made reason-to-believe findings on July 20, 1993, and reaffirmed them on January 25, 1994, pursuant to the Commission's November 9, 1993, determinations regarding procedures to be followed in light of FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, 6 F.3d 821 (D.C. Cir. 1993) ("NRA"), petition for cert. dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, 115 S.Ct. 537 (1994). We opposed reason to believe findings, however, then-Commissioner Potter joined with our colleagues and provided the necessary fourth vote.

The next action taken by the Commission occurred on November 7, 1995, a year and ten months later. The Commission considered a general counsel's report dated October 26, 1995, which was placed on the agenda due to an objection by Commissioner Thomas. Commissioner Thomas objected because the General Counsel recommended the Commission take no further action and close the file in MUR 3664, because date on which the debt or obligation is incurred ... If the exact amount of a debt or obligation is not known, the report shall state that the amount reported is an estimate."

With respect to the actual debt that was not properly reported, the Committee amended its reports in accordance with the Audit Division's recommendations, and the Audit Division did not refer the issue for enforcement action. With respect to the Committee's failure to estimate debts, further action in this matter after the issue was not raised in the audit would not be the most efficient use of our limited resources. Moreover, the Committee's apparently good-faith reliance on the Air Force and the White House Travel Office to provide information concerning the number of political passengers and applicable airfare per air leg mitigates, although it does not vitiate, the Committee's failure to report estimated debt for campaign-related use of Air Force aircraft.

Although the Audit Division staff maintained that it never before or after the 1990 regulation (for the past twenty years) attempted to determine actual dates services were provided; and the General Counsel's assurance that this case was unique, Commissioner Thomas insisted that the matter be pursued. The General Counsel withdrew the report, purportedly to review it, and promised to get back to the Commission.

The next that the Commission heard about MUR 3664 was in regard to a General Counsel's Report dated August 13, 1996, which was considered by the Commission on September 10, 1996. In the nine-month interim between November 7,1995, and August 13, 1996, MUR 3664 was transferred from the Enforcement Division to the Public Financing, Ethics & Special Projects Division and combined with two other matters, MURs 4171 and 4289, which were on the Commission agenda for the first time. The General Counsel made an abrupt about-face, recommending the Commission deny the Committee's requests to dismiss MUR 3664 but enter into pre-probable cause conciliation with the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee on MURs 3664. OGC also recommended finding reason-to-believe and entering into pre-probable cause conciliation in MURs 4171 and 4289.

We believe the general counsel's report dated October 26, 1995, recommending the Commission take no further action in MUR 3664 was the correct disposition of this matter, and supported that recommendation. Therefore, it could have come as no surprise that we objected to the General Counsel's about-face recommendation, almost a year later, that the Commission enter into pre-probable cause conciliation with the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee on MUR 3664. After being assured by the General Counsel of his intent to handle in this same fashion all future travel on Air Force I and II by the campaigns of incumbent Presidents, on September 10, 1996, Commissioner Elliott reluctantly voted to approve the General Counsel's recommendations. Commissioner Aikens was absent.

Suffice it to say that if there is any inconsistency - it is our colleagues approach to the strict interpretation of regulations in these 1992 presidential matters. For example, on August 16, 1995, these same colleagues declined to approve the General Counsel's recommendation to find reason to believe that the Clinton for President Committee and the Clinton-Gore '92 General Election Compliance Fund violated 11 C.F.R §§ 104.14(d), 9003.3(a)(1) and 9034.5(a). Rather than rehash the particulars, we have attached our Statement of Reasons in that matter, as well as our colleagues, at Attachments A and B.

II

It is simply untrue that the General Counsel was "squeezed" by our resistance to pursue MUR 3664. We had no input into the General Counsel's decision to transfer MUR 3664 from the Enforcement Division to the Public Financing, Ethics & Special Projects Division, nor into the extra 11 months thereby added to the resolution of that matter, nor into the abrupt about-face of the General Counsel's recommendations. In fact, those decisions were made in spite of our known objections.

As to the resolution of MURs 4171 and 4289, which were combined in a global conciliation agreement with MUR 3664, there was little disagreement and the Commission entered into pre-probable cause to believe conciliation negotiations with the Committees on September 10, 1996. The Committees made a counteroffer on November 4, 1996 and negotiations ensued. These unsuccessful negotiations dragged on for four-months until March 11, 1997, when the Commission rejected the Committees' counteroffer and negotiations terminated. On March 13, 1997, the Office of the General Counsel sent the Committees a letter and brief notifying them that it was prepared to recommend that the Commission find probable- cause-to-believe that the violations occurred. The Committees filed their responsive brief on April 22, 1997, and the Commission found probable-cause-to-believe on June 19, 1997, Commissioner Aikens objecting. These negotiations dragged on another four and a half months until November 4, 1997. At that time the Office of General Counsel recommended the Commission reject a counteroffer and approve a revised conciliation agreement.

During all the time that negotiations were on-going there was considerable discussion of how much and which violations were being lost each month due to the expiration of the five-year statute of limitations which applies to actions for assessment or imposition of civil penalties under the FECA. See, Federal Election Commission v. Williams, 104 F.3d 237 (9th Cir. 1996). In fact, on March 10, 1997, the General Counsel provided the Commissioners with a chart identifying the violations, the amount involved in each violation, and the statute of limitations attaching to each violation. The chart showed that the statute of limitations had already begun to run on some of the violations and that each month that passed more would be lost until January 1998. In January all of the violations at issue would be beyond the reach of the Commission due to the expiration of the statute of limitations.

By December 9, 1997, some nine months after the March 10 memo, when the final votes were taken on these matters, as predicted, the majority of the violations were beyond the reach of the Commission due to the expiration of the statute of limitations. Given the posture of the matters at this time, and the limited resources of this agency, we concluded that we should accept the Bush-Quayle Committee counter-offer rather than pursue litigation. FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION
WASHINGTON D.C. 20463

Statement of Reasons
Final Audit Report of the Clinton for President Committee
Commissioners Joan D. Aikens, Lee Ann Elliott, Trevor Potter

On December 15, 1994, the Federal Election Commission considered the Final Audit Report on the Clinton for President Committee. Unfortunately, a major recommendation in this Report that required the Clinton Committee to make a substantial repayment of taxpayer funds was blocked by three Commissioners.

This unprecedented action involved the Clinton Committee's receipt of matching funds from the U.S. Treasury in excess of its entitlement. The Commission's Audit Division found, and the General Counsel agreed, that the Clinton Committee improperly diverted over a million dollars in private contributions from the Primary Committee to a separate "legal and accounting fund" for the General Election. However, the law requires these private contributions be used to pay the remaining debts of the primary committee.

The effect of this impermissible transfer was to artificially inflate the Primary Committee's debt. This caused the U.S. Treasury to make an overpayment of taxpayer funds to the Committee to cover that debt. Accordingly, the Audit Division and General Counsel recommended the Committee repay $2.9 million to the U.S. Treasury. We voted for this recommendation because this result was clearly required by the Commission's regulations and previous presidential audits. We regretfully conclude that our three colleagues' failure to adhere to these rules, and their vote against this recommendation, can only be considered arbitrary and capricious.

1. Commission Regulations and Procedures Required the Clinton Committee Make a Repayment

The Commission's regulations at 9034.1(b) limit the amount of public funds a candidate may receive after the nomination to the net debt outstanding at the time a matching fund payment is received. To arrive at this debt calculation, all public and private contributions are subtracted from debts outstanding. Any net debt remaining would increase the candidate's entitlement to public funds to pay the debt. The long history of this regulation makes it clear that it was designed to encourage the payment of campaign debts, to the extent possible, with private contributions.1/

Commission regulations at part 9003.3(a)(1)(iii) also clearly state: Contributions that are made after the convention but which are designated for the primary election, and contributions that exceed the contributor's limit for the primary election may be redesignated for the legal and accounting compliance fund if the candidate obtains the contributor's redesignation in accordance with 11 C.F.R. 110.1. Contributions that do not exceed the contributor's limit for the primary election may be redesignated and deposited in the legal and accounting compliance fund only if:

(A) The contributions represent funds in excess of any amount needed to pay remaining primary expenses;...

1/ The requirement at 11 C.F.R. § 9034.1(b) that private contributions be used to pay a committee's debts was recently upheld in Lyndon H. LaRouche; LaRouche Democratic Campaign '88 v. FEC, 28 F.3d 137 (D.C. Cir. 1994). In LaRouche, the Court stated "the language (of 9034.1(b)) would appear to be dispositive. A candidate is entitled to receive post-DOI matching payments so long as net campaign obligations remain outstanding, and the regulation defines a candidate's remaining [NOCO] as the difference between the amount of his original NOCO and the sum of the contributions received...plus matching funds received... Whenever the sum of his post-DOI receipts equal the amount of his NOCO-whether those receipts be in the form of private contributions or matching payments from the public fisc - his entitlement to further matching payments ceases to an end. Even if we were to find the regulation ambiguous, which we do not, we would still have to accept the Commission's interpretation of section 9034.1(b) unless we found it plainly inconsistent with the wording of the regulation, which it is not. 28 F.3d at 140 (emphasis added).

(D) The contributions have not been submitted for matching.

(emphasis added).

This regulation was approved on a 6-0 vote by the Commission after the 1988 election cycle when a similar issue arose in the Dukakis audit. This regulation was designed to more clearly state the consistent position taken by the Commission from the first publicly financed election in 1976. In noting the need for this clearer regulation, Commissioner Thomas pointed out during the Dukakis audit that:

> On its face, the (former) regulation would seem to allow the redesignation of post-primary designated contributions if the primary would have a debt afterward. However, it would be inconsistent with the Commission's congressional mandate to allow a committee to, in essence, create debt that would lead to entitlement for post ineligibility matching funds. In other words a committee should not be able to claim a net debt and hence entitlement to post ineligibility matching funds if it dissipated its permissible primary contributions to do so. Taken to its extreme, a committee could redesignate all of its unmatched contributions ... and unnecessarily create a huge deficit with a resulting claim for matching funds.
> The current language of 9003.3(a)(1)(iii) pertaining to redesignation of post-primary designated contributions, effective April 8, 1987, evolved from a somewhat similar provision in the previous version of 11 C.F.R. 9003.3. However, the prior version made clear that such redesignations were permissible only if the primary committee retained sufficient funds to pay its remaining debts.
> Contributions which are made after the beginning of the expenditure period but which are designated for the primary election may be deposited in the legal and accounting compliance fund: provided that the candidate already has sufficient funds to pay any outstanding campaign obligations incurred during the primary campaign... [11 C.F.R. 9003.3 a)(1)(iii) (effective July 11, 1983).]

9804386302 1

> Though the current language did not retain this protective phrasing, there appears to have been no intent to alter the prior approach. ... Indeed, as noted, it would be contrary to public policy to allow the creation of debt and the consequent entitlement to post ineligibility matching funds. Accordingly, the Committee should be permitted to redesignate and transfer-out to the GELAC only so much of the contributions as would not leave the Committee in a net debt position. The remaining amount in question, ... cannot be redesignated and transferred-out, must be repaid by GELAC, and must therefore be included in Committee's cash on hand figure.2/

In order to clarify any ambiguity that may have occurred during the 1988 Presidential audits, the Commission revised its Presidential regulations for 1992 to make absolutely clear that public and private money be used for debt retirement, and that there is limited permissibility and several prerequisites for any redesignation of private funds. See 11 C.F.R. 9003.3(a)(1)(iii) and 9034.1(b).

II. Application of These Rules to the Clinton Committee

By splitting 3-3 on two repayment motions, the Commission failed to apply these regulations to the Clinton Committee. For example, there is no question that on the date of ineligibility (i.e., the date of Clinton's nomination, July 15, 1992), the Committee had a debt of over $7 million. Solicitations prior to July 15 had clearly solicited funds for the primary campaign and all contributions received were made payable to the Primary Committee, and deposited into the primary account. Those solicitations reminded the contributor that the contribution could be matched. In fact, the last primary solicitation sent on July 17, which solicited funds to retire the primary debt, again reminded the contributor that the contribution could be matched.3/

2/ Quote of Commissioner Scott Thomas from the Final Audit Report on the Dukakis for President Committee, approved by Commission 6-0.

3/ Subsequent solicitations were mailed for contributions to the General Election Legal and Accounting and Compliance Fund (the GELAC). Those contributions are not at issue here.

Contributions deposited by the Primary Committee from these solicitations totaled $5,863,410 between July 16 and October 2, 1992. In that same time frame, the Committee submitted final matching requests totaling $6,046,107. The Committee received this inflated amount because they did not apply all of their private funds to their net outstanding campaign obligations. Instead, the Primary Committee sought redesignations from their contributors and transferred $2,444,557 to the GELAC. This is in direct contravention of the Commission's regulations governing matching funds. 9034.1(b).

In other words, the Committee took contributor checks directly in response to primary solicitations, deposited them into the primary account and submitted $2,600,519 for matching funds while at the same time taking other contributions from the same solicitations and, claiming they were intended for the GELAC, transferred them to the Legal and Accounting Compliance Fund.

In the Final Audit report, the Audit Division correctly recommended that the candidate had exceeded his entitlement to further matching funds as of the date on which private contributions and matching funds could have retired all debts. This was in accord with the previously cited public funding regulations, their Explanation and Justification, and the Presidential Compliance Manual. The amount the Audit Division calculated the Committee received in excess of its entitlement on this issue was over $2.9 million. The Audit Division recommended this amount must be repaid to the U.S. Treasury. The Office of General Counsel fully concurred with this recommendation.

In discussing this finding, our colleagues argued that because of the general redesignation language at 11 C.F.R. § 110.1 and the fact that the Committee had received redesignations from many of the contributors, that we should recognize the "contributors' intent" and allow the Committee to transfer the funds to the GELAC.

We believe their analysis is faulty in that it fails to take into account the specific language of the regulations concerning outstanding debts from a Presidential primary at §§ 9003.3(a)(1)(iii) and 9034.1(b).

However, our colleagues' and the Committee's argument went even farther than simple redesignation. They argued that these contributions were not specifically designated for the primary in the first place but were intended for the GELAC despite the fact that some of these contributions were solicited by the Primary Committee to retire primary debt; and all specifically indicated on the solicitation that the contributions were matchable; and the checks were made to the order of the Primary Committee and were deposited in a Primary Committee account.

The result of the Commission's failure to approve Audit's recommendation left us in the impossible position of accepting the Committee's argument that contributions deposited after the convention were not primary contributions, but rather were undesignated contributions received after the primary election, and pursuant to 11 C.F.R. 110.1 were automatically general election contributions. This apparently holds true despite the fact that contributions received as part of the same solicitations were in fact deposited by the Primary Committee and matched with public funds!

Following the 3-3 split on the Audit's recommendation, which had the effect of calling these funds contributions for the GELAC, the General Counsel and Audit Division recommended that the funds received after the DOI that were matched should be declared ineligible for matching because (as our colleagues had just argued) they too were not designated for the primary. This recommendation was made because the contributions transferred by the Clinton Committee to the GELAC and the contributions that were retained by the primary committee and submitted for matching were indistinguishable in every way: they were solicited by the same mailing, mailed to the same address, made payable to the same committee and received at the same time. This motion recognized that if some of these contributions were not designated for the primary, then none were. Accordingly, the Committee would have had to make a repayment of the amount that was mismatched with public funds. Incredibly, this motion also failed on a 3-3 partisan split.

And so the Committee has it both ways. Contributions the Committee received after the convention were considered primary contributions that were matched with public funds used to pay primary debts, while other contributions also received after the convention from the same solicitations were considered undesignated or redesignated to the GELAC -- all at the whim of the Committee.

We see no legal or logical way that these post convention contributions can be both matchable primary contributions and at the Committee's discretion also be undesignated contributions to the GELAC. Such a scheme allowed the Clinton Committee to manipulate its cash balance and debts to receive public money to which it was not entitled. In its 19 year history, the Commission has never tolerated such a result. The Commission's failure to demand repayment of this public money is inconsistent with Commission precedent and squarely at odds with the plain language of the statute and regulations, is arbitrary and capricious, and contrary to law. Failure to approve either of the two motions completely undermines the integrity of the Presidential Public Funding system and will place this agency in an untenable position in trying to enforce the law in future elections.

III. The Clinton Committee's Real Entitlement to Public Money.

In their Statement of Reasons, Commissioners McGarry, McDonald and Thomas make the extraordinary statement that their votes to block repayment actually "furthers the public financing concept" (emphasis in original) because it pumps more taxpayer money into the Clinton campaign than the rules allow. Their argument is that if public financing is good, then more public financing must be better. This philosophy, of course, turns Congress' limited public financing statutes for the primaries and the Commission's audit rules upside down: for in every Presidential audit, until this one, the Commission has sought to protect taxpayer funds by requiring Committees prove they were fully entitled to the matching funds they received.

We believe that, at a minimum, Congress should be consulted before the Commission turns a conditional grant of public funds into a flat entitlement for maximum financing. Furthermore, such a drastic change of course should be subject to the notice and comment and other protections of a rulemaking. Finally, it is grossly improper to adopt such a free-spending standard for only one candidate (the current President of the United States), while every other campaign in the same cycle has been held to a different and stricter rule. Such a singular and capricious result is inappropriate and does not "further" the concept of public financing. Instead, it destroys the public's confidence that its money will be audited in a non-partisan manner and the rules scrupulously followed when it is given to any presidential campaign.

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION
WASHINGTON D C 20463

STATEMENT OF COMMISSIONERS McDONALD, McGARRY, AND THOMAS REGARDING CLINTON CAMPAIGN AUDIT

We write this short statement to explain our principal reasons for disagreeing with the staff's recommendation to treat about $1.5 million in funds raised by the Clinton campaign after the nomination as primary committee assets. The staff's recommendation would have resulted in an additional repayment obligation in that amount on the theory that the primary campaign debt was $1.5 million smaller and matching funds given to the campaign to pay its debts should be returned.

First, as a matter of law, this is a case of first impression. The Commission has never addressed whether contributions coming in after the nomination with some indications they were intended for the primary, but without the specific signed writing required for proper designation as such (see 11 C.F.R. §110.1(b)(4) and Advisory Opinion 1990-30, 2 Fed. Elec. Camp. Fin. Guide (CCH) ¶ 6006), must be treated as primary campaign assets. The staff felt that because the checks were made payable to various names such as "Clinton for President Campaign," the legal requirement for a proper designation as a primary contribution was met. We think the regulation and advisory opinion cited necessitate clearer words of designation for a particular election than that. Also, we disagree that the solicitation materials which appear to have generated some of the contributions at issue satisfy the designation standard without a contributor's signature. Maybe the regulation and advisory opinion shouldn't have been made so strict, but the signature requirement is there.

Second, assuming the contributions at issue didn't have to be treated as primary assets, we faced the policy issue of whether the Clinton campaign should be forced to treat them as such nonetheless. Because the actual intent of these post-nomination donors was ambiguous at best, because the technical requirements for designation as primary donations were not met, and because the use of public funds (rather than private contributions) to pay campaign expenses is the very essence of the public funding program, we felt it inappropriate to account for these funds in a way that would deprive the Clinton campaign of the use of public funds to pay legitimate post-primary debts. The funds at issue, which came in after the nomination, which subsequent to receipt were confirmed in writing by the donors to be intended for the general election legal and accounting compliance fund (GELAC), and which were not submitted for primary campaign matching funds, shouldn't be reconfigured as primary campaign assets, we believe.

The staff was of the view that if we don't treat the funds moved to the GELAC as primary assets, we should treat other post-nomination contributions submitted for primary matching as non-matchable and recoup any associated matching funds. This struck us as a "Catch 22" argument. In our view, the contributions submitted for matching can and should be treated differently. First, the Clinton campaign concedes that such contributions must apply as a primary asset, thereby reducing post-nomination entitlement for matching funds. Further, the Commission's longstanding practice, apparently, has been to treat such contributions as matchable even though the technical requirements for written designation have not been met.

What is the impact of our approach? Taxpayer funds, rather than privately raised dollars, are used to pay primary campaign expenses-- a result that furthers the public financing concept. The funds at issue are left available to the GELAC to pay for complying with the many complexities of the law-- again a result that furthers the public financing concept because it insures that candidates continue to opt for public rather than private financing.

Our approach does not undermine the responsibility of the agency to insure that public funds are not spent for things that have no relation to the primary campaign or that are not properly documented. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in the Clinton and Bush campaigns are being treated as non-qualified for these reasons. Nor does our approach undermine our review of campaigns to insure that the state-by-state and overall spending limits are adhered to by the publicly funded campaigns. The audit reports demonstrate this. All our approach does is allow the use of more public funding dollars to pay for legitimate primary campaign expenses of a publicly funded campaign. As a matter of policy, we think that is a better result than the alternative.

Respondent: The Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc.

Complainant: Democratic National Committee
430 South Capitol Street, S.E.
Washington, D.C. 20003

INTRODUCTION

The Complainant seeks an investigation by the Federal Election Commission of the Respondent's undisclosed use of taxpayer money to subsidize the campaign travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle, in violation of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, 2 U.S.C. § 431 et seq., as amended (the "FECA"), and the Presidential Election Campaign Fund Act, 26 U.S.C. § 9001 et seq. (the "Fund Act"). In particular, Complainant alleges that although George Bush and Dan Quayle have conducted extensive campaign travel on Air Force One and Air Force Two since their selection on or about August 20, 1992 as the Republican Party's nominees for President and Vice President, respectively, the Respondent has failed to report any reimbursement to the United States Treasury for the use of the aircraft and has failed to report any debts or obligations owing to the United States Treasury, both as required by the FECA and the Fund Act.

PARTIES

Complainant, Democratic National Committee (the "DNC"), is the national committee of the Democratic Party and is a political committee registered with the Federal Election Commission (the "FEC"). Respondent, The Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("Bush-Quayle '92"), is the authorized committee of George Bush and Dan Quayle, Republican Party candidates for the offices of President and Vice President of the United States, respectively.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

On or about August 21, 1992, Bush-Quayle '92 received $55.49 million from the United States Treasury for the general election campaign expenses of George Bush and Dan Quayle, candidates for President and Vice President, respectively. Pages from the Monthly Report of Bush-Quayle '92, filed on September 22, 1992 are attached hereto as Exhibit 1 (the "August Monthly Report"). Between August 21 and August 31, 1992, Bush-Quayle '92 disbursed approximately $1.2 million, according to the August Monthly Report. During the same period, George Bush and Dan Quayle made approximately 32 separate campaign-related trips using Air Force One and Air Force Two, respectively. Appendix A. Yet, the August Monthly Report discloses no disbursement by Bush-Quayle '92 to the United States Treasury for reimbursement for the campaign-related travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle on Air Force One and Air Force Two.[1]

As of August 31, 1992, the August Monthly Report discloses that Bush-Quayle '92 owed $260,000 of debts and obligations. Again, however, the August Monthly Report discloses no debt or obligation owing by Bush-Quayle '92 to the United States Treasury for the campaign-related travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle on Air Force One and Air Force Two.

As set forth below, the failure of Bush-Quayle '92 to report either reimbursements to the United States Treasury or debts and obligations owing to the United States Treasury for the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two in the political campaign of George Bush and Dan Quayle means, either:

1. Bush-Quayle '92 has violated the reporting requirements of the FECA and the Fund Act in flagrant disregard of the primary goal of public disclosure of campaign activity embodied in those laws; or

2. George Bush and Dan Quayle are receiving untold amounts of taxpayer money to subsidize their political campaign, over and above the $55.49 million in taxpayer money already granted to Bush-Quayle '92 for that purpose.

APPLICABLE LAW

Under the Fund Act, the FECA and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, all campaign-related travel of publicly funded candidates for the offices of President and Vice President is considered a qualified campaign expense and must be reported by the candidates' authorized campaign committees. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7. See also 2 U.S.C. §§ 432(a) and 434; 11 C.F.R. §§ 101.1, 101.2, 102.12, 102.13 and 9002.1. For travel which is entirely campaign related, the entire cost of the travel must be paid for by the candidates' authorized campaign committee and reported as a qualified campaign expense. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(1). If any stop on a trip includes campaign activity, then that stop is considered a campaign stop and the entire cost of the trip to that location and back to the point of origin must be considered an expenditure reportable on the authorized campaign committee's report. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(2).

---

[1] Although the Republican National Committee (the "RNC") may reimburse the cost of Presidential and Vice Presidential political travel as part of their party building activities, the RNC's Monthly Report for August discloses only three disbursements to "Treasurer of U.S." for "TRANS" during the month of August in an aggregate amount of $6,334.41. Exhibit 2.

Under these regulations, Bush-Quayle '92 must report the entire cost of the campaign travel for each stop, not only for the candidates, but also for the cost of their traveling party who are campaign-related. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(4). The campaign-related travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle on Air Force One and Air Force Two, respectively, must be calculated on the basis of first class airfare between cities with regularly scheduled commercial service or the usual charter rate between cities without regularly scheduled service. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

The regulations also provide that an authorized campaign committee must report any debt or obligation, the amount of which is over $500, as of the date incurred. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). If the exact amount of the debt or obligation is not known as of the date the report must be filed, the regulations require that the committee report an estimate. Id. As previously noted, estimating the cost of campaign-related travel for candidates traveling by government conveyance is not difficult -- the regulations require the use of first class airfare between two locations with regularly scheduled commercial service or the usual charter rate between two cities without regularly scheduled service. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

ANALYSIS

Bush-Quayle '92 has failed to report reimbursements, if any, to the United States Treasury for the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two for their political travel. Nor have they reported reimbursements to the United States Treasury for other means of transportation (e.g., helicopters, limousines, etc.) used in their campaign-related travel between August 21 and August 31, 1992[2]. Therefore, the Respondent has either violated the reporting requirements of the FECA and the Fund Act by failing to disclose either disbursements or debts and obligations, or George Bush and Dan Quayle are expecting to receive a free ride at the taxpayer's expense for their campaign-related travel.

For purposes of this Complaint, Complainant reviewed the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two during those eleven days and identified, based upon news reports, the 32 separate trips of Mr. Bush and Mr. Quayle that were clearly campaign-related.[3] Complainant then determined, through travel agency quotes, the lowest first class airfare between any two locations on the date of such travel by Mr. Bush or Mr. Quayle. If no commercial air carrier offered first class service between the two locations on the date of travel, then the lowest first class airfare between the two locations closest to the actual stops of the candidates was used[4]. Appendix A contains an itinerary of the campaign-related travel of both George Bush and Dan Quayle for this period, and sets forth the locations and airfares used in this calculation. Complainant has not attempted to calculate the many other campaign-related travel expenses that would be required to be reimbursed by the Respondent to the United States Treasury for the use by the candidates of helicopters, cargo aircraft, limousines, vans or other government owned transportation, or for the expenses of any personnel other than a conservative estimate of seven individuals traveling with the candidates as a part of

2 In fact, according to a recent news report, Respondent appears to acknowledge that they are not abiding by the requirements of the law by stating that reimbursements are not made or reported because White House "billing is delayed three to seven months." C. Babcock, "Flying Political Class on Air Force One: Commercial Rules Make Every Trip an Incumbent Advantage," Washington Post, A19, October 19, 1992.

3 The following summaries for each of these trips sets forth the basis for alleging that these trips represented campaign-related travel for Messrs. Bush and Quayle, rather than simply "incidental contact." See also news clippings attached hereto as Exhibits 3 through 27.

4 This method was used for estimating a minimum amount owed by the Respondent to the United States Treasurer solely for the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two, notwithstanding the regulatory requirement to use a charter rate in such circumstances. See 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

their campaign entourage. Even using these conservative limitations, the Respondent would owe more than $75,000 to the United States Treasury for the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two during the last eleven days in August, 1992.

The following summaries describe the campaign nature of each of the 32 trips discussed above. For each trip, a news clipping is attached to support the campaign-related nature of the event in each location.

August 21, 1992 -- Gulfport, Mississippi

At a campaign rally in Gulfport, Mississippi, George Bush and Dan Quayle promised that whenever the voters heard the initials "G" and "C" together, they would think of "Gore-Clinton and the Gridlocked Congress." Exhibit 3.

August 21, 1992 -- Springfield, Missouri

At a campaign rally in Branson, Missouri, George Bush offered himself as the 1992 version of Harry Truman and attacked Governor Clinton as espousing ideas that are "clear, present and dangerous." He also accused Governor Clinton of "wishy-washy indecision" on the Persian Gulf war. Exhibit 4.

August 22, 1992 -- Woodstock, Georgia

At a rally in Woodstock, Georgia, Bush questioned whether the American people could trust Governor Clinton. Exhibit 5.

August 22, 1992 -- Birmingham, Alabama

At a rally in Birmingham, Alabama, George Bush again spoke of family values, using his wife, Barbara Bush, as the best evidence of the fact that he stands for family values. Exhibit 6. At a shopping center in Hoover, Alabama, George Bush spoke about the difference between himself and Governor Clinton as "a choice about the character of the person you want to lead this nation and the direction you want us to go." Exhibit 7.

August 22, 1992 -- Dallas, Texas

At an address before the Religious Roundtable, George Bush denounced the Democrats for leaving God out of their platform. Bush also challenged the religious credentials of Governor Clinton and Senator Gore by stating, "I am struck by the fact that the other party took [thousands of] words to make up its platform and left out three simple letters, G-O-D." Exhibit 8.

August 22, 1992 -- Huntington, Indiana

At a campaign rally in his hometown of Huntington, Indiana, Dan Quayle told his audience that in Huntington, "life's centered around family, school, Little League, Friday night football, Saturday night basketball . . . and church on Sunday." Exhibit 9.

August 23, 1992 -- Springfield, Illinois

At a rally at the Illinois State Fair, Bush told farm families that he hasn't "begun to fight yet." He attacked Governor Clinton as unable to withstand efforts to differentiate their views on the economy: "He takes a little, gentle broadside and he starts to whine." Exhibit 10.

August 23, 1992 -- Lakeland, Florida

At a Baptist church in Lakeland, Florida, Dan Quayle spoke about the Bush administration's efforts on AIDS in response to protestors and later reiterated his Party's dedication to "family values," which he defined as "hard work, integrity, love of God and love of family." Exhibit 11. Quayle then traveled by bus to a barbecue in Leesburg, Florida (35 miles north of Orlando) and then rode by bus another 30 miles to a rally in the town square of Ocala, Florida.

August 23, 1992 -- Ocala, Florida

At a rally outside Leesburg, Florida, near Ocala, Florida, Dan Quayle reiterated that "You don't strengthen the American family by raising taxes." Exhibit 11.

August 24, 1992 -- Union, New Jersey

George Bush toured the Lincoln Technical Institute and announced spending an additional $10 billion on job training programs in the next five years that he said could be paid for without raising taxes or increasing federal spending. Bush attacked Governor Clinton by telling the group of students that "My opponent agrees with this in principle. But when you get to the details we really do have a vast philosophical difference. I believe we can pay for this new job training offensive without raising taxes on people or increasing overall government spending. We've got to make the tough calls. This is a priority." Exhibit 12.

August 24, 1992 -- Ansonia, Connecticut

In Connecticut, George Bush spoke about lower government spending reiterating that "Here's one we have a big difference on." He said, "Lower government spending and tax relief, not spend and tax. Tax relief." Exhibit 13.

August 24, 1992 -- Maryville, Tennessee

At a rally in Maryville, Tennessee, Dan Quayle shouted, "I don't know about you, but I'm fired up for this campaign and we are going to win." Later, in a visit to the police academy in Knoxville, Tennessee, Quayle charged Governor Clinton with being soft on the death penalty, saying, "Let's look at the record . . . Bill Clinton said that he is for capital punishment. Yet he said that one of his first Supreme Court appointments could be Mario Cuomo, who is an outright opponent of capital punishment. You can't have it both ways." Exhibit 14.

August 24, 1992 -- Newport News, Virginia

Before a crowd of shipyard workers, Dan Quayle reiterated his allegation of Governor Clinton's intention to appoint Mario Cuomo to the Supreme Court and implied that Governor Clinton was soft on the death penalty. Dan Quayle charged that this was "having it both ways. That's why [Clinton] has the name Slick Willie." Exhibit 15.

August 25, 1992 -- Chicago, Illinois

In a speech that was billed as nonpolitical, George Bush addressed the convention of the American Legion wearing his medal-clad Legion hat and reminding veterans of the "bond we share," while aides passed out literature attacking Governor Clinton's record regarding the Vietnam-era draft. Exhibits 16 and 17.

August 25, 1992 -- Detroit, Michigan

At a campaign rally in Canton, Michigan, George Bush attacked Governor Clinton and Senator Gore for their fuel efficiency policies. Exhibit 18.

August 25, 1992 -- Charlotte, North Carolina

At the beginning of his whistle-stop train tour of North Carolina, Dan Quayle repeated charges that Governor Clinton had raised taxes in Arkansas and would do it in Washington. Quayle said, "He's said that as president, 'I'm going to raise taxes $150 billion.' He's got a training tax increase. He's got a health care tax increase . . . . You name it, they're talking about taxing it." Exhibit 19.

August 25, 1992 -- Columbia, South Carolina

In Columbia, South Carolina, Quayle warned a partisan crowd of the perils of another Carter administration: "We will never let a Democratic president and Democratic Congress team up again." Quayle also led the supporters in chants of "It's time for them [the Congress] to go!" Exhibit 20.

August 27, 1992 -- St. Louis, Missouri

In St. Louis, Missouri, Bush delivered a campaign speech to employees of Public Safety Equipment, Inc., an exporter of emergency vehicle warning equipment, in which he attacked Governor Clinton's trade policy as opportunistic by exploiting a "fear of foreigners." Exhibit 21.

August 27, 1992 -- Cincinnati, Ohio

At a campaign rally in Cincinnati, Ohio, Bush said, "Some people don't like it when I talk about family values -- well, they'd better get used to it . . . . The family is the foundation of America." Exhibit 22.

August 27, 1992 -- Findlay, Ohio

At a speech in Findlay, Ohio, Bush attacked Governor Clinton as a fearmonger whose protectionist policies would put U.S. jobs at risk. Exhibit 23.

August 28, 1992 -- Grand Rapids, Michigan

Speaking to the Economic Club of Grand Rapids, Michigan, Dan Quayle charged that Senator Gore's views as expressed in his book on environmental policy were "bizarre" and "hysterical" environmental views that could decimate the U.S. automobile industry and cost millions of American jobs. Exhibit 24.

August 28, 1992 -- Detroit, Michigan

Touring a robotics factory in Detroit, Michigan, Quayle commented on the competing claims of the environment and the economy, claiming, "We're [the Bush Administration] the ones that are giving top priority to people and jobs." Quayle attacked as "irresponsible" Vice Presidential candidate Al Gore's proposal to raise average fuel efficiency standards from the current 27.5 miles a gallon to 40 miles a gallon by the year 2001. Exhibit 25.

August 31, 1992 -- Huntsville, Alabama

While in Huntsville, Alabama, Quayle attended a campaign fund-raiser and delivered further criticism of Hollywood: "Hollywood doesn't like our values. Hollywood doesn't like our beliefs." Quayle also charged that a Clinton presidency would mean higher taxes: "Gov. Clinton thinks you create jobs by raising taxes. You and I know you create jobs by cutting taxes, not raising taxes." Exhibit 26.

August 31, 1992 -- Columbus, Georgia

In Columbus, Georgia, Quayle leveled further criticism against the Hollywood establishment: "Hollywood does not like our values and beliefs. I will continue to speak the truth for family values and will not back down." Quayle also attacked Governor Clinton as a pro-tax governor, and blamed the problems of the country on the 38-year Democratic reign in Congress. Exhibit 27.

* * * * *

Because all of these appearances were designed to further the campaign of Messrs. Bush and Quayle, the FEC should investigate immediately to determine that the required cost of the campaign-related travel of these candidates is being reimbursed to the United States Treasury. The facts set forth above establish reason to believe that Bush-Quayle '92 has committed some or all of the following violations:

1. Failure to report general election expenditures in violation of 2 U.S.C. § 434(b).

2. Failure to pay qualified campaign expenses through the authorized campaign committee in violation of 11 C.F.R. §§ 9002.1, 9002.11, 9003.1 and 9004.7.

3. Failure to report debts and obligations in violation of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

RELIEF REQUESTED

Complainant respectfully requests that the FEC take the following actions:

1. Conduct an immediate investigation to determine whether the Respondent has violated the FECA and the Fund Act by accepting subsidies from the United States Treasury for the campaign-related travel of candidates George Bush and Dan Quayle.

2. Require the Respondent (and any other Republican committees, as the FEC deems appropriate) to produce immediately:

   (a) travel itineraries, and

   (b) all records pertaining to payment of costs for all travel

from at least August 21 until the present, for immediate review by FEC auditors.

3. Take such other appropriate legal action as the FEC may deem warranted as a result of the investigation requested by this Complaint.

VERIFICATION

The undersigned counsel for Complainant DNC swears that the statements in this complaint are based on the sources indicated, and, as such, are true and correct to the best of her information and belief.

2 George Bush actually traveled to Woodstock, Georgia, approximately 30 miles from Atlanta.

3 George Bush actually traveled to Ansonia, Connecticut, approximately 12 miles from New Haven and approximately 47 miles from Hartford. However, there were no first class flights by commercial carriers offered between Newark, New Jersey and either Ansonia or New Haven, Connecticut on August 24, 1992.

4 George Bush actually traveled from Cincinnati to Findlay, Ohio, but Toledo is approximately 30 miles from Findlay. Although there was no jet service between Cincinnati and Toledo, a first class, non-stop flight was offered on August 27, 1992 by Delta Airlines for the rate quoted. In addition, on that same date, the candidate could have traveled from Cincinnati to Toledo with a connection in Cleveland, Ohio for $160 for a first class seat on Continental Airlines.

President Plunges Into Truman Role

Bush Vows to Tie Adversaries to Congress

By David S. Broder and Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writers

BRANSON, Mo., Aug. 21—President Bush, launching his reelection campaign in Democratic nominee Bill Clinton's back yard, warned voters in Mississippi and Missouri today that the combination of Clinton and a Democratic Congress would be fatal to America's future.

On the open-air stage of a country music entertainment park here in the Ozarks, a shirt-sleeved Bush said that Clinton and his running mate, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. (Tenn.), are "interlocked with that gridlocked Congress, and I'm not going to let the American people forget it."

"I will take on the governor of Arkansas," Bush promised. "I will relish him. And we will win. My opponent and his saxophone will be playing that old Buck Owens tune, 'It's Crying Time.'"

Encouraged by early polls showing a positive reaction to the Republican National Convention, Bush plunged happily into his self-appointed role as the Congress-bashing Harry S. Truman of 1992. He told the Republican National Committee in Houston this morning that he would tie Clinton and Gore so tightly to the Democratic Congress, which has even lower approval ratings than the president, that whenever voters heard the initials G and C, they would think of "Gore-Clinton and the Gridlocked Congress."

Bush, on Attack, Begins Campaign

By RICHARD L. BERKE
Special to The New York Times

BRANSON, Mo., Aug. 21 — Offering himself as the 1992 version of Harry S. Truman, President Bush today opened his general election drive in the former President's home state with a torrent of fighting words at Gov. Bill Clinton, Congress and the press.

At spirited rallies before flag-waving partisans at the water's edge in Gulfport, Miss., and then at a country-and-western theme park here in the Ozarks, Mr. Bush pronounced the Republican National Convention a success and said the race was already tightening.

But he devoted most of his oratory not to touting his own accomplishments or goals but to bitterly attacking the Governor of the state just south of here as espousing ideas that are "clear, present and dangerous." He also accused Mr. Clinton of "wishy-washy indecision" on the Persian Gulf war.

Except for the Presidential seal on the lectern, Mr. Bush, his collar open, his sleeves rolled up, looked and sounded more like a challenger than a man who has occupied the White House for nearly four years. He spent more time ridiculing Mr. Clinton's economic policies than seeking support for the across-the-board tax cut that he proposed Thursday night but mentioned only in passing today.

Going to the People

"Two weeks ago they were totally writing off the Bush-Quayle ticket, all those smart talking heads on television," Mr. Bush said as Vice President Quayle stood by his side in Gulfport, both sweating through their dress shirts in the stifling humidity. "But we are going to take it to the American people. We're going to the people with our message.

"For nine months," he continued as the crowd roared, "the Governor of Arkansas has been distorting my record. And I don't care what the polls say. I'm going to take this case to the American people like Truman did — go against the Congress, go against the opponent, say what I'm for."

Arriving at another rally at the Silver Dollar City park in Branson, the Republican President again sought to shroud himself in the image of the Democratic son of Missouri who took on Congress in the 1948 campaign. "He was a big underdog and he fought back," Mr. Bush said. "And he wrapped another Governor challenging him right around the do-nothing Congress. I'm going to do the same thing with the Governor of Arkansas."

Gloom and Doom

If Mr. Bush's vitriol today is any indication, voters are in store for a political season that will make the Truman race seem tame. Calling his stop in Gulfport "the first step into the future," Mr. Bush sought to build on the political lift from the Republican convention and, indeed, many of his passages today rang familiar to anyone who heard his speech Thursday night.

If anything, Mr. Bush's oratory today was even more pointed. After barely a night's sleep after the convention's closing gavel fell, Mr. Bush wasted no time in mocking those who predict he will not win re-election.

"We came down here to Houston with more dire predictions, more gloom and doom negativism than I've ever seen in my long, long time in the political arena or, indeed, the private arena," Mr. Bush said at a brief appearance with Mr. Quayle before the Republican National Committee as he was leaving Houston. "A lot of that is turning around," he said.

The day lacked the spontaneity of the the Clinton-Gore bus caravan after the Democratic National Convention, there were many empty seats at the party's send-off in Houston, and though the two rallies drew thousands of enthusiastic supporters, some campaign officials had predicted larger crowds.

There was no doubt, though, that the reception today — where supporters repeatedly broke into chants of "four more years, four more years" — was a welcome improvement over the first post-convention outing of Mr. Bush and Mr. Quayle four years ago. It was then, at a stop at Mr. Quayle's hometown of Huntington, Ind., that thousands of supporters greeted the freshly minted ticket but caused a ruckus by turning on the press for a stream of reports questioning the Vice President's military record and, more broadly, his preparedness for the office. Mr. Quayle tried, rather unsuccessfully, to defend himself to reporters.

Today the campaign played it safe, there were no news conferences, and Mr. Bush and Mr. Quayle parted ways in Mississippi. The crowds were almost all white, and in friendly Southern territory where campaign officials hope to shore up their political base before moving on to more contentious battleground states.

The coming days should bring continued brisk campaigning before receptive audiences. From here, Mr. Bush has scheduled stops in Georgia, Alabama and Texas on Saturday and Illinois on Sunday before returning to Washington. He leaves again on Monday for New Jersey and Connecticut.

Mr. Quayle is also expected to keep up a heavy pace on the road and today he praised the President's acceptance speech and vowed to press on speaking everywhere about family values.

"I'm going to say it again and again and again," the Vice President said this morning in Houston. "We will not back down from talking about traditional values."

The President's Crusade

But it was Mr. Bush who dominated the day as he hammered away with sound bites he is sure to repeat over and over in what he calls his "crusade" in next 74 days.

The gridlocked Congress. "Throw them out with their PAC's, their privileges and their perks."

Bill Clinton. "Follow that star! Elvis Presley song. Return to Sender."

Change. "This election isn't simply about change. It's about who do you trust to make the change work for you."

By the day's end, one thing was clear: this would be Harry Truman has only begun to bash.

Mr. Bush's idea to allow taxpayers to earmark payments for debt reduction implies spending cuts far more severe than is feasible.

Many Texas oil executives insist that the Bush camp cannot take their votes for granted this time.

NOMINEES CRITICIZE EACH OTHER'S PLAN TO REVIVE ECONOMY

BRUISING CAMPAIGN SEEN

Clinton Is Called Dependent on Taxes, While Bush Proposals Are Derided as 'Bogus'

By ROBIN TONER
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — The race for the Presidency began in earnest this weekend as President Bush and Gov. Bill Clinton engaged in a furious exchange over each other's economic proposals and, by extension, their political character.

The opening debate set the tone and the subject matter for what strategists in both campaigns predict will be a harsh and brutally competitive 10-week struggle that could ultimately come down to a handful of states in the industrial Midwest.

Mr. Bush, reveling in polls that show him closing in on the Democrats, rolled through Georgia today with another attack on Mr. Clinton as a committed taxer and spender who would conspire with the Democratic Congress to plunder the budget.

Bush Emphasizes Trust

"I'm going to ask the American people, who do you trust to bring it all home?" Mr. Bush declared at a rally in Woodstock, Ga. "Foreign policy, security policy, economic policy, who do you trust?"

He added, to a roaring rally that chanted his name, "If you listen to these guys and you'd think the deficit is a big game of the 'Wheel of Fortune.' You know that one? They want to buy three vowels — I.O.U. That's not good enough for the American taxpayer."

Mr. Clinton was moving quickly this weekend to try to defuse Mr. Bush's promise of new across-the-board tax cuts by characterizing it as a cynical, empty gimmick with as little shelf life as his promise four years ago of "no new taxes."

Clinton Sees 'Bogus' Claim

Traveling on another bus trip through the critical state of Ohio, Mr. Clinton asserted that Mr. Bush's plans to revive the economy were "totally bogus." The Democratic nominee, campaigning in Parma, asserted that "he can't battle me on the economy" and contended that Mr. Bush had "imperiled our national security by having no economic policy."

Senator Al Gore, the Vice-Presidential nominee, demanded, "Do you want four more years of a read-my-lips recession?"

The first round of post-convention polls shows once again the extraordinary volatility of the electorate this year, with Mr. Clinton's once-formidable lead significantly eroded. A new poll for The Los Angeles Times, conducted Thursday and Friday and released today, showed Mr. Clinton now leading by 8 percentage points, down from a lead of more than 20 points the week before.

Trends Reflect Battlefields

Analysts in both parties said that behind the wild swings in the polls was the reality of a intensely competitive race in an angry and economically anxious year. "This is the most open fickle, volatile electorate we've ever seen," said Peter Hart, a Democratic poll taker.

The candidates' travel schedules over the coming week are a roadmap to where this election will be fought, won and lost. Mr. Bush roared out of his convention this weekend into the South, ordinarily a Republican bastion but newly competitive this year because of the all-Southern Democratic ticket. Bush campaign advisers say they hope to consolidate their electoral base in that region and the Mountain West, then carry the battle to a belt of industrial states, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois.

The Bush advisers say this would enable them to assemble a winning majority in the electoral vote, which is 270, even without carrying California, where the Democrats have had wide leads in this summer's polls. That explains why Mr. Bush will be at the Illinois State Fair on Sunday, and will be back in Illinois and Michigan by midweek, after a swing through Connecticut and New Jersey, where the campaign also has high hopes.

Roman Catholic voters are expected to be an important part of this industrial state strategy; they are a principal target of Mr. Bush's "school choice" proposal, which would give parents vouchers they can use in private or religious schools. Republicans also expect them to respond to the appeal of "family values."

The Bush campaign hopes to raise economic fears in those states with its attacks on Mr. Clinton as a tax-and-spend liberal and suggest that the Democratic ticket would put the environment over jobs, particularly jobs in the automobile industry.

Messages From the Bus

The Democrats, for their part, were back in a bus this weekend, rolling through Ohio, Pennsylvania and upstate New York. By midweek, they will be in another bus trip through Texas, while Texas has been a reliable part of the Republican coalition in years past, the Clinton campaign clearly has hopes there this year.

"We're going there for a reason," said George Stephanopoulos, Mr. Clinton's deputy campaign manager.

"The Clinton campaign is a lot living hard to regain control of a debate it largely dominated for a solid month after the Democratic convention in New York. Obviously, the credibility of what Bush said Thursday night will be very important to the future of this race," said Stan Greenberg, the Clinton campaign's poll taker.

Mr. Clinton and his advisers wasted little time in attacking Mr. Bush's economic proposals for across-the-board tax cuts and spending caps. They called them irresponsible gimmicks, with James Carville, a top Clinton strategist, asserting, "We're going to make them eat the numbers."

Charles Black, a senior adviser to the Bush campaign, countered, "They're just calling Bush a liar, which I don't believe will work. I don't believe they want to get into a contest of who's the most trustworthy, although it's fine with us if that's what they want to do."

The Clinton campaign was also moving quickly to paint the Republicans' "family-values" appeal, which reached a crescendo at this week's convention, as a pander to the party's right wing.

Predictions of Ugly Contest

"We don't believe American families want Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell and Pat Buchanan defining their values," Mr. Carville said. "We're going to remind the American people who was in control of that convention. They are going to hear again and again about Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell running the convention and running the government."

Both sides predicted that the tone of the race would be ugly and predictably blamed each other for it. "They're going to deliberately make it nasty because they don't want to talk about the real issues," asserted Ronald H. Brown, the Democratic National chairman.

Mr. Hart, the Democratic poll taker, said that the Republican convention was filled with innuendo and outright attacks on the character of Mr. Clinton and his wife, Hillary, who was assailed as a militant feminist who equated marriage with slavery.

Noting that Secretary of State James A. Baker 3d was back in political control, Mr. Hart asserted, "The last time around we said it was Lee Atwater's campaign; this time it's clearly Jim Baker's. He's laid his first marker down, and it's going to be brass knuckles."

The Republicans asserted that their party had the franchise on negative politics. "I think Clinton's losing his composure and we haven't even started yet," said Mary Matalin, deputy manager of the Bush campaign. As Pat Buchanan said, he's been running up and down the field by himself — and there's another team on the field now.

The pace of this campaign, already furious, promises for summer's end to accelerate, both sides said. The traditional Labor Day campaign kickoff has become a more formally organized affair, with chairman for the Bush campaign and reporters this week. Mr. Bush will not take any substantial time off and he'll be campaigning from now on.

The Republicans

Bush, in Georgia, Questions Clinton's Vision of the Family

By RICHARD L. BERKE
Special to The New York Times

WOODSTOCK, Ga., Aug. 22 — In a small Southern town that looked like a set for Andy Griffith's Mayberry, President Bush today raised doubts about the Democrats' vision of family, and his surrogate cited Woody Allen as symbolizing the party's values.

As many as 20,000 exuberant supporters packed the center of town and remained buoyant through a driving rain as Mr. Bush said he understood "the American way," and warned that Mr. Clinton was in cahoots with a "gridlocked Congress" that would neglect the crowd's interests.

"The choice about the character of the man you want to lead this nation for another four years," said Mr. Bush, drenched after refusing an umbrella. The choice, he added, was "about families and leaving the world a better and more prosperous place."

An All-Out Assault

Signaling that he was ready for battle, Mr. Bush closed with these words: "Do you tell Governor Clinton and that Congress, if you can't run with the big pigs, stay under the porch."

Mr. Bush's feisty language was tame compared with the warm-up act. Representative Newt Gingrich of Georgia, who represents this town north of Atlanta and who repeatedly attacked the Democrats as having "weird values."

In his all-out assault on the Democrats before Mr. Bush arrived in this town of storefronts draped with American flags, Mr. Gingrich, the second-ranking House Republican, cited Woody Allen, who has professed love for the daughter of his former lover, Mia Farrow. Ms. Farrow has accused Mr. Allen of sexual abusing her young daughter.

"Is all this the Woody Allen plank," Mr. Gingrich said. "It's a weird situation and it fits the Democratic party platform perfectly. If a Democrat used the word 'family' to raise children in Madison Square Garden, half their party would have rebelled and the other half would not vote."

He added: "Woody Allen had no interest with his nondaughter because they were a nonfamily."

Bush Compliments Gingrich

The Bush campaign sought to distance the President from Mr. Gingrich's comments. "We do not stand foursquare behind every single statement each of these surrogates makes," said Tony Mitchell, the campaign's deputy press secretary. "And no, the President does not want to make Woody Allen an issue."

But Mr. Bush complimented Mr. Gingrich as someone "who helps us so much in Washington," and went on in his remarks to emphasize the family values issue. As "the best evidence" of his commitment to family values, the President introduced his wife, Barbara, as "a great First Lady who stands for family values." The crowd then broke out into chants of "Barbara, Barbara."

The President continued his pro-family, anti-Clinton, anti-Congress stump themes as he went on to another rain-soked rally of thousands in Hoover, Ala., where he accused Mr. Clinton of proposing the biggest tax increase in history, an allegation that the Democrat refutes. "They talk about change," Mr. Bush said. "The only thing you'll have in your pocketbook is change if this guy gets elected."

Buoyed by polls that show him closing in on Mr. Clinton since the Republican convention, Mr. Bush has eagerly taken on his rival. But he has barely mentioned the across-the-board tax-cut proposal that was a core theme of his acceptance speech, and he did not reveal details of the plan.

But he [illegible] Mr. Clinton's assertion that the President was at great fear, mon[illegible] [illegible] that we're [illegible] up fears," Mr. Mitchell said. "We're [illegible] a legitimate [illegible] difference."

Mr. Gingrich, who aides said was [illegible] Mr. Bush's [illegible] on his [illegible] new taxes pledge [illegible] how attacks Mr. Clinton's economic proposals, told reporters he thinks the President should lay out details of his proposal. Nor, of course, was there any mention of Mr. Gingrich's overdrafts at the House bank when Mr. Bush derided the "rubber check" Congress.

It was Mr. Gingrich's oratory this morning that demonstrated how far the Republicans might go in questioning Mr. Clinton's trustworthiness and character. He was particularly critical of Mr. Clinton's appearance in MTV, when the Democratic candidate said with a smile that maybe he should have inhaled marijuana — a joke about his oft-repeated comment that he had tried the drug but "didn't inhale."

"He has a deep psychological need to pander to the worst instincts of whatever group he's in front of," Mr. Gingrich said. He in effect said to these [illegible] was a [illegible] inhale.

Mr. Gingrich called the Governor's [illegible] "a strathing" and "the most [illegible] action by a politician [illegible]."

Bush Hits Trail With Gusto

Rhetorical Sword Unsheathed in 6-State Tour

By Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 23—Breaking free of his self-imposed shackles, President Bush became a full-fledged presidential candidate this weekend, pressing familiar themes with punched-up, sometimes slashing rhetoric.

In his first campaign swing after last week's Houston convention, Bush took off after his Democratic opponent with the gusto of a man who has been holding back and finally can let loose.

As he told a rain-soaked rally in Woodstock, Ga., Saturday, whipping off his tie and throwing it into the crowd in the manner of a rock star: "It's great to be out of that D.C. mode and out on the campaign trail." Before leaving Houston Friday morning he promised a meeting of the Republican National Committee, "No longer will we tell Rich [party chairman Richard N. Bond] to cool his jets."

The six-state, three-day swing took Bush before friendly crowds in friendly parts of mostly friendly states: Mississippi, Missouri, Georgia, Alabama, Texas and Illinois. From a country music theme park to the Illinois State Fair, it seemed like a needed tonic for a president who, as he put it here today, has felt "like one of those corn dogs at the fair—skewered by the Democratic opposition for nine months."

Looking over a rally estimated at 20,000 in Hoover, Ala., Saturday, Bush said: "I can't tell you what this does for the spirit."

"This is good for the soul," he said, surveying a flag-waving, cowbell-ringing crowd Friday in Gulfport, Miss., his first stop after Houston.

Indeed, Bush talked about the campaign in religious terms. It was, he told the sweltering Gulfport crowd, "a crusade to bring back values and to build a stronger, more secure America." At an evangelical gathering in Dallas Saturday night, where he hugged the Rev. Jerry Falwell, Bush emphasized that his speech was not political, then pointed out that the Democratic platform did not contain the word "God."

Bush referred to the abortion issue for the only time all weekend before the evangelical group, tossing out the line like a trainer throwing fish to clamoring seals. With the crowd already on its feet for the God line, he said: "And while you're still standing, may I say . . . I happen to believe that all human life is precious, born or unborn."

Barbara Bush refrained from joining in the thunderous applause that greeted that line, placing her hands securely behind her back.

Bush sounded defiant and almost angry at the notion that anyone could have counted him out. Arms waving, fist punching, voice raised, he shouted in Gulfport: "Two weeks ago, they were totally writing off the Bush-Quayle ticket—all those smart talking heads on television. We are going to take it to the American people."

Vowing again today to follow the model of Harry Truman's come-from-behind 1948 victory, Bush told the crowd, estimated at 6,000: "No, it's not 'give 'em hell,' but they're going to think it's hell when I get through with them."

From rally to rally, Bush sought to deliver a one-two punch to his Democratic opponents: that they are closet tax-and-spend liberals tied by an unseverable "umbilical cord" to those "gridlockers" in Congress. In Alabama Saturday, Bush derided his former colleagues in Congress, where he served for four years, as "those old mossbacks."

Those are the same themes the president sounded in campaign swings in the week leading up to the convention, but without the bite that is now present. The unnamed "opponent"—or "the governor of Arkansas," as Bush would say in his most personalized pre-convention moments—is now repeatedly referred to by name.

In pressing his case that Bill Clinton and Albert Gore Jr. are "interlocked" with Congress, Bush tried out a line that noted the similarity of monograms.

"The Clinton-Gore ticket and the gridlocked Congress are totally interlocked—one is C-G and the other is G-C," he said in Gulfport. But the crowd seemed puzzled and Bush dropped the reference from his repertoire.

Later that day, Bush clenched his hands together to symbolize the connection between the two. "Make no mistake about it, that Clinton-Gore ticket are locked, they are interlocked, with the gridlocked Congress," he said, hands entwined. "And I'm not going to let the American people forget that."

By Sunday, he had distilled the message to four key words: the "Clinton-Gore, gridlocked Congress."

Bush was not shy about using his two best weapons: the power of incumbency, and his wife, Barbara. Air Force One swooped low over the Gulf of Mexico, wowing the crowd in Mississippi; Marine One, the president's helicopter, circled overhead in Branson, Mo., where Bush, serenaded by Loretta Lynn and Glen Campbell, spoke at the Silver Dollar City theme park.

Barbara Bush, who campaigned with her husband throughout the weekend, drew loud cheers when she was introduced at each event. "We stand for family values, and the best evidence of this, standing right here with me, is Barbara Bush," the president said in Birmingham. A spray-painted sheet draped a nearby wall, proclaiming, "Our girl is better than their girl."

Bush also took pains to emphasize his good health, referring Friday again—as he did in his acceptance speech Thursday night—to "these crazy reports about my health." He underscored the point with an afternoon jog in a day that started with an 8 a.m. appearance in Houston and lasted through four private receptions and two more speeches before ending with an evening of country music in Branson.

In fact, Bush—who played up his taste for pork rinds four years ago to show how southern he is—rarely missed an opportunity this weekend to cite a country song title to make his point. In Branson, he managed to work Loretta Lynn, Garth Brooks, Buck Owens and Elvis Presley into his speech—and sounded more southern each day. "So you tell Governor Clinton and that gridlocked Congress, if you can't run with the big dogs, stay under the porch," he repeated twice Saturday, using an expression that mystified most of the press corps, who quoted it anyway.

"Oh boy, are we having problems with the national media. They don't know good news when they see it," Bush said in Hoover, where the crowd seconded his opinion with boos aimed at the press.

But even the press plane got with the program a bit: Heralding the new phase of the campaign, Bush aides tacked Bush Quayle '92 signs to the front of the cabin.

Bush Charges Democratic Platform Ignores God

By David S. Broder
and Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writers

DALLAS, Aug. 22—President Bush tonight denounced the Democrats for leaving God out of their platform, as he used the "family values" issue to club his challenger, Bill Clinton.

His address to the Religious Roundtable, a major organization of the Christian right, climaxed a day-long swing across the South in which Bush promised "Bible Belt" voters he would try to restore school prayer and provide federal aid to religious schools if they reelect him with a more conservative Congress.

House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.) set the tone for the day in a warmup speech at a rain-soaked rally in the Atlanta suburb of Woodstock, by accusing the Democrats of putting "a Woody Allen plank" into their platform.

Charging that the Democrats "have gone beyond being radical to just being weird," Gingrich told the crowd that Bush's opponents "have a plank which says, 'Governments don't raise children. People do.' Our answer to that is, 'Wrong. Families raise children.' "

Then referring to filmmaker Allen's acknowledgment of an affair with an adopted daughter of his longtime companion, Mia Farrow, Gingrich said that "Woody Allen having non-incest with a non-daughter to whom he was a non-father because they were a non-family fits the Democratic platform perfectly."

He said the Democrats "have no concept of families. If they had tried to use the word 'family' in Madison Square Garden, half their party would have rebelled and they would have a bloody fight."

Addressing a large assemblage of Baptists and other fundamentalists here in Dallas, Bush challenged the religious credentials of Clinton and his running mate, Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., both Baptists. "I am struck by the fact that the other party took [thousands of] words to make up its platform and left out three simple letters, G-O-D," Bush said. "My party is proud to celebrate our Judeo Christian heritage, unrivaled in the world."

Bush also drew cheers when he said, "I think it's ridiculous that a 13-year-old girl . . . has to get her mother's permission to have her ears pierced in a mall, but can get an abortion without telling her mom and dad. That doesn't make sense. . . ."

"Something is wrong when kids can get a birth control pill in school, but not say a prayer in school," Bush said.

In warming up his Woodstock constituents for Bush's talk, Gingrich also chastised Clinton for his humorous comment to an MTV interviewer about his acknowledged experiment with marijuana while he was a student at Oxford. Asked by the interviewer if he would inhale if he had it to do over, Clinton said, "Sure, if I could."

Gingrich said that instead of making wisecracks, Clinton should have warned the cable channel's youthful viewers about the dangers of drugs. Gingrich called Clinton's statement "the single most despicable action by a politician in my lifetime," adding, "He has a deep psychological need to pander to the worst instincts of whatever group he's in front of. . . . It was a sick thing to do."

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director, called Gingrich's comments "silly and outrageous," noting that Clinton had said in his acceptance speech, "Governments don't raise children. Parents do."

A White House spokesman, Tony Mitchell, said, "The president is not going to make Woody Allen an issue." While Bush welcomes Gingrich's support, Mitchell said, "we do not stand behind every single statement each of our surrogates makes."

Bush drew the contrast with Clinton in softer tones, but he aimed at the same constituency. "All the other side does is talk about change, change, change," he said here. "But the things that must guide change are things that never change. We believe in strong defense and strong families. . . . I share Alabama's commitment to family values, and we will never forget we are one nation under God."

For the second straight day, Bush gave short shrift in his stump speeches to the two main economic proposals he offered in his Thursday evening acceptance speech at the Republican National Convention. He mentioned the idea of letting taxpayers designate 10 percent of their taxes for debt reduction and the promise of a tax reduction if spending is cut—but offered no further clues to the specifics of the plan.

In Georgia, for the first time, Bush followed through on his threat to criticize individual Democratic members of Congress who have opposed his programs. Plugging for Senate challenger Paul Coverdell, a former Peace Corps director and longtime Bush supporter, the president ripped into incumbent Sen. Wyche Fowler Jr. (D).

He criticized Fowler's votes against the authorization of force in the Persian Gulf War, the balanced-budget amendment and line-item veto authority for the president, adding that Fowler "talks one way here in downtown Woodstock and votes differently in Washington, but we cannot have that any more."

Bush apparently will not take the cudgels to more conservative Democrats. At the shopping center, he put in a plug for Republican senatorial candidate Richard Sellers but said nothing critical of Sen. Richard C. Shelby (Ala.), who is rated as one of Bush's most consistent supporters among Senate Democrats.

Quayle Returns Home To a Calmer Celebration

Unlike 1988, No Controversy Dogs Nominee

By David Von Drehle
Washington Post Staff Writer

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Aug. 22—Just as he did four years ago, Dan Quayle came home today to celebrate his nomination to the vice presidency, and the scene was the same in many ways. . . .

The August afternoon was warm and close, just like last time. Once again, the granite courthouse was draped with a big flag and skirts of bunting. The streets were packed once more with Quayle's hometown friends; he, like before, was fresh from the Republican Party's nominating convention.

Only the spirit was different. Last time, Quayle came home driven by furies. This time, he strolled the maple tree-lined streets and greeted old neighbors with a degree of calm and confidence more befitting the handsomest boy from the most important family in town.

To the good Republicans of Huntington, which is to say most people here, it was like getting their old Danny back. Many said they first saw the change Thursday night, when Quayle delivered his fiery acceptance speech in Houston, trumpeting the middle-American virtues he says he learned in this small town surrounded by green farmland.

"He seems to be expressing his own opinions more," said Diana Reed, a high school classmate of the vice president. "He does best when he talks in his normal voice," said Cyndy Pressler, a former next-door neighbor.

"That's the real Dan Quayle," said Mary Jane Chesterton as she stood on a parking lot waiting to glimpse her former congressman.

Dennis Pressler was one of the more than 1,000 citizens who jeered and hissed at reporters covering the visit in 1988. The candidate was virtually unknown outside Indiana, and the question of the day had to do with Quayle's National Guard service during the Vietnam War.

How did it feel, Quayle was asked then during a news conference on the same courthouse steps, to know that "people were dying while you were writing press releases" for the National Guard? It was America's first contemplation in a presidential election of the long-term effects of decisions made during that divisive war. Now, that burden has mostly shifted to Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton, who, through a bit of maneuvering and a bit of luck in the draft lottery, managed to avoid military service entirely.

"Remember back in 1988 we had a few from the national media that visited us?" Quayle asked a crowd of about 2,500 gathered at the courthouse rally today, and the people of Huntington booed lustily. "Well, you'll notice this time around there's a different crowd of reporters. The ones from 1988, they said they wouldn't come back unless they had police protection, and the police said no." The crowd applauded.

Quayle was back home again in Indiana, four years older, with a touch of gray and crow's feet and the confidence of a man who suspects the worst might be past. His motorcade rolled through a rural idyll of corn and soybeans ripening toward harvest, of weathered barns leaning and swaybacked, of elms and willows and spruce dotting lawns that smell of freshly mowed grass, here a few sheep, there a pony. It rolled into his home town of 16,000 souls, including tanned boys who spend summer evenings doing wheelies on their bikes and restless teenagers who gather by the Wabash River to flirt and watch the time pass, and old farmers with hard faces.

He paid a visit without reporters to the spacious ranch-style house

KEYWORD: BUSH RE-ELECTION: BUSH POPULARITY:REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

BODY:

What a difference a week makes.

President Bush wrapped up a post-convention lap of key states Sunday with another tumultuous rally, this time at the Illinois State Fair. ''Until Houston, I stayed out of the actual political arena,'' Bush said. ''It changed as of Houston.''

He told farm families he hasn't ''begun to fight yet.'' Bill Clinton, Bush said, can't withstand efforts to differentiate their views on the economy: ''He takes a little, gentle broadside and he starts to whine.''

Before the GOP convention, Bush's campaign appearances were tepid events before hand-picked, small crowds. He'd never utter Clinton's name. Even Bush allies wondered aloud if he wanted re-election enough to go out and fight for it.

Since Houston, Bush's rhetoric has been fiery. And if his willingness to endure the elements is any measure of his commitment to winning a second term, he's shown he wants it badly: Sunday, he sweated through his blue polo shirt to tell a crowd of 4,000 he's tired of feeling ''like one of those corn dogs at the fair - skewered by the Democratic opposition.''

Twice Saturday - in Woodstock, Ga., and Hoover, Ala. - he scorned umbrellas and stood with rain pouring down his face.

Some of the made-for-TV fervor is carefully orchestrated by aides, but campaign chairman Bob Teeter says even Bush has been surprised by his post-convention superstar reception.

At dinner Saturday, says Teeter, Bush said: ''I really feel good about these last two or three days.'' Attacks on Congress seem to strike a chord. ''People are a lot different in mood than two months ago,'' Teeter says.

Lynn King's mood sure is. The Springfield hairdresser voted for Bush in 1988 but was undecided this year - ''until the convention. The things he said about what he stands for brought me back.''

Since the convention, Bush has reiterated what he stands for, his emphasis conservative. At a meeting in Dallas Saturday night of the evangelical National Affairs Briefing, he reaffirmed support for school prayer and opposition to abortion. ''I happen to believe that all human life is precious, born or unborn,'' he said.

He criticized Democrats for not including the word ''God'' in their platform: ''My party's platform is different. We are proud to celebrate our country's Judeo-Christian heritage, unrivaled in the world.''

Acknowledging his rivals will accuse him of ''mouthing slogans'' about family values, he said: ''It is no slogan to say America will always occupy a special place in God's heart.''

Part of Bush's strategy is to nail down conservative support in the traditionally GOP South and border states then turn to trouble spots: California and the industrial Midwest. In early skirmishing with Clinton, Bush is emphasizing family values, attacking Congress and promising tax relief and economic growth.

Family values is a vague, emotional appeal designed to hit home with Reagan Democrats and moderates, who can turn close elections. Its subtext is patriotism and religion.

Russ McCleland, a Southern Baptist minister from Garden City, Ala., and his wife, Melissa, a homemaker and mother of two, said gut instincts about which candidate is most moral will determine their votes, and they're voting for Bush. ''The Democratic Party has really made its stance pro-abortion, and I just can't go along,'' McCleland said. Bush ''stands for the right thing morally.''

Here in Springfield, Bush made good on his vow to go after Democrats in Congress in their districts, targeting Rep. Richard Durbin. ''The congressman from this district voted against us on Desert Storm,'' he said. ''He is against the balanced budget amendment. And I want John Shimkus to replace him.''

Bush's third issue, his acceptance speech commitment to lowering taxes, is as vague as his family values rhetoric - and will stay that way.

''What he said ... was that he would have a plan in detail before he sent it to Congress, and he'd send it to a new Congress,'' Teeter said.

Replying to Clinton's charge that he's a ''fearmonger,'' Bush said: ''I want to cut spending and taxes. And he accuses me of fearmongering? He's wrong. ... Americans aren't afraid of cutting spending and lowering taxes.''

Bush is trying to persuade voters he's more trustworthy than Clinton. In Hoover, Bush said: ''It's a choice about the character of the person you want to lead this nation and the direction you want us to go.''

Quayle Taunted on AIDS During Florida Bus Trip

By William Booth
Washington Post Staff Writer

LEESBURG, Fla., Aug. 23—Vice President Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, journeyed into the steamy heart of conservative central Florida today, waving at crowds from the open window of their bus as they rolled past such local monuments as the House of Presidents Wax Museum in Minneola.

Quayle spent the day speaking of "family values," but he could not escape taunts by AIDS activists who shouted at him outside of the First Baptist Church in Lakeland, which is about 30 miles east of Tampa.

Inside the church, Josie Parker stood up in an aisle amid the congregation of Southern Baptists and declared: "I'm dying of AIDS and God loves me." He shouted that Quayle and the Bush administration have done nothing to fight the disease.

Protesters outside the church held up signs that read: "Jesus Loves Autum Aquino, Too!"

Autum Aquino is a 7-year-old girl who has AIDS and whose family has received death threats because she wants to go to public school in Lakeland. Last week, many of the 500 people who attended a special meeting at Kathleen Elementary School spoke out against her attending school. According to press accounts, Autum left in tears.

The girl contacted the AIDS virus before birth because her mother, Theresa Dannemiller, was infected by her late husband, who was an intravenous drug user.

"They talk so much about family values, but AIDS is a disease that destroys families. Why won't they talk about AIDS and compassion?" Kathleen Morrow, a worker at an AIDS-services clearinghouse in Orlando, asked outside church.

Inside the church, Quayle responded to Parker, who was led away by Secret Service agents, by saying that the Bush administration spends more on AIDS research than it does on fighting cancer or heart disease.

The church's pastor, Michael Hailey, praised Quayle, saying, "I admire your commitment to morality and your commitment to Judeo-Christian ethics and your commitment to Jesus Christ."

Taking a page from the playbook of the Democrats, who took a page from the Republicans, Quayle got in the same bus George Bush used in 1988 and rode north from Lakeland to a barbecue in Leesburg, which is about 35 miles northwest of Orlando, and then rode another 30 miles north to a rally in the town square of Ocala.

Throughout the day, Quayle stressed the Republican Party's dedication to "family values," which he defined as "hard work, integrity, love of God and love of family."

"You don't strengthen the American family by raising taxes," Quayle told a crowd of several thousand at an outdoor picnic at the Venetian Gardens outside Leesburg.

Like the bus tours taken by Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton and his running mate, Sen. Albert Gore Jr., today's campaign included "impromptu" stops at Citrus Tower and Hawthorne, a resident-owned retirement community, where crowds ranging in size from a hundred to several thousand awaited the vice president.

"This is a good conservative area," said former Florida Republican Party chairman Jeanne Austin. "We thought this would be the right place for the vice president to be."

Florida has voted Republican in five of the last six presidential elections. But the Republicans say they're not taking the state for granted.

That might be a good idea.

In the last row of the First Baptist Church in Lakeland, Muriel Cyphert, a retired widow, whispered to reporters, "Shhh. I'm a Democrat."

While she has voted Republican in the past, Cyphert said this time she is voting for Clinton.

Quayle returned to Washington tonight.

Bush Tells of Plan For More Spending To Train Workers

By RICHARD L. BERKE
Special to The New York Times

ANSONIA, Conn., Aug. 24 — Declaring that the nation "cannot afford to waste the talent of one single worker," President Bush said today he would propose to Congress next year a major expansion of Federal job training programs that would provide about $10 billion in additional money over five years.

The proposal, which calls for retraining unemployed adults or those who may lose their jobs, and providing vouchers to help pay for it, is clearly a response to accusations in the political campaign that Mr. Bush has been insensitive to the American work force.

The President made the proposal at the Lincoln Technical Institute in the blue-collar town of Union, N.J., and moved on for a campaign stop in Ansonia, Conn., which has been hit hard by the economy, before changing his schedule to fly to Florida to tour areas devastated by Hurricane Andrew.

Cutting Other Programs

Contrasting his plan with that of his challenger, Gov. Bill Clinton, Mr. Bush said it would not rely on new taxes and would be financed largely by cutting other domestic programs. But the President, who has repeatedly assailed Mr. Clinton for proposals that could add to the Federal budget deficit,

$10 Billion Job Training Proposed

Bush Says 'Work Force' Plan Would Not Raise Taxes or U.S. Spending

By Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writer

ANSONIA, Conn., Aug. 24—President Bush today proposed spending an additional $10 billion on job training programs in the next five years and said they could be paid for without raising taxes or increasing federal spending.

Bush said he would not explain how that would be accomplished until after the election, and neither he nor administration officials briefing reporters offered details of what programs would be cut to pay for the new initiative, which would require congressional approval.

The job training plan, dubbed "The New Century Work force," would increase federal spending on job training for dislocated workers from $740 million to $2 billion for the next five years. The centerpiece is a "skill grants" voucher program that would give such workers up to $3,000 a year for two years for job training.

The proposal, which administration officials said would serve 1.2 million workers annually, would combine two existing programs—one of which, trade adjustment assistance, the president has previously proposed eliminating.

Bush also proposes in the "new Century Work Force" a jobs training program for youth, creating a youth training corps modeled after the jobs corps and a "treat and train" program that combines drug rehabilitation with the youth training corps. That program is set to cost $650 million in the first year, growing to $1 billion by the fifth year.

Bush said the training programs for displaced workers and disadvantaged youth would be "funded under the budget caps" negotiated with Congress and promised to "project these in more detail as we move into the next budget cycle," after the election. Bush has also not provided details about the size or financing of the across-the-board tax cut he promised in his acceptance speech at the Republican National Convention last week.

After proposing the new program in a morning stop in Union, N.J., Bush came to Connecticut this afternoon and pressed the case for lower government spending.

"Here's one we have a big difference on," Bush said of his Democratic opponent, Bill Clinton. "Lower government spending and tax relief, not spend and tax. Tax relief." And, he said, spacing out the words for emphasis, "less federal government spending."

Earlier he had sought to contrast his job training proposal with one made by his Democratic opponent Bill Clinton, who would require firms with more than 50 employees to spend 1.5 percent of their payroll on worker retraining.

"When you get to the details, we really do have a vast philosophical difference," Bush said. "I believe we can pay for this new job training offensive without raising taxes on people or increasing overall government spending."

Bush said Clinton "sees job training as a tax raiser and he wants to tax workers to pay for their own training."

Referring to the requirement that a firm spend a percentage on retraining, he said "That is 1.5 that will come out of your paycheck and it's on top of the new income and other payroll taxes he's proposing."

"So let me say this to my opponent," he said. "There is no point in training people for jobs if your plan is going to be in the process of destroying jobs."

Clinton said Bush's plan is "very much like" what the governor has tried in Arkansas and has proposed for the country if elected president. "The problem is he can't pay for his plan because he wants an across-the-board tax cut," Clinton said at a news conference in Little Rock.

"Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," said George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director. "But how's he going to pay for it?"

Part of the money in Bush's proposal—at least $415 million yearly and up to $670 million—would be set aside to respond to job losses caused by the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), which the administration contends will create additional jobs overall but may dislocate some workers.

The president promised Congress that he would submit a plan to retrain workers displaced by increased trade with Mexico when he persuaded Congress in the spring of 1991 to give him authority to negotiate the free trade pact and have it ratified under a special "fast track" procedure that bars amendments and delaying tactics.

The youth training program is similar to one favored by Clinton and a bipartisan group of senators, including David L. Boren (D-Okla.), Harris Wofford (D-Pa.), Robert J. Dole (R-Kan.) and John Warner (R-Va.).

Boren called the president's program "a step in the right direction," but said it needs to be broadened "to include a Depression-era Civilian Conservation Corps approach for youths that need to learn good work habits before they can succeed in job training."

Campaigning here in the Naugatuck River Valley of south-central Connecticut, where the departure of mills and other manufacturers has pushed unemployment above the state's level of 7.1 percent, Bush presented himself as a native son.

"My dad was a senator from this state," he said. "We grew up down the way," in Greenwich. But Bush said he empathized with the troubled times, and referring to a local clergyman who noted in his benediction that it was an area "taunted by our closed factories and office buildings," added, "We're in choppy waters. I heard the reverend. I know it. people that are hurting and can't find jobs when they need it."

Quayle Revels In Crowds, 4 Years Later

Republican Tries Out Death Penalty Issue

By David Von Drehle
Washington Post Staff Writer

MARYVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 24—Vice President Quayle is having the time of his life on the campaign trail, basking in the cheers of sympathetic crowds, flinging miniature footballs and flying discs from the steps of picturesque courthouses, skating lightly over the issues, whacking merrily at Democrats and straw men, happy to be four years removed from some of the worst days of his life.

Lifted from near-obscurity to run with George Bush in 1988, Quayle was on the verge of political disaster at this point in the last election. While campaign strategists pondered whether to put him off the road, Quayle staggered from one stop to the next wearing the big-eyed stare of a deer caught in the headlights.

Now he wears an easy grin, shirtsleeves and a loosened tie. Sometimes during a speech he puts his hand on his hip and people can't help but notice how slim Quayle is, not to mention his tan and his clear eyes. He can still seem somewhat wooden in any formal speaking, but he looks like an athlete and now when he speaks informally, he sounds like one.

"I don't know about you, but I'm fired up for this campaign and we are going to win!" he shouted over a cheering crowd here today. And then he winged a few blue Frisbee-style discs from the stage.

Last time around, the Bush campaign seemed to be wrapping Quayle in a blanket of handlers and feeding him a pablum of soft speeches. Now Quayle travels with his own people and serves as occasional point man for the president, probing lines of attack for possible ads and mines.

He explored one such path today during a visit to a police academy in Knoxville, Tenn. Quayle charged Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton with being soft on the death penalty. Republicans have made hay of this issue in past years, but it comes a bit unexpectedly this time. Clinton, as governor of Arkansas, has ordered the execution of four men, including two this year.

With the standard photo-op phalanx of police officers posing behind him, Quayle said, "Let's look at the record. . . . Bill Clinton said that he is for capital punishment. Yet he said that one of his first Supreme Court appointments would be New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who is an outright opponent of capital punishment. You can't have it both ways."

It was an audacious gambit, a measure, perhaps, of how much confidence and leeway Quayle has gained as a campaigner since 1988. His statement seemed a hopeless logical tangle, and his staff had tried

The Vice President

Arkansan Portrayed As Soft

By KEVIN SACK
Special to The New York Times

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Aug. 24 — Vice President Dan Quayle suggested today that Gov. Bill Clinton, who has signed four death warrants, was soft on capital punishment because he had mentioned Gov. Mario M. Cuomo as a possible appointee to the Supreme Court. The New York Governor has vetoed death penalty bills in each of the 10 years he has been in office.

At the same time, Mr. Quayle said, support for the death penalty should not be a litmus test in the selection of Supreme Court Justices. But when asked at a news conference in Knoxville, Tenn., why it was then bothersome that Mr. Clinton might name a death penalty opponent to the High Court, Mr. Quayle would only say that he was trying to make a point about Mr. Clinton's consistency.

"His party is divided on this issue," Mr. Quayle said. "So Bill Clinton says, 'Well, I'm for capital punishment but, by the way, those of you who oppose capital punishment, be reminded that one of my first appointments would be somebody like Mario Cuomo, if not Mario Cuomo, and of course you all know that he's an outright opponent of the death penalty.' It's having it both ways. That's why he has the name Slick Willie."

George Stephanopoulos, Mr. Clinton's communications director, dismissed the comments as "just more silliness from Dan Quayle."

"Governor Clinton is the only candidate in the race who has carried out the death penalty, and Dan Quayle's just trying to create an issue where none exists," he said.

Mr. Quayle made his remarks in front of Knoxville's police academy before a backdrop of uniformed officers, a setting that has become a political advance man's cliche. His mission was to elevate crime as an issue in a campaign that has been dominated by debates on the economy and values.

The Vice President cited Justice Department statistics showing that per capita crime rates in Arkansas had increased during Mr. Clinton's tenure and that they had increased more significantly than in the country as a whole.

Mr. Quayle also campaigned today in Newport News, where he told shipyard workers that the Democrats would "take a meat ax" to national defense.

Vice President Dan Quayle sought to raise crime as a campaign issue yesterday by criticizing Gov. Bill Clinton's record on capital punishment. Mr. Quayle made his remarks against a backdrop of uniformed police officers in Knoxville, Tenn.

Two hours after President Bush told cheering veterans here he was a ''proud member of the American Legion,'' Bill Clinton took the same stage Tuesday to defend his maneuvering to avoid serving in the Vietnam War.

Confronting an issue that has plagued him since February - and which Bush's aides have targeted in the fall - Clinton urged veterans not to reject him because he didn't fight.

''I hope you will not base your vote on the fact that I didn't serve in Vietnam 23 years ago,'' Clinton told the Legion convention. ''This campaign must be on the future.''

Bush, wearing his own medal-bedecked Legion cap on stage, didn't mention Clinton's draft record, but reminded veterans of ''the bond we share'' and his naval aviation career.

Bush also defended his decision to end the gulf war with Saddam Hussein still in power: ''We are not in the slaughter business.''

Today, he's expected to announce the United States, Britain and France will impose a no-fly zone on southern Iraq.

Clinton told the veterans if he had gotten a low draft lottery number he'd have served.

''But I won't lie to you,'' he said. ''I was relieved when I saw my number was 311, not because I didn't want to serve my country but because I believed so strongly that our policy in Vietnam was wrong.''

Bush Criticizes Clinton as Hard On Car Industry

Says Many Would Lose Jobs Under Democrats

By RICHARD L. BERKE
Special to The New York Times

CANTON, Mich., Aug. 25 — President Bush ventured into the backyard of the American automobile industry today to depict his Democratic rivals as environmental extremists whose policies would throw hundreds of thousands of Michigan residents out of work.

Under rain clouds at an outdoor rally in this township that is home to both auto workers and affluent executives, Mr. Bush strongly criticized Gov. Bill Clinton's support of a proposal to raise automobile fuel efficiency standards to 40 miles a gallon by the turn of the century from the current 27.5. He also contended that the governor had started with a bad environmental record in Arkansas and then moved too far in the other direction.

"He's gone all the way over from that lousy record now to becoming bright green," Mr. Bush told thousands of cheering supporters at the Canton Township Heritage Park west of Detroit. "He's turned that bright, and if Clinton has his way, Michigan auto workers are going to be turning green with illness."

Citing figures from a motor vehicle industry group, Mr. Bush said that in Michigan alone 40,000 workers would go from the assembly line to the unemployment line if we go from those ridiculous standards.

Going After Gore Book

Acknowledging that he does not usually single out Senator Al Gore of Tennessee, Mr. Clinton's running mate, Mr. Bush said he could not help himself. While Mr. Clinton has praised Mr. Gore's best-selling book, "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit," Mr. Bush recited passages from it that he said were distressing.

Ridiculing this famous book now that Governor Clinton talks about, the President went on: "On page 125 of the book, he makes an interesting comparison. He says that the automobile industry — and I quote right here quote, 'poses a mortal threat to the security of every nation' that is more deadly than that of any militant enemy we've ever even likely to confront. That is Mr. Clinton's running mate talking about the auto industry that means so much to our country."

Mocking Mr. Gore's book, Mr. Bush then said: "And one page later, he calls for the elimination of the internal combustion engine. What kind of people are we dealing with here?"

In a telephone interview from Utah, where he was campaigning, Mr. Gore chuckled when told that the President was reciting from his book.

"This is simply one more attempt by the Bush political machine to divert attention from its total economic and environmental failure," he said. "What the auto industry needs is not political posturing but a strong economy and money in the pockets of consumers, who can then buy those new cars and trucks."

Mr. Gore also ridiculed Mr. Bush's figures about jobs, saying he was using the same tactic with 200,000 jobs that he used with 100,000 jobs in his speech to the Republican National Convention.

"The Bush campaign is down to lying about the environment," Mr. Gore said. "It's not working, it's not credible, and it's not going to help Mr. Bush and Mr. Quayle against Bill Clinton and Al Gore."

The Bush campaign team has been trying to portray Mr. Clinton as a liberal who is out of the mainstream. Mr. Bush, during a speech to the Republican National Convention last week, described the Democratic platform as "the most radical platform of the left in this century." He said Democrats "have given control of the party to the left wing."

Mr. Clinton has responded by saying that Mr. Bush has run the most negative campaign in modern history.

Turning to international affairs, Mr. Bush pressed on: "You want to stand up to a Saddam Hussein, Governor Clinton waffled. Congressman Ford said, no way. I say yes."

In another attack on the Democrats, Marlin Maddoux, the deputy campaign manager, distributed to reporters a four-page pamphlet entitled "Clinton's Tax and Spend Record." The paper was a defense of the record of the Bush campaign's claims of supported state tax increases under Governor Clinton. It also attacked other things that was actively opposed by the Governor of Arkansas in his state.

Bush Calls Clinton Threat to Auto Jobs

In Michigan, President Cites Democrats' Stand on Fuel Efficiency

By Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writer

CANTON, Mich., Aug. 25—President Bush today accused Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton of transforming himself from a threat to the environment into an extremist in support of it, telling a rally that his Democratic rival had become a "bright green" environmentalist whose policies would cost thousands of jobs in the automotive industry.

Banging his fist on the lectern, Bush attacked a proposal now in Congress—and supported by Clinton and his running mate, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. (Tenn.)—to raise automobile fuel efficiency standards to 40 miles per gallon by the year 2001. He said that in Michigan alone "40,000 workers would go from the assembly line to the unemployment line" if the standards were enacted.

Campaign aides distributed a briefing paper that said the standards would "cost thousands of lives in traffic collisions" because cars would have to be lighter and would jeopardize between 150,000 and 300,000 jobs. The source of the job loss estimate was the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association, the trade association for U.S. automakers.

Bush supports keeping the standards at the current level of 27.5 miles per gallon, a position he hopes will win him votes in this critical state, where the automobile industry has been foundering in recent years and which has one of the highest unemployment rates in the country.

Citing reports of Clinton's environmental record in Arkansas, Bush said, "He's gone all the way over from that lousy record now to becoming bright green. He's turned that bright and if Clinton has his way Michigan auto workers are going to be turning green with illness."

The legislative proposal attacked by Bush is intended to cut U.S. imports of foreign oil and to reduce tailpipe emissions of carbon dioxide, the most important of the industrial gases blamed for global warming. According to proponents, the move to 40-miles-per-gallon cars would save 2 million barrels of oil per day by 2008 and eliminate 300 million tons of carbon dioxide—5 percent of emissions from all sources.

The economic impact of the efficiency standards has been a subject of fierce debate between the auto industry and energy experts. Opponents argue that tough standards hurt U.S. carmakers because their fleets consist of a higher percentage of large, less efficient models. They warn that if the standards are tightened, manufacturers would move more production of large cars overseas to maintain a fleet average for domestic production.

Bush supports the current 27.5 miles per gallon standard. The Democrats back a proposal for 40 miles per gallon by 2001.

Proponents counter that by the same logic, the production of small, more efficient cars would remain in this country, and since efficient cars have a brighter future than gas guzzlers, the auto labor force would be secure.

The United Auto Workers, with the most to win or lose on the issue, supports Clinton and improved fuel economy. "UAW workers aren't fooled by this transparent campaign ploy and we don't think other Americans will be either," UAW President Owen Bieber said of Bush's attack.

Clinton's communications director, George Stephanopoulos, disputed Bush's prediction that the higher standards would "throw American auto workers out of their jobs."

"The fact is, George Bush and his do-nothing economic policy have cost the people of Michigan and of all America jobs and wages and he's increased their taxes," he said.

After hitting Clinton on the fuel economy standards, Bush then turned his sights to Gore and "his famous book"—a reference to "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit" the vice presidential nominee's bestseller on the environment in which he states that "the automobile industry poses a mortal threat to the security of every nation that is more deadly than that of any military enemy we're ever again likely to confront."

"That is Clinton's running mate talking about the auto industry that means so much to our country," Bush said. One page later, Bush said, Gore calls for the elimination of the internal combustion engine.

"What kind of people are we dealing with here?" Bush asked in mock disbelief. "It would be funny if it weren't so serious, if one of out of six jobs in America today weren't in some way tied to the automobile industry, and if this philosophy of tax and spend, regulate and regulate, wasn't going to make it impossible for us to win the economic competition."

Gore said in an interview today that "we can pretend that the way to a strong economy is trashing the environment, but we're kidding ourselves. If that were true, Eastern Europe would be an economic powerhouse."

Contending that 250,000 auto jobs have been lost in the past 12 years of Republican administrations, Gore said that "one of the reasons is that we've faced competition from more fuel efficient cars. The idea that it's going to be 25 miles per gallon forever, while Japan and Europe are introducing cars that get 60 miles per gallon, is absurd."

Bush today fulfilled his pledge to name names of members of "the Clinton-Gore gridlock Congress" who had stood in his path, this time blasting the local congressman, Rep. William D. Ford (D).

"I'm a little tired of congressmen that talk one way in Michigan and vote different in Washington," Bush said. He assailed Ford's positions on the administration's education overhaul proposal, the Persian Gulf War, congressional term limits and the balanced-budget amendment.

Quayle Sells Message By Land, Sea and Air

By KEVIN SACK
Special to The New York Times

HIGH POINT, N.C., Aug. 25 — Trains, planes and automobiles. Such has been the life of Vice President Dan Quayle, who has tried a different mode of transportation in each of his last three days of campaigning across the South.

On Sunday, it was a custom-fitted bus, rolling through the flatlands and tourist traps of central Florida. On Monday, he flew to Knoxville, Tenn., and Newport News, Va., where, incidentally, he spoke before the backdrop of a cargo ship.

Today it was a locomotive. Continuing the Republican effort to evoke the imagery of Harry S. Truman, Mr. Quayle boarded the Doris, a 75-year-old Pullman dining car, and took a whistle-stop tour that began in Charlotte and rolled through Salisbury, Lexington and High Point, N.C.

"Next we're going to have him do a wing walk on a crop-duster," said one Quayle aide.

Any vehicle will do, it seems, if it helps showcase what the Vice President's aides call "the New Dan Quayle." Having raised his approval ratings at the Republican National Convention, Mr. Quayle is now drawing confidence from the crowds of more than 1,000 people that meet him at each stop.

His schedulers have largely kept him in safe environs — small, conservative towns where his message on "family values" is well received and where a Vice President is certain to attract a large and respectful crowd.

Whether the public sees a new Dan Quayle is an open issue. Even those who come to hear him offer differing opinions.

"He did a great job at the convention," said Michelle M. Waeth, a 32-year-old mother of two who was standing trackside in Salisbury. "I think he came out strong and I think he's right that the media's for Bill Clinton."

Others say they note little change and attribute whatever improvement they see to Mr. Quayle's handlers.

"They've got them a pretty face for the White House," said Frank Boyd, a Republican from Salisbury who said he would vote for Gov. Bill Clinton. "If you've got enough people around you to tell you what to say and how to say it and how to act, sooner or later you've got to look good."

Taxes Under Attack

Mr. Quayle's job, in addition to reducing negative views of himself, is to help President Bush keep Mr. Clinton on the defensive.

Today's line of attack was taxes, an issue that Mr. Quayle hits hard while stretching the facts about Mr. Clinton's record and public statements.

"He's said that as President, I'm going to raise income taxes $150 billion," Mr. Quayle said at each stop. "He has a training tax increase. He's got a health-care tax increase. They're now talking about raising taxes on minerals, on home heating oil, on gasoline, on wood, on paper. You name it, they're talking about taxing it."

"Now I know why Bill Clinton likes football so much. When he hears the quarterback say hike, he thinks of taxes."

Mr. Clinton has, in fact, proposed raising income taxes on individuals who earn more than $150,000 and couples who earn more than $200,000, as well as raising the alternative minimum tax. But the Clinton campaign contends those taxes will raise $83 billion, not $150 billion, and they say that Mr. Quayle disregards the offsetting effect of a proposed tax cut for the middle class, an earned-income tax credit, and a research and development tax credit.

Mr. Quayle's reference to a training tax concerns a Clinton proposal to levy a 1.5 percent tax on companies with more than 50 workers that do not already invest 1.5 percent of their payroll costs in training. The taxes on fuel, wood and paper refer to suggestions made by Mr. Clinton's running mate, Senator Al Gore, in his book "Earth in the Balance." Mr. Clinton has not embraced those proposals.

Nonetheless, the Clinton campaign has been forced to respond to Mr. Quayle's accusations. And it is difficult for the rebuttal to compete for time on the evening news with pictures of Mr. Quayle waving from the bunting-draped platform of a classic train. "They're playing on our turf now," said Jim Pitts, a political aide to Mr. Quayle.

A Bash for the Press

Mr. Quayle excels at press bashing, and he has made that favored political pastime a central component of his campaign for rehabilitation.

He got laughs earlier this month at the Ohio State Fair, where bungee jumping was all the rage, by suggesting that the national reporters take a leap.

On the way to his limousine from a fund-raising event here, Mr. Quayle made a surprise inspection of the reporters who were lounging in the comfort of an air-conditioned bus. "We're taking too good care of you," he said with a smile. "We're spending too much."

When a reporter suggested that he needed to "take good care of your props," Mr. Quayle responded, "I want you to look beleaguered and hassled and haggard, beaten down."

Like Clockwork

Lest anyone think the Republicans allow room for spontaneity in an average campaign day, here is an excerpt from the official schedule for Mr. Quayle's appearance with R. Jack Hawke, chairman of the North Carolina Republican Party.

9 A.M. — The Vice President arrives Victory II train platform and remains standing.

9:10 A.M. — The Vice President proceeds to stand-up microphone and begins brief remarks.

9:15 A.M. — The Vice President concludes remarks and remains standing.

Mr. Hawke signals "All Aboard."

9:20 — The Vice President proceeds to board Victory II.

BODY:

The spirit of President Truman lives on in the 1992 presidential campaign.

The folksy wisdom of the 1948 presidential winner has been quoted by both sides. And Tuesday, Vice President Quayle took a Trumanesque whistlestop train trip across North Carolina, drawing cheers from hundreds of people who lined the railroad tracks in Charlotte, Salisbury, Lexington and High Point.

Quayle stood on a bunting-draped back platform and repeated the Republican refrain that Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton had raised taxes at home and would do it in Washington.

''He's said that as president, 'I'm going to raise taxes $ 150 billion,' '' Quayle said in Lexington. ''He's got a training tax increase. He's got a health care tax increase. ... You name it, they're talking about taxing it.''

The Clinton campaign contends President Bush and Quayle are distorting Clinton's record in Arkansas - that they're counting some fee hikes more than once, citing some federally required increases, and ignoring dozens of taxes and fees he has cut. They say Arkansans enjoy the second lowest per-capita tax burden in the country.

Clinton has proposed raising income tax rates on the wealthy - individuals making more than $ 150,000 and couples above $ 200,000 - but says he would lower taxes on the middle class. He also backs a 1.5% retraining tax on companies that are not already training their workers. And he has endorsed the idea of making companies that fail to provide health insurance pay an unspecified tax to cover a government-run insurance pool.

Also Tuesday, Democratic vice presidential nominee Al Gore toured a supercomputer center in Columbus, Ohio, and used the occasion to ridicule Bush's new job-training proposal, saying it was ''designed to save only two jobs'' - those of Bush and Quayle.

Gore called the Bush job training and apprenticeship program, proposed Monday in Connecticut, a ''foxhole conversion,'' adding, ''The thing about a foxhole conversion this close to the election is that you can't trust them to follow through. They've made so many promises.''

Clinton and Gore resume their own mode of campaign travel Thursday. The latest leg of their meet-the-voters bus excursion leaves from San Antonio. Under a preliminary schedule, the caravan will travel through Austin, Waco,

HEADLINE: Quayle Blasts 'Tax Hike Bill Clinton' on Carolina Whistlestop

BYLINE: By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL, Associated Press Writer

DATELINE: HIGH POINT, N.C.

KEYWORD: Quayle

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle, on an old-fashioned whistlestop train trip across North Carolina, ripped into "Tax Hike Bill Clinton" Tuesday and depicted Arkansas as a land of high taxes and low incomes.

Quayle drew cheers from hundreds of people who lined the railroad tracks in Charlotte, Salisbury, Lexington and High Point. The vice president rode on the Doris, a luxury Pullman car built 75 years ago for tobacco magnate James B. Duke and named for his daughter.

As regularly as the whistle that blew at every stop, Quayle stood on a bunting-draped back platform and repeated the Republican refrain that Clinton had raised taxes at home and would do it in Washington.

"He's said that as president, 'I'm going to raise taxes $ 150 billion. He's got a training tax increase. He's got a health care tax increase,' Quayle said in Lexington.

"They're now talking about raising taxes on minerals, home heating oil, on gasoline, on wood, on paper. You name it, they're talking about taxing it," Quayle said.

The Clinton campaign contends President Bush and Quayle are distorting the governor's record in Arkansas, ignoring dozens of taxes and fees he has cut. They say Arkansans enjoy the second lowest per capita tax burden in the country.

Not according to Quayle.

In an interview with The Associated Press as his two-car train rolled between Charlotte and Salisbury, Quayle said Arkansas ranks near the bottom in per capita income "because the tax burden is so darn high."

"Look, he's raised taxes a lot," the vice president said. "He's got a tax hike plank in his platform. Tax hike Bill will raise your taxes, you can be sure of that."

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Quayle based his contention that Clinton favors all manner of environmental taxes on proposals from a recent book, "Earth in the Balance," by Clinton's running mate, Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., an ardent environmentalist.

Quayle dismissed the idea that Clinton has not personally espoused taxes on carbon, paper, minerals and other products.

"Let him repudiate his vice presidential tax proposals," said Quayle. "If he wants to reject them, fine, but to my knowledge he hasn't."

Clinton has proposed raising income tax rates on the wealthy - individuals making above $ 150,000 and couples above $ 200,000 - but says he would lower taxes on the middle class. He also backs a 1.5 percent retraining tax on companies that are not already training their workers. And he has endorsed the idea of making companies that fail to provide health insurance pay an unspecified tax to cover a government-run insurance pool.

At every stop Tuesday, Quayle repeated the Republican contention that Clinton "has raised taxes and fees 128 times" in Arkansas.

The Democrats have accused Bush and Quayle of knowingly repeating false information with that line. The 128 figure is a count of the lines on a party list of tax increases, despite the fact that descriptions of some of the increases take up more than one line. In addition, the list includes many state fees raised because of federal mandates.

Quayle was encouraged on his Southern swing by a new Mason-Dixon poll that indicated Clinton's once formidable lead in North Carolina has shrunk to 48-44, a virtual tie.

"It's dead even. We've already come from 20 points behind in North Carolina," Quayle crowed. North Carolina has voted Republican in every presidential contest since 1968 except 1976, when it went narrowly for Jimmy Carter, a Georgian.

"Ronald Reagan and George Bush saved us in 1980" by defeating Carter, "and we're not going to turn the clock back," Quayle said at the Salisbury stop.

Quayle, at a later stop in Columbia, S.C. , expropriated Gore's favorite line and got a crowd of 300 people chanting about Congress, "It's time for them to go!" He raised the specter of another Carter administration and promised, "We will never let a Democratic president and Democratic Congress team up again."

Bush Assails Clinton on Trade Policy

Plan to Raise Taxes On Foreign Firms Would 'Destroy Jobs'

By David S. Broder
Washington Post Staff Writer

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 27—President Bush, in an attack on the motives and trade policies of his Democratic rival, charged today that Bill Clinton's "opportunism" is playing to "the darker impulses" of the American people by creating fears of foreign competition.

In an address to employees of a company that exports much of the safety equipment it manufactures, Bush criticized Clinton's proposal to collect billions more in taxes from foreign-owned companies in the United States. That would invite retaliation, Bush said, and "literally destroy jobs, discourage investment and . . . threaten to start an economic war" of the kind that preceded the Great Depression.

"By attacking the bogeymen of foreign investors, Governor Clinton hopes to exploit the darker impulses of this uncertain age—fear of the future, fear of the unknown, fear of foreigners," Bush said.

Bush said Clinton has a reputation "as the kind of guy who will say anything, do anything for political gain." But, "those are American workers he's putting at risk," Bush said. "The American people simply won't buy it. The proudest people on Earth have never stooped to fearmongers before, and we must not stoop to fearmongers now."

Countered Clinton spokesman George Stephanopoulos: "The only thing the American people have to fear is four more years of lower wages, higher taxes and fewer jobs under George Bush."

He charged that under the Bush administration, "companies get a tax break to shift jobs overseas and callous foreign firms pay no taxes at all."

Bush criticized Clinton in a morning address to employees of Public Safety Equipment Inc., a suburban

St. Louis firm that sells more than one-third of its emergency vehicle warning equipment in overseas markets. Later, Bush told workers at a Findlay, Ohio, plant, "We need a policy that creates jobs, not a tax machine that spits out pink slips."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today's speeches were the first in the campaign to which new Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and his deputy Robert Zoellick made major contributions. "Today was the first to bring it all together," Fitzwater said, adding that "we wanted to toughen them [the speeches] up" and "be more concise on the differences" between Bush and his opponent.

Clinton's proposal to boost taxes on foreign-owned firms by $45 billion in four years is a central piece of his deficit-reduction plan. It rests on studies by the House Ways and Means Committee suggesting that multinational firms are avoiding U.S. taxes by such devices as setting arbitrarily low prices on foreign-made parts they ship into the United States for final assembly.

"Governor Clinton says his tax increase will crack down on foreign companies," Bush said. "But that crackdown is more like an eviction notice. And when those companies pack their bags, they'll take their jobs with them."

A fact sheet distributed by the Bush campaign quoted industry and administration economists as warning that such an approach to "transfer pricing" would, as Bush warned, invite retaliation by other countries and set off a trade war.

Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director, said it was "a total red herring" to call Clinton's proposal a new tax. He said that "illegal 'transfer pricing'" allows "70 percent of the 46,000 foreign-owned firms to pay no U.S. taxes. "All we're saying is, 'Apply the law.'"

As for retaliation threats, Stephanopoulos said, "Gov. Clinton has been very aggressive in seeking foreign investment, but he will not be a patsy to illegal practices."

Bush raised a second issue by arguing that "protectionist Democrats" in Congress want to subvert the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) with Canada and Mexico by imposing a "transaction tax" on shipments across the U.S.-Mexican border.

"They think the way to eliminate trade barriers is to build a new trade barrier," he scoffed.

The proposal for a transaction tax has been advanced by House Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt (D-Mo.) as a way to finance environmental cleanup along the border and provide assistance to displaced workers. Stephanopoulos said Clinton has not endorsed the Gephardt proposal, nor has he taken a position on NAFTA.

Clinton supported the free trade agreement "in principle" early in the campaign, but under pressure from unions opposed to the pact, he has said he will await congressional hearings next month before deciding if it has sufficient protections for workers and the environment.

Bush ridiculed Clinton's hesitancy today, saying his rival has "hemmed and hawed . . . I guess as a candidate you can be on both sides of every question, but as a president you cannot. You have to make the tough decisions."

The trade and export speeches continued a focus on economic issues that began on Monday with Bush's announcement of a repackaged and more expensive campaign program. Commenting on news reports that the campaign had decided to tone down the enthusiastic rhetoric that marked Bush's swing through the South after the Republican National Convention, Fitzwater insisted that "we'll continue to talk about family values."

In a reshuffle of campaign responsibilities, Fitzwater announced that former commerce secretary Robert A. Mosbacher would shift his fund-raising efforts from the Bush-Quayle reelection committee to the Republican National Committee.

As general chairman of the campaign, Mosbacher, an old friend of the president, was nominally the superior of campaign chairman Robert M. Teeter, but in fact he focused on raising money. As campaign political director Mary Matalin said, "He does that better than anybody else in the party."

He now becomes "general chairman—finance" of the RNC, a title that is equivalent to that given Samuel K. Skinner when he was replaced as White House chief of staff by Bush.

HEADLINE: Fired-up president roars back // Says his opponent fuels fear

BYLINE: Judy Keen

DATELINE: FINDLAY, Ohio

KEYWORD: BUSH RE-ELECTION: BUSH EMPLOYMENT

BODY:

Capping his first week since the GOP convention and a campaign that's still struggling to find its equilibrium, President Bush aimed his toughest attack yet at Bill Clinton Thursday.

Bush - echoing a phrase first used by Clinton - suggested that his Democratic opponent was a ''fearmonger'' whose protectionist policies would put U.S. jobs at risk.

A preview of the fall campaign, it was Bush's first speech that bore the mark of his new chief of staff James Baker.

Clinton's plan to raise $ 45 billion by increasing taxes on profits of foreign-controlled firms would destroy millions of U.S. jobs and cause ''a worldwide contraction,'' Bush told workers in St. Louis.

''By attacking the bogeyman of foreign investors, Gov. Clinton hopes to exploit the darker impulses of this uncertain age - fear of the future, fear of the unknown, fear of foreigners,'' Bush said.

''Now, I know his reputation for opportunism, as the kind of guy who will say anything, do anything for political gain,'' Bush said of Clinton.

''But ... those are American jobs he's playing politics with,'' Bush said.

He added: ''The proudest people on earth have never stooped to fearmongers before, and we must not stoop now to fearmongers.''

Speaking to machine and tool workers here, Bush called Clinton's foreign investment tax ''a dangerous idea'' because it would invite retaliatory tariffs from other nations.

Clinton, campaigning in Texas, called Bush's accusations ''ridiculous.''

Clinton said he supports ''expanding trade and investment.''

Clinton aide George Stephanopoulos said he's ''not creating a new tax, he wants to enforce the law,'' and cited congressional testimony that 70% of foreign firms avoid all U.S. taxes.

Bush's St. Louis speech was the first one that Baker and his aides controlled, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters.

The ''Baker team has taken over'' and ''is trying to have a constant theme,'' Fitzwater said. ''Today was the first to bring it all together.''

Further evidence of Baker's clout: Thursday's announcement that general campaign chairman Robert Mosbacher has resigned to work at the Republican National Committee.

Mosbacher, ex-Commerce secretary, said he urged Baker to shift from the State Department to the White House.

''I said, 'If you do it, I'll do the fund-raising, I'll do anything.' ''

If Thursday's Bush rhetoric was any indication of Baker's plans, the rest of the campaign will be bruising and intense.

In the week since the Republican convention, Bush has been on the road every day, visiting 12 states.

- He veered from abrasive attacks on Clinton to somberly outlining a new job training program.

- He bolted to Florida and Louisiana to inspect hurricane damage.

- And he orchestrated a challenge of Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

In Dallas and at the Illinois State Fair last weekend, Bush echoed the convention's family values themes - noting the Democratic platform never mentioned God - then skittered away from them. Family values reappeared Thursday.

At a Cincinnati rally, Bush said, ''Some people don't like it when I talk about family values - well, they'd better get used to it. ... The family is the foundation of America.''

But none of that seemed to boost Bush in most polls beyond the meager ''bounce'' he got after the convention.

The week's goal was ''to build on the momentum of the convention and continue to highlight the contrast between the president's approach to creating jobs and building the economy to his opponent's program of increasing taxes and spending,'' said Bush campaign manager Fred Malek.

But while Bush did discuss how he differs with Clinton on trade policies, the president has not described how his tax cut plan would work. He seems more comfortable on the attack than in fleshing out his own second-term ideas.

Thursday, Bush urged voters: ''Please elect me to keep the integrity and honor of that White House.''

Bush Says Clinton Is Playing To Voters' Economic Fears

By MICHAEL WINES
Special to The New York Times

FINDLAY, Ohio, Aug. 27 — President Bush hammered away at Gov. Bill Clinton's political positions today, charging on a Midwestern campaign trek that his rival's foreign trade policies would destroy jobs and investment and trigger a "worldwide contraction" in economic growth.

Speaking to workers at a factory in St. Louis and at a new industrial park in Findlay, the President likened Mr. Clinton to a "fear monger" who is playing to voters' economic anxieties by proposing to hamstring foreign competitors.

"I don't have to ask you to go back to the history books, but there was an occasion when that happened, right before the Great Depression," Mr. Bush said. "And we're fighting our way out of a tough recession now, and we don't need to throw more Americans out of work."

Quick Response From Clinton

The Clinton campaign responded quickly with its own brusque attack on Mr. Bush's economic stewardship.

"Bill Clinton just believes we can do better than the no-growth, no-jobs policies of George Bush," said George Stephanopoulos, the Democratic candidate's communications director. "All George Bush wants to do is cut taxes for the rich."

To find joblessness and privation, Mr. Stephanopoulos suggested, "You don't have to go back 50 years — you only have to go back three and one half."

By many measures, Mr. Bush has presided over the slowest rate of economic growth since the Depression in the 1930's.

The President's remarks were the climax of a week of speech making that has struggled to shift that aura of economic failure from the White House to Mr. Clinton and the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Sharpening the Differences

After months of vague and often emotional political appeals, this Midwestern swing began what Bush aides said would be a sustained effort to sharpen the differences between the President and Mr. Clinton on central issues from taxes to the environment.

The attack on Mr. Clinton's trade policies brought into relief one of the sharpest distinctions between the two candidates. Mr. Bush maintains that he can restore the nation's economic health by lowering taxes and reducing trade barriers, creating export-related jobs here.

Mr. Clinton also says he supports greater foreign trade, but he has also complained that some foreign nations have an unfair edge over American workers, and that foreign companies should pay more taxes to support American job-training programs.

Under pressure from traditionally Democratic labor unions, Mr. Clinton has declined to endorse an agreement reached this month by the Bush Administration to create a free-trade zone embracing Canada, the United States and Mexico. The unions contend that the agreement will cause a loss of American factory jobs as some companies move to Mexico.

90,000 PEROT SIGNATURES

Ross Perot's supporters submitted 90,000 signatures in an effort to get him on the New York ballot. Page B4

Mr. Clinton's budget proposals assume an additional $38 billion over four years in higher tax revenue from foreign companies that build or buy plants and offices in the United States.

Gene B. Sperling, Mr. Clinton's director for economic issues, said the Democratic nominee has called for tougher collection of existing taxes but has not explicitly endorsed the adoption of any new legislation.

"The aim and intention is not to increase taxes," Mr. Sperling said. "The aim and intention is to make people pay what they owe."

Mr. Bush criticized both of Mr. Clinton's positions today on a three-city tour in Missouri and Ohio. He said Democratic policies would not save jobs, but would drive both foreign and domestic companies out of business and start new trade wars.

The President's most bitter attack came in St. Louis, in a speech to about 1,000 workers at an emergency light-and-siren factory. There, he initially drew polite applause but won a long standing ovation after an attack on Mr. Clinton's policies.

> 'We don't need to throw more Americans out of work.'

'A Worldwide Contraction'

"Governor Clinton says his tax increase will crack down on foreign companies," Mr. Bush said. "But that crackdown is more like an eviction notice. And when those companies pack their bags, they'll take those jobs with them. His tax would not only destroy jobs and reduce investment here, it would do the same throughout the global economy, causing a worldwide contraction."

In one of his most pointed attacks, the President said he knows Mr. Clinton's reputation is that of an "opportunist — as the kind of guy who will say anything, do anything for political gain."

"But he should understand what's at stake here," Mr. Bush continued. "And if he doesn't understand, let me tell him. These are American jobs he's playing politics with."

In what seemed to signal a round of attacks on Mr. Clinton's political credibility, Mr. Bush also accused Mr. Clinton twice today of trying to straddle both sides of controversial issues, using quotations from his opponent's own public remarks to make his point.

In St. Louis, the President ridiculed Mr. Clinton's refusal either to endorse or oppose the free-trade pact. And later, at a rally in downtown Cincinnati, Mr. Bush accused his rival of backpedaling on a proposal to raise fuel-efficiency standards for automobiles.

CAMPAIGN '92

Quayle: Gore Has 'Hysterical' Views on Environment

Senator's Best-Selling Book, 'Earth in the Balance,' Becomes Republican Target

By Michael Isikoff
Washington Post Staff Writer

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 28—Vice President Quayle today charged that his Democratic opponent, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. (Tenn.), has espoused "bizarre" and "hysterical" environmental views that could decimate the U.S. auto industry and cost millions of American jobs.

Speaking to the Economic Club of Grand Rapids, Quayle read from "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit," Gore's best selling book on the environment. Quayle said Gore, in the book, likened civilization to "a dysfunctional family" estranged from Mother Earth, which Quayle called "a sad and strange outlook on the world."

"Cars are a 'mortal threat' to our nation; the internal combustion engine must be eliminated," Quayle said, reading from Gore's book. "It's all pretty bizarre stuff. That's their manifesto." He continued, "This is a view detached from reality and devoid of common sense. . . . Their manifesto is called 'Earth in the Balance,' but the real issue today is jobs in the balance."

Gore writes that the automobile's "cumulative impact on the global environment is posing a mortal threat to the security of every nation . . ." and that a "strategic goal" should be "eliminating the internal combustion engine over, say, a 25 year period."

Quayle's speech was the latest attempt by the Bush campaign to depict Democratic nominee Bill Clinton and his running mate as environmental zealots, a tactic GOP officials say will be a centerpiece of the Republican campaign in midwestern industrial states.

Earlier in the week, President Bush visited Michigan and charged that Clinton's proposal to raise automobile efficiency standards to 40 miles per gallon would cost the state 40,000 jobs. Democrats vigorously dispute the claim, which Republicans have repeated in full page newspaper ads statewide.

Quayle's attack on Gore was made three weeks after Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William K. Reilly said Gore had "done some important things" for the environment, adding, "I don't think he's an environmental extremist."

Asked about the vice president's comments today, Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos said, "The remarks are not stupid but not surprising, coming from Dan Quayle."

The Clinton campaign also released a detailed statement from Gore describing the Bush administration's environmental record as "little more than photo opportunities" and "a Hollywood set. Look behind it and there's nothing there except back room operations to take care of Bush's and Quayle's rich friends and polluters."

Quayle sought today to keep the focus on what he charged were the economic dangers of Clinton and Gore's environmental proposals. Touring a Detroit robotics factory with Gov. John Engler (R), Quayle told workers that by weighing in on the competing claims of the environment and the economy, "We're the ones that are giving top priority to people and jobs."

Earlier, Quayle's staff distributed a state by state analysis of "jobs at risk" from Clinton's proposal to increase automobile fuel efficiency standards as well as an 11 page critique of Gore's book. Asked if Quayle had read the book, the vice president's press secretary, David Beckwith said, "I don't think he's gotten through it. He was certainly thumbing it."

HEADLINE: Quayle: Gore Has 'Hysterical' Views on Environment;
Senator's Best-Selling Book, 'Earth in the Balance,' Becomes Republican Target

SERIES: Occasional

BYLINE: Michael Isikoff, Washington Post Staff Writer

DATELINE: GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 28, 1992

BODY:

Vice President Quayle today charged that his Democratic opponent, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. (Tenn.), has espoused "bizarre" and "hysterical" environmental views that could decimate the U.S. auto industry and cost millions of American jobs.

Speaking to the Economic Club of Grand Rapids, Quayle read from "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit," Gore's best-selling book on the environment. Quayle said Gore, in the book, likened civilization to "a dysfunctional family" estranged from Mother Earth, which Quayle called "a sad and strange outlook on the world."

"Cars are a 'mortal threat' to our nation; the internal combustion engine must be eliminated," Quayle said, reading from Gore's book. "It's all pretty bizarre stuff. That's their manifesto." He continued, "This is a view detached from reality and devoid of common sense. . . . Their manifesto is called 'Earth in the Balance,' but the real issue today is jobs in the balance."

Gore writes that the automobile's "cumulative impact on the global environment is posing a mortal threat to the security of every nation . . . " and that a "strategic goal" should be "eliminating the internal combustion engine over, say, a 25-year period."

Quayle's speech was the latest attempt by the Bush campaign to depict Democratic nominee Bill Clinton and his running mate as environmental zealots, a tactic GOP aides say will be a centerpiece of the Republican campaign in midwestern industrial states.

Earlier in the week, President Bush visited Michigan and charged that Clinton's proposal to raise automobile efficiency standards to 40 miles per gallon would cost the state 40,000 jobs. Democrats vigorously dispute the claim, which Republicans have repeated in full-page newspaper ads statewide.

Quayle's attack on Gore was made three weeks after Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William K. Reilly said Gore had "done some important things" for the environment, adding, "I don't think he's an environmental extremist."

Asked about the vice president's comments today, Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos said, "The remarks are just stupid but not surprising, coming from Dan Quayle. "

The Clinton campaign also released a detailed statement from Gore describing the Bush administration's environmental record as "little more than photo opportunities" and "a Hollywood set. Look behind it and there's nothing there except back room operations to take care of Bush's and Quayle's rich friends and polluters."

Quayle sought today to keep the focus on what he charged were the economic dangers of Clinton and Gore's environmental proposals. Touring a Detroit robotics factory with Gov. John Engler (R), Quayle told workers that by weighing in on the competing claims of the environment and the economy, "We're the ones that are giving top priority to people and jobs."

Earlier, Quayle's staff distributed a state-by-state analysis of "jobs at risk" from Clinton's proposal to increase automobile fuel efficiency standards as well as an 11-page critique of Gore's book. Asked if Quayle had read the book, the vice president's press secretary, David Beckwith, said, "I don't think he's gotten through it. He was certainly thumbing it."

HEADLINE: Quayle Sees 'Bizarre' Environmental Ideas In Gore Book

BYLINE: By CHRIS CONNELL, Associated Press Writer

DATELINE: GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

KEYWORD: Quayle

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle turned book critic Friday, reading passages from Democrat Al Gore's environmental treatise with disdain and seeking to paint the Tennessee senator as an extremist.

Quayle said Gore's environmental ideas are "pretty bizarre stuff," including his call for eventually eliminating the internal combustion engines.

"America has the world's best environmental record, but that doesn't matter to Gore and other hard-core environmentalists," Quayle told 700 people at a luncheon of the Economic Club of Grand Rapids.

As President Bush did Tuesday in his own swing through this battleground industrial state, Quayle charged the Democrats could cost hundreds of thousands of auto workers their jobs by pushing for higher auto fuel efficiency standards.

Gore responded that the White House was "pointing the finger of blame with one hand and passing out pink slips with the other." The Democratic vice presidential candidate said Bush administration policies had resulted in the loss of 250,000 jobs in the auto industry, including 108,000 in Michigan, and another 600,000 jobs in related industries.

Quayle read snippets from Gore's recent best-seller "Earth In the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit." He said the book likened civilization to "a dysfunctional family' estranged from Mother Earth. "Theirs is a sad and strange outlook on the world," said Quayle.

"Cars are a 'mortal threat' to our nation; the internal combustion engine must be eliminated. It's all pretty bizarre stuff," Quayle said.

Gore states in the book that the automobile's "cumulative impact on the global environment is posing a mortal threat to the security of every nation that is more deadly than that of any military enemy we are ever again likely to confront."

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc

He also writes that "it ought to be possible to establish a coordinated global program to accomplish the strategic goal of completely eliminating the internal combustion engine over, say, a 25-year period."

Quayle said the U.S. environment is in better shape today than it was four years ago.

"We reject the idea that economic growth and ecological stability are necessary enemies," said Quayle. He added that, "as some on the other side see it, Earth is the victim and mankind the enemy."

Quayle repeated a similar line of reasoning at a Detroit -area factory later in the day. After touring a plant with Michigan Gov. John Engler in Fraser, Quayle announced the Defense Department was awarding a $ 300 million conversion contract to the Warren Tank Plant in Warren. The tank plant has produced its last M1-Abrams, and the new money will allow it be retrofitted to build a more advanced version of the tank.

Gore is a cosponsor of legislation that would raise average fuel efficiency standards from the current 27.5 miles a gallon to 40 miles a gallon by the year 2001. Clinton has embraced that goal and suggested a 45 mpg goal for 2020.

Quayle said the 40 mpg alone could wipe out up to 300,000 jobs. "I call that irresponsible," he said.

Quayle also defended the Bush record, saying the president achieved a far-reaching new Clean Air Act, declared waters off California, Florida and New England closed to offshore drilling and invested $ 1 billion in new parks and wildlife areas.

Gore, in a satellite TV interview from Texas to Detroit, said it was "an outrage for them, presiding over the loss of so many jobs in Michigan, to say four more years."

Gore said America's trade competitors were "looking for more efficient products in all industries."

"So we can take the same old approach that Bush and Quayle have offered, or we can take a different approach and create millions of new jobs by leading the way instead of protecting the old ways of the past and pretending that that's going to have a different result."

HEADLINE: Quayle Picks Fresh Fight With Hollywood

BYLINE: By JOHN KING, AP Political Writer

DATELINE: HUNTSVILLE, Ala.

KEYWORD: Quayle

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle picked a fresh fight with Hollywood on Monday, accusing the participants in TV's Emmy awards presentation of lying about his views toward single mothers.

"They said I attacked single mothers. That is a lie," Quayle told a small crowd that welcomed him to Alabama at the start of a three-day campaign swing. "They said that I believe single mothers and their children were not families. That is a lie."

Quayle was a frequent target of jokes during Sunday's nationally televised Emmy awards, as Hollywood returned fire for his criticism of TV character Murphy Brown's decision to have a child out of wedlock.

Quayle's retort was directed at the show's creator," Diane English, who addressed herself to single parents during the Emmy's program and said, "Don't let anyone tell you you're not a family."

Quayle rejoinder came as he began a campaign trip to small cities in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Missouri and Oklahoma. President Bush won all five states in 1988, all but Missouri handily, and Quayle's goal was to rally small-town conservative voters.

Missouri is a tossup this year, with Democrat Bill Clinton now favored. In addition, several of the Southern states, foundations of the Republican electoral base throughout the 1980s, are viewed a competitive because of the sour economy and the Democrats' all-Southern ticket.

"Alabama will be there, the South will be there and America will be there," Quayle told an airport crowd that consisted mainly of elementary schoolchildren well below voting age. "Because of your work, because of your dedication and because of your enthusiasm, we will win the election."

In criticizing "Murphy Brown," Quayle said the show and its lead character, played by actress Candice Bergen, were glorifying single parenthood in a way that discredited traditional family values. He has said repeatedly he was not criticizing single parents.

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Ms. Bergen thanked Quayle when she accepted her Emmy, and the vice president had this response when he landed in Huntsville: "Now Murphy Brown, listen closely because I'm only going to say it once: You owe me big time."

Then, after responding to the criticism he received during the program, Quayle said: "Hollywood doesn't like our values. Hollywood doesn't like our beliefs."

Quayle attended a fund-raiser in Alabama before speaking to employees at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center and then heading on to Mississippi and Georgia.

At the Huntsville airport, he repeated his assertion that electing Clinton would mean higher taxes. "Gov. Clinton thinks you create jobs by raising taxes," Quayle said. "You and I know you create jobs by cutting taxes, not raising taxes."

HEADLINE: QUAYLE TO MURPHY BROWN:'YOU OWE ME BIG TIME'

BYLINE: The Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger

DATELINE: COLUMBUS, Miss.

KEYWORD: POL- QUAYLE -BROWN: QUAYLE -BROWN

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle fired back at ''Murphy Brown'' Monday and told cheering supporters he deserves some of the credit for the TV show's Emmy Award.

''Murphy Brown, you owe me big time!'' Quayle said at a rally that packed about 2,000 flag-waving supporters into the Columbus High School East gymnasium.

''I don't need any lectures from Hollywood,'' Quayle told the crowd. ''Hollywood does not like our values and beliefs. I will continue to speak the truth for family values and will not back down,'' said Quayle, who made similar remarks during a stop in Huntsville, Ala., earlier Monday, Quayle had criticized the character played by Candice Bergen on the CBS show ''Murphy Brown'' for choosing to have a baby out of wedlock.

On Sunday's televised Emmy Awards, Quayle was the target of a barrage of jokes. Bergen herself said, ''I would like to thank the vice president ... and the members of the cultural elite.''

''Murphy Brown'' won the Emmy for best comedy, and Bergen won her second best-actress Emmy in the title role.

Quayle has been hammering ''Murphy Brown'' since March as a springboard to promote family values. Boosters said he is right on target.

''I hope he keeps it up and gets tougher if he needs to,'' said Jeanie Doss, 43, a retired Columbus school teacher and ''Murphy Brown'' viewer. On the Emmy Awards ''they did a good job of ridiculing him. They carried it too far.''

Columbus homemaker Joanne Beaty, 42, said the vice president is right to go after Murphy Brown. ''She glorifies the wrong values. That's not what I believe in.''

Quayle ''definitely helped them get an Emmy,'' Beaty said.

Quayle also criticized Democratic nominee Bill Clinton as a pro-tax governor in Arkansas, and blamed a 38-year Democratic reign in Congress for much of America's woes.

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Lisa Walker, executive director of the Clinton campaign in Mississippi, said the Quayle trip to GOP faithful in Columbus is part of GOP strategy to keep him under wraps.

''They are limiting him to small-town America due to his penchant for misspeaking. They are keeping him under a tight leash and away from major cities,'' Walker said. The GOP's ''family values has backfired,'' she said.

Quayle's pep talk to rev up Southern voters for President Bush was often interrupted by cheers of ''Four More Years!''

Joining Sen. Thad Cochran and Mississippi GOP Chairwoman Evelyn McPhail on stage, Gov. Kirk Fordice got the event rolling when he praised Quayle as ''the defender of family values.''

Fordice jokingly introduced Quayle as the ''international spelling bee champion.'' Quayle has been ripped by comedians and others when he misspelled ''potato'' during a visit to a New Jersey school in June.

The Bush/ Quayle ticket is fighting for family values by seeking to lower taxes, while Clinton and running mate Al Gore want to increase tax burdens for Americans, Quayle said.

''We will win the campaign because the American people trust our president,'' Quayle said.

He later attended a private $ 1,000 per-ticket GOP fund-raising at a private Columbus residence and departed Air Force Two about 7 p.m. for a trip to Georgia.

AMENDMENT TO COMPLAINT

Complaint: Violations of 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b), 9002.1, 9002.11, 9003.1 and 9004.7.

Respondent: The Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc.

Complainant: Democratic National Committee
430 South Capitol Street, S.E.
Washington, D.C. 20003

INTRODUCTION

On October 20, 1992, the Complainant filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission (the "Original Complaint") seeking an investigation by the Federal Election Commission into the Respondent's undisclosed use of taxpayer money to subsidize the campaign travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle, in violation of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, 2 U.S.C. § 431 et seq., as amended (the "FECA"), and the Presidential Election Campaign Fund Act, 26 U.S.C. § 9001 et seq. (the "Fund Act"). Complainant there alleged that George Bush and Dan Quayle conducted extensive campaign travel on Air Force One and Air Force Two, respectively, from August 20, 1992 through August 31, 1992. Complainant also alleged that the Respondent failed to report any reimbursement to the United States Treasury for the use of the aircraft and had failed to report any debts or obligations owing to the United States Treasury, both as required by the FECA and the Fund Act.

Complainant hereby amends the Original Complaint in this matter seeking further investigation by the Federal Election Commission into the undisclosed use of taxpayer money to subsidize the campaign travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle from September 1, 1992 through September 30, 1992, and for subsequent periods, in violation of the FECA and the Fund Act.

PARTIES

Complainant, Democratic National Committee (the "DNC"), is the national committee of the Democratic Party and is a political committee registered with the Federal Election Commission (the "FEC"). Respondent, The Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("Bush-Quayle '92"), is the authorized committee of George Bush and Dan Quayle, Republican Party candidates for the offices of President and Vice President of the United States, respectively.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

On or about August 21, 1992, Bush-Quayle '92 received $55.24 million from the United States Treasury for the general election campaign expenses of George Bush and Dan Quayle, candidates for President and Vice President, respectively. Pages from the Monthly Report of Bush-Quayle '92, filed on September 22, 1992, are attached hereto as Exhibit 1 (the "August Monthly Report"). Between August 21 and September 30, 1992, Bush-Quayle '92 disbursed more than $19 million for the re-election effort of George Bush and Dan Quayle. See Exhibit 1 and pages from the Monthly Report of Bush-Quayle '92, filed on October 23, 1992 which are attached hereto as Exhibit 2 (the "September Monthly Report"). During the same period, George Bush and Dan Quayle made nearly 125 separate campaign-related trips using Air Force One and Air Force Two, respectively. See Appendix A attached to the Original Complaint and Appendix A attached hereto. Yet, the September Monthly Report, like the August Monthly Report, discloses no disbursement by Bush-Quayle '92 to the United States Treasury for reimbursement for the campaign-related travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle on Air Force One and Air Force Two.[1]

As of September 30, 1992, the September Monthly Report discloses that Bush-Quayle '92 owed $260,000 of debts and obligations. Again, however, the September Monthly Report discloses no debt or obligation owing by Bush-Quayle '92 to the United States Treasury for the campaign-related travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle on Air Force One and Air Force Two.

[1] The September Monthly Report does disclose one travel-related disbursement by the Respondent to the United States Treasury for $129.00 on September 24, 1992. Exhibit 2. The Report does not, however, indicate (in accordance with the past and subsequent practice of the Respondent) whether this figure represents a reimbursement to the United States Treasury for campaign-related travel on Air Force One or Air Force Two.

Although the Republican National Committee (the "RNC") may reimburse the cost of Presidential and Vice Presidential political travel as part of their 2 U.S.C. § 441a(d) expenditures, the RNC's Monthly Report for September discloses only two disbursements to the United States Treasurer during the month of September in an aggregate amount of $1,690.00 -- one of which was for Air Force Two costs. Exhibit 3.

As alleged in the Original Complaint, and as set forth below, the failure of Bush-Quayle '92 to report either reimbursements to the United States Treasury or debts and obligations owing to the United States Treasury for the campaign-related use of Air Force One and Air Force Two, leads to one of two conclusions:

1. Bush-Quayle '92 has violated the reporting requirements of the FECA and the Fund Act in flagrant disregard of the primary goal of public disclosure of campaign activity embodied in those laws; or

2. George Bush and Dan Quayle are receiving untold amounts of taxpayer money to subsidize their political campaign, over and above the $55.24 million in taxpayer money already granted to Bush-Quayle '92 for that purpose.

APPLICABLE LAW

Under the Fund Act, the FECA and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, all campaign-related travel of publicly funded candidates for the offices of President and Vice President is considered a qualified campaign expense and must be reported by the candidates' authorized campaign committees. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7. See also 2 U.S.C. §§ 432(a) and 434; 11 C.F.R. §§ 101.1, 101.2, 102.12, 102.13 and 9002.1. For travel which is entirely campaign related, the entire cost of the travel must be paid for by the candidates' authorized campaign committee and reported as a qualified campaign expense. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(1). If any stop on a trip includes campaign activity, then that stop is considered a campaign stop and the entire cost of the trip to that location and back to the point of origin must be considered an expenditure reportable on the authorized campaign committee's report. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(2).

Under these regulations, Bush-Quayle '92 must report the entire cost of the campaign travel for each stop, not only for the candidates, but also for the cost of their traveling party who are campaign-related. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(4). The campaign-related travel of George Bush and Dan Quayle on Air Force One and Air Force Two, respectively, must be calculated on the basis of first class airfare between cities with regularly scheduled commercial service or the usual charter rate between cities without regularly scheduled service. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

The regulations also provide that an authorized campaign committee must report any debt or obligation, the amount of which is over $500, as of the date incurred. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

If the exact amount of the debt or obligation is not known as of the date the report must be filed, the regulations require that the committee report an estimate. Id. As previously noted, estimating the cost of campaign-related travel for candidates traveling by government conveyance is not difficult -- the regulations require the use of first class airfare between two locations with regularly scheduled commercial service or the usual charter rate between two cities without regularly scheduled service. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

ANALYSIS

Bush-Quayle '92 has failed again to report on their September Monthly Report any reimbursements to the United States Treasury for the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two for their political travel[2]. Nor have they reported reimbursements to the United States Treasury for other means of transportation (e.g., helicopters, limousines, etc.) used in their campaign-related travel between September 1 and September 30, 1992. Therefore, the Respondent has either violated the reporting requirements of the FECA and the Fund Act by failing to disclose either disbursements or debts and obligations, or George Bush and Dan Quayle appear to be receiving a free ride at the taxpayer's expense for their campaign-related travel.

For purposes of this Amended Complaint, Complainant reviewed the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two between September 1 and September 30 and identified, based upon news reports, the separate trips of Mr. Bush and Mr. Quayle that were clearly campaign-related[3]. Complainant then determined, through travel agency quotes, the lowest first class airfare between any two locations on the date of such travel by Mr. Bush or Mr. Quayle. If no commercial air carrier offered first class service between the two locations on the date of travel, then the lowest first class airfare between the two locations closest to the actual stops of the candidates was used[4]. Appendix A contains an itinerary of the campaign-related travel of both George Bush and Dan Quayle for this period, and sets forth the locations and airfares used in this calculation. Complainant has not attempted to calculate the many other campaign-related travel expenses that would be required to be reimbursed by the Respondent to the United States Treasury for the use by the candidates of helicopters, cargo aircraft, limousines, vans or other government owned transportation, or for the expenses of any personnel other than a conservative estimate of seven individuals traveling with the candidates as a part of their campaign entourage. Even using these conservative limitations, the Respondent would owe more than $220,000 to the United States Treasury for the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two during the month of September, 1992.

2 The Bush-Quayle '92 Pre-General Election Report filed on October 22, 1992 (the "Pre-General Report"), does disclose one disbursement for the use of Air Force Two -- a mere $26,986 disbursed to the "United States Treasurer/Air Force II" on October 14, 1992. Exhibit 4. This amount contrasts sharply with the more than $180,000 the Bush-Quayle '88 General Committee had reimbursed the United States Treasury for the use of Air Force Two alone as reported for the similar period during 1988. Exhibit 5.

3 The following summaries for these trips sets forth the basis for alleging that these trips represented campaign-related travel for Messrs. Bush and Quayle, rather than simply "incidental contact." See also news clippings attached hereto as Exhibits 6 through 59.

The following summaries describe the campaign nature of each of the 82 trips discussed above. For each trip, a news clipping is attached to support the campaign-related nature of the event in each location.

September 1, 1992 -- Columbus, Georgia

At a sendoff rally in Columbus, Georgia, before his bus tour of the state, Dan Quayle criticized Governor Clinton's proposed payroll taxes to pay for health care and job training as a threat to jobs. Quayle also claimed that Governor Clinton's proposed defense cuts would cost jobs, both in the state and nationwide. Exhibit 6.

September 2, 1992 -- Humboldt, South Dakota

At a meeting with 150 farmers, George Bush denounced Clinton as a threat to free trade and the booming market for American agricultural exports. He told the farmers that they should not be fooled about where Clinton will ultimately come out on the North American Free Trade Agreement, stating that "after the election they'll call in that anti-free-trade IOU, and then you'd better watch out . . . job-creating exports of every kind will be the victims." Exhibit 7.

[4] This method was used for estimating a minimum amount owed by the Respondent to the United States Treasurer solely for the use of Air Force One and Air Force Two, notwithstanding the regulatory requirement to use a charter rate in such circumstances. See 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

September 2, 1992 -- Shallowater, Texas

At a cotton gin in Shallowater, Texas, George Bush cited a Washington Post story in which AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland -- described by Bush as "one of the most powerful labor bosses in the country" -- said Clinton would not be pressed for details of the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement until after the election. Exhibit 7.

September 2, 1992 -- Fort Worth, Texas

At a General Dynamics plant in Fort Worth, Texas, George Bush announced the approval of the sale of 150 F-16 fighter planes to Taiwan while standing in front of a huge banner that proclaimed "Jobs for America. The speech was timed to coincide with a five minute campaign commercial broadcast on the four major networks and a 29-page document sent to Republicans nationwide, outlining Bush's economic plan for his second term. Exhibit 24.

September 11, 1992 -- Joplin, Missouri

In Joplin, Missouri, George Bush borrowed a punch line from the film "Nightmare on Elm Street" to press his argument that Governor Clinton was trying to play on fear in his campaign. Mr. Bush said, "Governor Clinton is running a Freddie Krueger candidacy." George Bush further criticized Governor Clinton for running a campaign that fed on fears by saying that, "Governor Clinton is . . . more interested in playing on people's fears than in dealing with this country's real problems." Exhibits 25 and 26.

September 11, 1992 -- Virginia Beach, Virginia

Speaking to Pat Robertson's Christian Coalition's "Road to Victory" conference in Virginia Beach, Virginia, George Bush said that "family values" and his economic agenda are one and the same. Exhibit 26.

September 11, 1992 -- Cape Canaveral, Florida

In Cape Canaveral, Florida, Dan Quayle commented that "if George Bush isn't reelected, we're going to see rather dramatic cuts in our space exploration budget. And that will not be good news for the people of Florida." Exhibit 27.

September 13, 1992 -- Yorba Linda, California

At a rally in Orange County, California, George Bush accused Governor Clinton of supporting budget cuts that would turn the military into a force "whose idea of high-tech weaponry is the Super Soaker Water Gun." Exhibit 28.

September 14, 1992 -- San Diego, California

In San Diego, California, George Bush said that Governor Clinton and his running mate "are advancing a philosophy [on environmental regulation] that goes back to where command and control regulation is the only solution, a philosophy that will not only cut jobs but impede technology [and] environmental progress, not promote it." Exhibit 29.

September 14, 1992 - Colville, Washington

In Colville, Washington, George Bush attempted to make the case that he would strike the proper balance between jobs and the environment while Governor Clinton and Senator Gore would sacrifice the well-being of workers to environmental extremists who are "twisting" the law. Exhibits 29 and 30.

September 14, 1992 -- Medford, Oregon

At a lumber company in Medford, Oregon, George Bush criticized Governor Clinton as "Governor Doublespeak" and complained that the Endangered Species Act was broken and needed to be fixed. Exhibit 30.

September 15, 1992 -- Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Campaigning in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Dan Quayle told an audience at Children's Hospital of Wisconsin that changes in America's health care system should not involve "government-rationed programs" or new payroll taxes but rather a system of tax credits and vouchers. Exhibit 37.

September 17, 1992 -- Enid, Oklahoma

In Enid, Oklahoma, George Bush portrayed Governor Clinton as an advocate of change controlled and directed by a central government and social engineers. Bush suggested that life under the Democrats would resemble life behind the old Iron Curtain: "From Warsaw to Prague to Moscow, government price controls have led to one thing: rationing of service." Exhibit 38.

September 17, 1992 -- Jonesboro, Georgia

In Jonesboro, Georgia, a suburb of Atlanta, George Bush labeled Governor Clinton an Oxford-educated liberal bent on reviving big-government theories that have failed in capitals "from Warsaw to Prague to Moscow." Bush declared that Clinton "would unite the Presidency and the Congress to achieve one end above the others." Exhibit 39.

September 18, 1992 -- Basking Ridge, New Jersey

Speaking to several hundred employees at&T corporate headquarters in central New Jersey, George Bush argued that his economic programs offer women and families more equality and opportunity than the "Government mandates" that he said were favored by Governor Clinton. Exhibit 40.

September 19, 1992 -- Ravenna, Ohio

In Ravenna, Ohio, Dan Quayle attacked Governor Clinton for avoiding the draft: "Sooner or later, Bill Clinton is going to have to come clean with the American people on how he avoided military service." Responding to heckling from the crowd, Quayle implored his supporters for help. "Let me tell you this: We will never give Bill Clinton the opportunity to be the President of the United States." Exhibit 41.

September 22, 1992 -- Lexington, Kentucky

In Kentucky, Dan Quayle continued his campaign on behalf of family values. Before the National Association of Home Builders in Lexington, Quayle stated, "I want you to write America's future and I want Hollywood to begin reflect our values." Exhibit 42.

September 22, 1992 -- Springfield, Missouri

In Springfield, Missouri, George Bush attacked Governor Clinton's record as governor of Arkansas: "This man has the gall to go around America and promise the moon, when on issue after issue, the sky has fallen in his own back yard." Exhibit 43.

September 22, 1992 -- Tulsa, Oklahoma

On a day in which George Bush flew on Air Force One more than 2,500 miles, touching down in six states bordering Arkansas, Bush told a crowd in Tulsa, Oklahoma that Clinton "talked a lot, but had done nothing" on civil rights. Exhibit 43.

September 22, 1992 -- Longview, Texas

In Longview, Texas, George Bush continued his day long critique by charging Governor Clinton with having a "sorry record, by any Texas standard," on health care, and of taking such poor care of the Arkansas environment that "the rivers are so polluted the fish glow in the dark." Exhibit 43.

September 22, 1992 -- Shreveport, Louisiana

In Shreveport, Louisiana, Governor Clinton's record was again under attack by George Bush: "What I'm asking the American people today . . . is to take a look at the record that he's laid down and then compare that against the record that he's trying to take all across the country. And be careful because it's slippery when wet." Exhibit 43.

September 22, 1992 -- Greenville, Mississippi

Greenville, Mississippi was the site of another rally in which George Bush attacked Governor Clinton's record in Arkansas: "He's more than doubled Arkansas spending since '83. He's paid for it by raising taxes that hurt working families the most. . . And he stated taxing mobile homes and then he raised taxes on beer and then he tried to tax child care. And I guess it doesn't matter whether the burp is from the beer or the baby bottle, he's going to slap a tax on it." Exhibit 44.

September 22, 1992 -- Memphis, Tennessee

Speaking before students at Craigmont High School in Memphis, Tennessee, George Bush repeated his criticism of Governor Clinton: "Governor Clinton promises the moon to America, while the sky is falling in on Arkansas." Exhibit 45.

September 22, 1992 -- Phoenix, Arizona

In Phoenix Arizona, Dan Quayle criticized the Democrats' health care plan, saying it would ration health care and would be similar to Canada's socialized medicine. Exhibit 46.

September 23, 1992 -- Greensboro, North Carolina

In Greensboro, N.C., George Bush proposed a $20 billion, five-year program of tax breaks for small businessmen, while declaring that if Governor Clinton is elected, "you can board up the windows or you can hand out the pink slips." Exhibits 47 and 48.

September 23, 1992 -- State College, Pennsylvania

September 23, 1992 -- Fort Worth, Texas

In Fort Worth, Texas, Dan Quayle condemned Governor Clinton for what he called a series of "flip-flops" on key issues. Exhibit 49.

September 23, 1992 -- Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Before a rally in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Dan Quayle accused Governor Clinton of shifting his position on tax cuts, the Persian Gulf War, welfare reform, school choice and public funding for abortion. Quayle also told the crowd, Clinton "never met a tax he wouldn't hike." Exhibit 47.

September 25, 1992 -- Chicago, Illinois

Speaking to employees at the suburban headquarters of the Motorola Corporation, George Bush said that Democrats are captives of the "government elite" and preoccupied with playing by a set of old rules: "He and his advisers talk about industrial policies, economic plans, designed by a government elite. And the planners dictate the terms, pick winners. If you're lucky, they let the private sector have a piece of the action. And all of is paid for with new tax dollars from the middle class." Exhibit 50.

September 26, 1992 -- Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

In Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, Dan Quayle attended a private fund-raiser and a meeting with weekly newspaper representatives. Exhibit 51.

September 26, 1992 -- Marysville, Ohio

On a two-day train trip through Ohio and Michigan, George Bush attacked Governor Clinton's tax plan. In Marysville, Ohio, Bush warned of new taxes on the middle class: "To capture all the revenue that he wants to raise, to pay for those promises, Bill Clinton will have to go to the middle class." Exhibit 52.

September 28, 1992 -- Flint, Michigan

Campaigning throughout the midwest on a train, George Bush warned of tax increases under a Clinton administration "every time the guy opens his mouth he promises a new program. But he hasn't said how he'll pay for them. He'll need billions of dollars more, beyond the tax increases, he's already proposed." Exhibit 53.

September 28, 1992 -- St. Louis, Missouri

In St. Louis, Missouri, George Bush continued his criticism of Governor Clinton's anti-crime record in Arkansas: "Americans want to take crime out of their neighborhoods and put the neighbors back." Exhibit 54.

September 28, 1992 -- Dallas, Texas

In Dallas, Texas, George Bush attacked Governor Clinton's Anti-crime record and proposed an array of increased penalties and crimes that he would bring under Federal jurisdiction. Exhibit 54.

September 28, 1992 -- Clovis, New Mexico

In Clovis, New Mexico, Dan Quayle told high school students that while times are difficult, they are "not as bad as we're being told." Exhibit 55.

September 28, 1992 -- Colorado Springs, Colorado

Dan Quayle criticized Governor Clinton's health care plan in Colorado Springs, Colorado, saying it would lead to "rationing" and "micromanagement" by bureaucrats. Quayle told the crowd that Clinton offers "a government run system, with rationing of health care services, paid for with higher taxes." Exhibit 56.

September 28, 1992 -- Rapid City, South Dakota

At a civic center in Rapid City, South Dakota, Dan Quayle invoked memories of Carter administration "malaise." Quayle said that Carter was "a president who said that it was the people's fault. Malaise was the word that he used." Exhibit 57.

September 28, 1992 -- Rockford, Illinois

At stops throughout Illinois, including Rockford, Dan Quayle stumped on behalf of the Republican ticket: "Illinois is going to vote for George Bush again. Don't believe the pundits, don't believe the polls, believe the people." Exhibit 57.

September 29, 1992 -- Nashville, Tennessee

George Bush travelled to five cities in Tennessee to level heavy criticism of Governor Clinton: "You have to take your lumps and you have to take a stand. And I don't thin that we can take a risk on Gov. Bill Clinton to be president of the United States of America." Exhibit 58.

September 30, 1992 -- Fond du Lac, Wisconsin

In Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, George Bush announced a proposal to increase Federal and state efforts to collect delinquent child-support payments. Bush also raised the issue again of Governor Clinton and the draft. Exhibit 59.

September 30, 1992 -- Newark, New Jersey

In Newark, New Jersey, George Bush accused Governor Clinton of misstating his record on family matters, ranging from welfare reform to infant formula. Bush also referred to Clinton's avoidance of the draft in the Vietnam War. Exhibit 59.

* * * * *

Because all of these appearances were designed to further the campaign of Messrs. Bush and Quayle, the FEC should investigate immediately to determine that the required cost of the campaign-related travel of these candidates is being reimbursed to the United States Treasury. The facts set forth above establish reason to believe that Bush-Quayle '92 has committed some or all of the following violations:

1. Failure to report general election expenditures in violation of 2 U.S.C. § 434(b).

2. Failure to pay qualified campaign expenses through the authorized campaign committee in violation of 11 C.F.R. §§ 9002.1, 9002.11, 9003.1 and 9004.7.

3. Failure to report debts and obligations in violation of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

RELIEF REQUESTED

Complainant respectfully requests that the FEC take the following actions:

1. Conduct an immediate investigation to determine whether the Respondent has violated the FECA and the Fund Act by accepting subsidies from the United States Treasury for the campaign-related travel of candidates George Bush and Dan Quayle.

2. Require the Respondent (and any other Republican committees, as the FEC deems appropriate) to produce immediately:

   (a) travel itineraries, and

   (b) all records pertaining to payment of costs for all travel

from at least August 21 until the present and for subsequent periods, as appropriate, for immediate review by FEC auditors.

3. Take such other appropriate legal action as the FEC may deem warranted as a result of the investigation requested by this Complaint.

VERIFICATION

The undersigned counsel for Complainant DNC swears that the statements in this complaint are based on the sources indicated, and, as such, are true and correct to the best of her information and belief.

32 Although there is no jet service between Columbus, Mississippi and Columbus, Georgia, there is a first class airfare quoted, but on a commuter flight where seats are combined with coach class seats.

33 Chicago's O'Hare Airport is approximately 10 miles from Oak Brook. The quoted rate reflects a flight into O'Hare.

34 The quoted rate is for roundtrip, first class airfare between Washington, D.C. and Florence, South Carolina, approximately 12 miles from Darlington and the closest commercial airport to Darlington.

35 Rate reflects a first class airfare from Grand Junction to Sacramento, California, approximately 47 miles from Lodi and the closest commercial airport to which first class service was available from Grand Junction on that date.

36 Rate represents first class airfare from Stockton, California (approximately 12 miles from Lodi) to Los Angeles, California.

9/19	Washington, D.C. to Ravenna, OH	$500[37]
9/21	Washington, D.C. to Lexington, KY	$270
	Lexington, KY to Bowling Green, KY	$240[38]
	Bowling Green, KY to Washington, D.C.	$380[39]
9/22	Washington, D.C. to Phoenix, AZ	$380
	Phoenix, AZ to Dallas, TX	$430
9/23	Dallas, TX to Oklahoma City, OK	$136
	Oklahoma City, OK to Washington, D.C.	$570
9/26	Washington, D.C. to Harrisburg, PA	$480[40]
9/28	Washington, D.C. to Clovis, NM	$962[41]
	Clovis, NM to Colorado Springs, CO	$198[42]
	Colorado Springs, CO to Rapid City, SD	$220
	Rapid City, SD to Rockford, IL	$430

37 Rate represents roundtrip, first class airfare between Washington, D.C. and Akron/Canton Airport in Ohio, approximately 20 miles from Ravenna.

38 Represents first class airfare between Lexington, Kentucky and Nashville, Tennessee which is the closest commercial airport to Bowling Green, Kentucky at a distance of approximately 60 miles.

39 Represents first class airfare from Nashville, approximately 60 miles from Bowling Green, but the closest commercial airport.

40 Represents a first class roundtrip airfare on that date.

41 Because there was no direct first class service between Washington, D.C. and Clovis, New Mexico, the quoted rate represents a first class flight from Washington, D.C. to Albuquerque, New Mexico at the lowest rate on that date -- $700 -- and coach service between Albuquerque and Clovis for $262. There was no first class service offered between Albuquerque and Clovis on that date.

42 Represents the coach airfare between Clovis and Colorado Springs, because there was only commuter service offered between these locations on that date, with no first class airfare quoted. Dan Quayle could have flown from Lubbock, Texas (the closest commercial airport to Clovis, New Mexico), approximately 97 miles from Clovis, at the first class rate of $270.

HEADLINE: Quayle Begins One-State Campaign Bus Tour

DATELINE: COLUMBUS, Ga.

KEYWORD: Quayle

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle today told conservative, defense-minded Georgia voters that Bill Clinton's economic plan would cost the state some 75,000 jobs and a million or more nationwide.

The charge brought chants of "You're a liar" from a small group of Clinton supporters in the crowd.

Quayle, borrowing a page from the Clinton 1992 campaign playbook, was busing across central Georgia promising to highlight the Bush campaign's major differences with the Democratic ticket.

At a sendoff rally in Columbus, Quayle said Clinton's proposed payroll taxes to pay for health care and job training would hurt businesses, predicting 40,000 jobs lost in Georgia alone.

Quayle also said Clinton's proposed defense cuts would cost another 35,000 jobs in the state, whose economy is heavily dependent on defense industries and military installations. He provided few specifics on the projected job losses.

"The cornerstone of his national economic strategy is to raise taxes," Quayle said in an appearance just hours before Clinton was to campaign elsewhere in Georgia.

Quayle spoke to a crowd of about 1,000 people in an insurance company's parking lot, where many people stood silent as cheerleaders and local Republicans led chants of four more years. Workers from the insurance company and another nearby business said they were given time off work and asked to attend the rally.

"They told me to come here and they told me not to talk to reporters," said Steve Bell, a pressman at one of the companies.

A dozen or so Clinton supporters at the back of the crowd began chanting "That's not true" and "You're a liar" as Quayle offered his assessment of the Clinton economic plan.

President Bush favors a 25 percent reduction in U.S. forces and cutting about $ 50 billion from the Pentagon budget over six years. Clinton has called for cutting roughly $ 100 billion over that period, promising to plow the savings into new domestic jobs and research while implementing a plan to assist displaced servicemen and defense workers.

The two campaigns also have disagreements over various weapons programs. Clinton opposes the B-2 bomber, while Bush supports it; Clinton supports the V-22 tilt-rotor aircraft, while the Bush administration has been trying to kill the program.

Quayle was to reach the Macon area just hours after a planned stop there by Clinton, the Arkansas governor who is competitive in many of the Southern states that are the foundation of Republican electoral strategy.

Quayle's trip opened Monday in another such state, Alabama, where a new poll released over the weekend had Bush and Clinton in a dead heat. There, and later in Mississippi, Quayle warned voters that electing Clinton would mean higher taxes. On several occasions Quayle said Clinton would raise taxes the Democrat has never proposed or suggested raising.

But the vice president spent a good chunk of his time responding to criticism he received Sunday night during the nationally televised Emmy awards show, Hollywood's revenge for Quayle's criticism of fictional television character Murphy Brown's decision to have a child out of wedlock.

"They said I attacked single mothers. That is a lie," Quayle told a small crowd that met him in Alabama. "They said that I believe single mothers and their children were not families. That is a lie."

"I don't need any lectures from Hollywood," Quayle said in Mississippi.

Quayle's retort was directed at the show's creator, Diane English, who, during the Emmy broadcast, said to single parents "Don't let anyone tell you you're not a family."

Bush Unveils Wheat Export Subsidy

President Has Election-Year Good News for Farmers, Aircraft Workers

By Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writer

FORT WORTH, Sept. 2—President Bush returned to the campaign trail today with election-year good news for farmers and defense workers.

Bush went to a wheat farm in Humboldt, S.D., and a cotton gin in Lubbock, Tex., to announce a $1 billion government subsidy for wheat exports and the release of $755 million in disaster aid for farmers.

Then the president traveled to the General Dynamics Corp. plant here to announce the administration's approval—expected since Bush tipped his hand on a campaign swing in July—of the sale of 150 F-16 fighter planes to Taiwan.

Although administration officials insisted politics played no role in the decisions, the announcements—like the president's promise Tuesday for full federal reimbursement for hurricane damage in South Florida and to rebuild Homestead Air Force Base there—offered a vivid demonstration of the power of incumbency.

"We're responding to crop disasters and we're responding to a need to be more aggressive on wheat exports," said one official who briefed reporters about the president's announcements. Another official said the fighter sale to Taiwan was prompted by a recent "spike" in military purchases by China and designed to redress the military imbalance in the area.

Others saw different motives. "This is really an example of the Bush administration's cynicism at its worst," said Mark Ellern, an aide to Sen. Thomas A. Daschle (D-S.D.), saying that Daschle and others had been pressing the administration for months to release the disaster aid—part of money appropriated for emergency help to farmers last year—and provide the export subsidies.

He said the administration had resisted including the additional $755 million in disaster aid when the emergency appropriation was being negotiated and agreed to it—on top of $955 million that has since been paid out—only on the condition that it be left to the president's discretion to award it.

Under the export program, the government will pay U.S. farmers about $40 per ton to make their wheat competitive with heavily subsidized grain from the European Community. Some 30 million metric tons—half the 1992-93 U.S. wheat crop—will be available for export to 28 countries under the expanded program—welcome news for wheat farmers who have watched prices drop $1 a bushel since the beginning of the year.

Bush, whose administration has been battling such subsidies in its negotiations over the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, insisted that today's announcement was not inconsistent. "I've been using a strategy that won us military security—peace through strength," Bush said. "No unilateral disarmament."

The export program is considered to be "budget neutral"—not costing the government additional funds—under the theory that higher exports will raise domestic prices and therefore lower the amount of money the government pays for price supports.

The disaster aid will help sugar cane growers in hurricane-ravaged Louisiana, Texas cotton growers whose fields were flooded earlier this year, and wheat farmers in the Midwest who lost up to 80 percent of their winter wheat crops due to drought followed by frost.

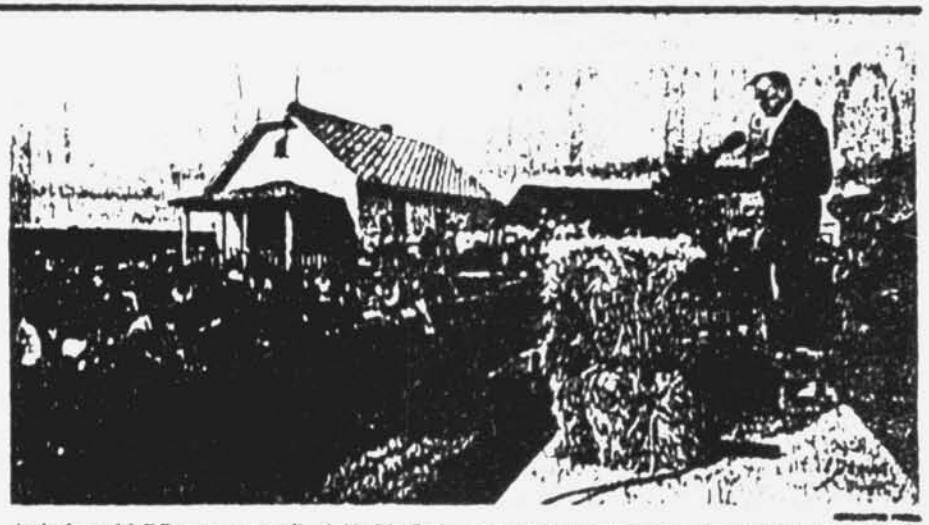
Bush announced the F-16 sales flanked by two F-16 jets and standing in front of a huge banner that proclaimed, "Jobs for America. Thanks Mr. President." To cheers, he said Democratic nominee Bill Clinton's planned military cuts would "needlessly throw defense workers out of work and I will not have that."

The administration estimates that the sale, expected to be close to $6 billion, will save or create more than 10,000 jobs at General Dynamics plants here and in California, and at Pratt & Whitney in Connecticut, which manufactures the plane's engines. General Dynamics had announced plans to lay off 5,800 workers by the end of 1994 here.

In South Dakota and Texas, Bush cited a story in today's Washington Post in which AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland—described by Bush as "one of the most powerful labor bosses in the country"—said Clinton would not be pressed for commitments on specific details of the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement until after the election.

Bush told the South Dakota farmers that Clinton, who has said he favors an agreement but needs to see the details of the treaty before endorsing it, "is stuck riding the fence so hard" on NAFTA that he has "straddle sores," but that they should not be fooled about where Clinton will ultimately come out. The United States, Canada and Mexico agreed to the pact last month, but Congress still must ratify the agreement, which would eliminate tariffs and other barriers to free trade among the three nations over the next 15 years.

"Don't kid yourselves," Bush said. "The money, the manpower and the support for his campaign comes from the opponents of free trade, and after the election they'll call in that anti-free-trade IOU, and then you'd better watch out. . . . Job-creating exports of every kind will be the victims."



At the farm of Jeff Kapperman near Humboldt, S.D., Bush announces expansion of export program to aid wheat growers.

Trying to Redefine Debate, Quayle Denounces Hollywood, Praises Single Mothers

By Charles Babington
Washington Post Staff Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 2—Vice President Quayle, continuing his efforts to redefine the political debate over "family values," today criticized Hollywood as a stronghold of an "adversary culture" while offering praise for single mothers.

The vice president told 800 Chamber of Commerce members here that Hollywood "flinches when it hears the word 'morality.' " He added, "I have nothing but respect for single mothers," and said unnamed Hollywood figures have lied about his comments regarding the television character Murphy Brown.

" 'Family values' is neither meaningless nor mean-spirited. It reflects a concern for the well-being of our families," Quayle said.

The speech grew out of campaign fears that the hard-edged "traditional values" rhetoric at last month's Republican National Convention was playing poorly with many voters and that Quayle's criticism of the fictional Brown for having a child out of wedlock had been seen by some as an implicit attack on single mothers.

A top Quayle aide said the political problems stemming from Quayle's May 19 Murphy Brown speech have arisen "on the right as well as the left. . . . We want to take back the family values issue from Pat Buchanan."

Buchanan, a staunch conservative who challenged President Bush in this year's GOP primary campaign, coupled an appeal based on moral issues with an attack on Democrats at the Houston convention. Today's speech by Quayle, which was shown in advance to the White House, was designed to show that Quayle "rejects this sort of harshness of Buchanan," the aide said.

Today, Quayle said his comments about Murphy Brown were not meant as a criticism of single parents. "I really, really resent . . . this saying that I was attacking single mothers," Quayle told a dozen parents in a briefing on a local education program before his speech.

He said that his sister and grandmother had been single mothers, following divorces, and that he admired them greatly. "My grandmother, if she were alive today, she'd just be sick," he said.

In his speech to the chamber, Quayle said Hollywood chose to "attack and distort" his comments rather than engage in debate about proper role models for American families.

Still, today's speech left it unclear exactly how Quayle's comments about Murphy Brown square with his praise of single mothers. The high-ranking Quayle aide told reporters that Quayle today was challenging the suggestion that raising a child in a single-parent home is no less desirable than raising a child with two parents.

"Children who do not live with two parents are more than five times as likely to live in poverty than children who do," Quayle said. "We also know that children who are raised without fathers are more likely to do poorly in school and, indeed, to drop out. If they drop out of school, they are more likely to join gangs, to break the law, or to have babies out of wedlock."

"Single parents, especially single mothers," Quayle said, "who raise their children alone do a tremendous job against the odds. . . . It is the men who need to be reminded that they have a responsibility for the children they have fathered."

Vice President Dan Quayle played a down with football players Wednesday at Tulsa University and told told them about their common problem: No respect.

Quayle, with shirt sleeves rolled up, completed a 15-yard pass to received Gary Brown, who juggled the ball with one hand before drawing it to his chest.

"Not bad, huh?" Quayle asked a reporter.

"Play hard in football, men, but don't forget your studies. Don't forget why you're here," Quayle told huddled players.

Tulsa finished No. 21 last season with a 10-2 record and beat San Diego St. in the Freedom Bowl, but the school was nowhere to be found on this year's preseason poll.

"The vice president has been reading a lot of reports about how we're not getting any respect," coach David Rader told his players. "That's why he came out here. This was not a request from anybody on campus."

Indeed, reporters covering Quayle's arrival at the Oklahoma Air National Guard base were told only about an impromptu stop that would be made along the way to a planned rally at Union High School.

Quayle's 20-vehicle motorcade rolled to the front gate of Tulsa's Skelly Stadium, where Quayle was briefed on his play by Rader, a staunch conservative.

Shown an index card, Quayle asked several inaudible questions of Rader before walking onto the field.

His pass, a not-so-tight spiral, went just ahead of Brown on a hook route. Quayle's offensive line _ as well as dozens of Secret Service agents _ kept him safe in the pocket.

"He threw a nice spiral," Rader said. "Our players and coaches really enjoyed the vice president's visit.

"As far as the remainder of practice, we didn't have the concentration that we wanted to see on the field. It has to get better before Saturday's game."

Tulsa opens against the Houston Cougars at 6 p.m.

Oklahoma State spent just over two hours on the turf of Lewis Field as the Cowboys continue to look toward Saturday's opener against Indiana State.

The Pokes practiced in shorts and shoulder pads, and will go through a similar workout Thursday and a light run Friday. Game time Saturday is 6 p.m.

The Arkansas Razorbacks continued preparation for their season opener against The Citadel Saturday and went through a two-hour workout.

The Hogs began the 1991 season by scoring only 28 points in their first three games, but under new offensive coordinator Greg Davis and the return of sophomore quarterback Jason Allen, Arkansas is expected to throw the ball more and score more.

Injuries may play a key role in Saturday's game as split end Tracy Caldwell (hamstring) is listed at doubtful, while left tackle Chris Oliver's (ankle) playing condition may not be known until game time. Freshman defensive lineman Junior Soli also went down with a knee injury Tuesday and will miss Saturday's game.

HEADLINE: Quayle touts Bush jobs program

DATELINE: OAK BROOK, Ill.

KEYWORD: IL- QUAYLE

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle championed the Bush administration's job program Thursday as the best remedy for an ailing economy and predicted a Republican victory in November.

''Right off the bat we will pass the president's jobs package that is pending on Capitol Hill,'' Quayle told a GOP fund-raiser in Oak Brook in west suburban Chicago.

''We know that the $5,000 tax credit for first time homebuyers...will create 600,000 jobs in the first year,'' he said.

''Lower the capital gains rate, across the board cut in taxes, restrain the growth in spending and we will create more jobs,'' said Quayle. ''We have a jobs creation package.''

Quayle said the Democratic-controlled Congress has not acted on the Bush agenda because it wants the president to appear ineffective. He called foreign policy during the first term of the Bush administration historic.

The fall of Berlin Wall, the end of communism in Eastern Europe and the beginning of Democratic reforms in the former Soviet Union all happened on President Bush's watch, Quayle said.

''This president has done that and more. We have won the Cold War and with a new Congress we will win the domestic war,'' he said.

Quayle said winning the domestic war includes electing a Republican Congress this fall, passing a jobs program, health care reform and legal and judicial reform.

Quayle said if the television situation comedy ''Murphy Brown'' can win an Emmy, then House Minority Leader Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., can become Speaker of the House.

Earlier, Quayle visited Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood and told medical professionals the Republicans unlike the Democrats have a health care reform package ready for action.

''Ours was a substantive, detailed package,'' Quayle said. ''His (Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton's) was a press release.''

During questioning by reporters, Quayle defended President Bush's decision to sell 150 F-16 fighters to Taiwan.

''It's not a flip-flop,'' said Quayle. ''This has been under consideration for quite sometime. The issue between Taiwan and China is very sensitive, this is an important decision that the president made... a decision that is predicated on what is in the national interest of the American people.''

President Bush is scheduled to visit Chicago Sunday during a six- state Labor Day weekend campaign swing. Bush will court Polish-American voters at the annual Taste of Polonia Festival.

President Takes Credit for Small Business Initiative

Bush Warns of Clinton's, Congress's Policies While Signing Democrat-Sponsored Legislation

By Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writer

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Sept. 4 President Bush today presented himself as the champion of small business and warned that his Democratic opponent would "tax and spend and regulate you right out of business."

Even as he assailed "that gridlocked Congress," Bush used the occasion to take credit for legislation Congress passed last month to boost small business investment. He signed the Small Business Credit and Business Opportunity Act, designed to help ease the credit crunch for small business by expanding funding authority for Small Business Administration (SBA) bank loan programs from $3.8 billion to $5.2 billion this fiscal year and $6.2 billion next year.

"It's going to loosen up credit even more for deserving small businesses," Bush said.

He did not mention the Democratic sponsors of the legislation, Rep. John J. LaFalce (D-N.Y.) and Sen. Dale Bumpers (D-Ark.), nor the fact that his 1993 budget proposal provides for only $3.8 billion in funding — well below the $5 billion for the small business loan guarantee program this year.

Democratic congressional aides said Bush has consistently asked for less funding for the small business loan program than Congress has provided. They said the loan program has just reached to the funding level it was at in 1980, before cutbacks during the Reagan administration, which initially proposed eliminating the SBA.

Bush visited a hardware store and then spoke to a rally in front of Goolrick's Modern Pharmacy, contrasting his business experience with that of Democratic nominee Bill Clinton, who Bush said had never held a job in the private sector.

"He says he wants to soak the rich, raise taxes on the top 2 percent," Bush said. "What he won't tell you is this: Two out of every three business people hit by that tax increase are small businesses or family farmers. And these folks aren't millionaires, they are mom and pop operators."

Bush said the combination of Clinton's health care plan, defense cuts and tax increases would cost the country 2.6 million jobs.

Some in the crowd held signs bearing messages such as "Our Family Values Jobs."

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director, called the job loss figures "phony" and said Bush was wrong about the impact of the tax increase. He said fewer than 3 percent of small businesses and 1 percent of family farmers earn more than $200,000 annually, the incomes the Clinton tax increase would primarily cover.

Bush Attacks Clinton On Health Proposals

President Links Rival's Remedy to Job Loss

By Ann Devroy
Washington Post Staff Writer

PAINESVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 5—President Bush today portrayed himself as the protector and improver of the nation's health care system and Democrat Bill Clinton as its agent of destruction as he launched three days of Labor Day campaigning.

The president and First Lady Barbara Bush were virtually eating their way through the ethnic festivals that are popular on Labor Day weekend among the voting blocks the White House is targeting. Today it was an Oktoberfest sausage-and-pancake breakfast and an apple festival. Yet to come are two Polish festivals and a picnic during the three-day seven-state swing.

Here in Painesville, about 25 miles from Cleveland, Bush got a warm response at the Lake County Fairgrounds when he said Clinton's health care proposals would lead to nationalized health care, a decline in quality and a burden on business that would cost hundreds of thousands of jobs.

Bush's program, unveiled in the last year of his term after Democrats threatened to make a major issue of his lack of a program, essentially seeks to improve the system rather than propose major changes in it.

It provides tax credits and deductions to middle- and lower-income Americans to offset health insurance costs, eliminates "pre-existing condition limits" on health insurance when workers change jobs, reforms private insurance by curtailing the ability of insurers to cancel coverage and encourages small businesses and private individuals to group together for more buying power. It also would revise medical malpractice laws.

The major element aimed at providing coverage to the 36 million uninsured Americans—the proposal for tax credits—has never been sent to Congress, and Bush has provided no specific plan on funding such credits. Congressional Democrats and Republicans have spent the year arguing about the health care issue with little progress.

Bush compared his approach today to Clinton's, which he said amounted to a "government takeover" of the private health system. "That is exactly what some of my opponents want, to nationalize our health care system, put government in control, let government fix the prices, let government ration the kind of care that people get, how much, what kind and when they'll get it," Bush said.

Clinton, in fact, does not advocate nationalized health care and said in Little Rock, Ark., today as he headed for a campaign appearance in South Carolina that the key to improving the health care system is a government attempt, such as he has proposed, to control health care costs.

The Office of Management and Budget and business organizations have charged that "play-or-pay" programs could result in the loss of jobs or the shutdown of small businesses that cannot afford the new tax. Bush said Clinton's plan would require at least a 7 percent payroll tax, which would give firms "two economic choices"—laying off employees to pay the extra taxes or cutting employee wages. Clinton's play-or-pay, he said, is a "pay and pay and pay again" program.

"This is going to save most employers and employees a ton of money over the next decade," Clinton said. "The one thing that is absolutely certain is that the economy is going to be brought to a halt over rising health care costs unless we do something. The system [Bush] proposes would pour more money into the same broken system we've got and allow more and more people just to pass their costs on to everybody else. That's not right."

Bush also took a swipe at Clinton's record as governor of Arkansas. "After having Governor Clinton for 12 years," Bush said, "one in four kids in Arkansas don't even have health insurance. And Bill Clinton has promised he'll do for America what he's done for Arkansas."

Bob Boorstin, a Clinton campaign spokesman, said that was a distortion, and he noted a Commerce Department report that found 86 percent of Arkansans have health insurance, which Boorstin said was one of the best records in the region, and that the state had the fifth highest improvement level last year.

Bush broadened his attacks on Clinton as he progressed from here to South Carolina and a rain-drenched North Carolina rally before ending his day in Kentucky. In South Carolina at a brief airport rally, he attacked Clinton as a tax-and-spend liberal, reiterated his appeal this year to "Clean House" by putting Republicans in Congress and then accused Clinton of having "the worst environmental record in the world," a charge no one in the Bush entourage tried to document.

Bush Tries a Personal Touch In Weekend Campaign Blitz

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Special to The New York Times

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C., Sept. 7 — President Bush embarked today on a six-state Labor Day weekend blitz of ethnic festivals, bikkys fairs and private homes in an effort to lend a more personal touch to his own re-election bid and tarnish the warm and caring image that Gov. Bill Clinton has tried to create.

In Asheville, N.C., he ate lunch at the home of Roy Harris, a Democrat who had challenged the President on live television to come down and tell his children exactly what the Bush Administration had done for them. Then he attended an apple harvest celebration here to denounce Mr. Clinton's policies across the board.

And at a German-American fair 25 miles east of Cleveland, Mr. Bush tried to appropriate a central plank of Mr. Clinton's platform of change — health care — by accusing the Arkansas Governor of poorly managing his state's insurance system.

"My opponent just isn't up to the mark on health care," Mr. Bush said, asserting that after 12 years under Mr. Clinton, one in four people in Arkansas does not have health insurance.

"Bill Clinton has promised he'll do for America what he's done for Arkansas," Mr. Bush told an enthusiastic crowd packed into a steaming tent at Steve Bencic's Original American Oktoberfest. "And my question is: Why would we let him?"

Bush opens a 6-state tour by tearing at Clinton's image.

The speech opened a campaign swing from the early September Oktoberfest in Painesville, Ohio, to the apple harvest celebration here, Polish-American festivals in Chicago and Hamtramck, Mich., a Sunday morning baseball game in Louisville and a Labor Day morning trek across the Mackinac Bridge that links the Upper and Lower Peninsulas of Michigan.

It produced a tour of two regions where Mr. Bush and Mr. Clinton are fighting for the votes of conservative Democrats who voted for Ronald Reagan and other blue-collar Midwesterners and Southerners whose election-year concerns seem focused almost exclusively on economic issues.

Mr. Bush went out of his way to welcome the Democrats who attended his speech in Ohio this morning. But The Cleveland Plain Dealer greeted him this morning with the headline "Mired in an Economic Rut" and articles about how the recession has hurt his campaign. Another front-page article quoted blacks who castigated Mr. Bush for not inviting them to his event today.

In that atmosphere, Mr. Bush seemed bent on furthering two central aims of his campaign: to strike a connection with voters by demonstrating concern about issues like health care and to elevate voters' fears about the Democratic nominee.

On the warm-and-fuzzy front, Mr. Bush ate lunch here with the family of Mr. Harris, who was one of about 200 people who questioned Mr. Bush in a breakfast-television broadcast from the Rose Garden on July 1. Mr. Harris asked Mr. Bush if he would consider "having lunch with my 7-year-old and my 5-year-old and telling them what you've done for them."

Visiting With Common Folk

Mr. Bush demurred at the time, but his political staff later saw it as a chance for Mr. Bush, who has been battling the image of an aloof and unconnected President, to be seen with just plain folks.

At the same time, Mr. Bush tried to cast doubts on Mr. Clinton's record on health insurance. "My opponent backs a plan that goes by a different name, but in the end it takes you to the same place: national health care," Mr. Bush said. "According to some studies, nationalized health care would mean a whopping $250 billion to $500 billion a year in new taxes," Mr. Bush said.

Presidential aides said those figures were derived by taking money now spent by individuals on medical care and transferring it to the Federal budget. Mr. Clinton does not advocate nationalized medicine. He has called for companies above a certain size to provide health insurance or pay into a Federal fund that would do so.

The President accused the Governor of paying only "occasional" attention to the issue, although Mr. Bush himself has not made a substantive speech on the subject for several weeks and has yet to send to Congress the proposed tax credits that are the centerpiece of his own health care plan.

Darlington, S.C. - Amid the beer coolers, Confederate flags, and screaming engines, a methanol-fueled contest raged this Labor Day weekend in the cultural heart of the blue-collar South.

It had nothing to do with Richard Petty's final race in South Carolina, Davey Allison's $ 1 million prize or any other outlaw hero of the Darlington speedway (The track motto: "Too tough to tame").

The quieter but more desperate race was in the folding chairs and hard bleachers filled with 70,000 fans - nearly all white, very definitely Southern, and split on their choice for president.

On Sunday, for the first time since Jimmy Carter wandered the pits in 1976, a Democratic nominee for president came to the egg-shaped bowl of the Southern 500, one of the premier events of the NASCAR circuit.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton arrived not just to challenge Republicans for the right to conservative Southern votes, but to break the GOP hold on a symbol of Southern culture: stock-car racing. Mr. Clinton, the grand marshal, kept his speech short: "Gentlemen, start your engines."

The crowd responded with boos and some cheers, as the blue-jean clad Mr. Clinton hopped into a pace car for an opening lap.

Just before he was introduced to the crowd, people in the section opposite him began chanting "Bush, Bush, Bush" and a plane flew overhead with a banner that said "No draft dodger for president."

Mr. Clinton dismissed the boos. "I think that we shouldn't give up on these folks. I'm here to campaign for their votes. Ever see a politician at football game or a race that didn't get booed?"

In fact, Vice President Dan Quayle was himself greeted with derisive posters when he came to Darlington on Saturday, hoping to fend off Mr. Clinton's advances. Said one sign: "Defeet Quail." Mr. Quayle, last year's grand marshal, brought with him retired race car driver Cale Yarborough, who told the crowd that Mr. Clinton could find no driver or car owner to escort him around the garage area.

But in the stands, a roaming reporter found Bubbas and the Bubbettes acutely divided for the first time in dozen years. A score of interviews suggested Mr. Bush still has the majority of these working-class or lower- middle-class Southerners, but Mr. Clinton is eating into this swing constituency.

And Mr. Clinton's problems with the Vietnam draft and charges of marital infidelity seem to carry surprisingly little weight with voters, who are choosing him because of what they see has been neglect of the country's domestic front by Mr. Bush.

"I'm a Clinton man," said Don Blackwood, 47, as he helped park cars at the speedway. He said the Arkansas governor was the first Democrat he really wanted to vote for since John F. Kennedy.

"I think we need a change and I think we need a Democrat in there. What have the Republicans done but ruin the economy?"

Even Bush voters know their man is in trouble, even in the Republican stronghold of South Carolina.

Lynn Summitt of Greensboro, a committed Republican, said Mr. Bush is "catching a lot of flak for a lot of things. Why blame it on one person?" But then again, she is not sure who will get her vote.

Mark Long, 41, of Greenwood, S.C., has never voted for a Democrat for president and he isn't going to start this year, even though his insulation business is suffering. But that's the fault of the Democratic- controlled Congress, he said.

Yet the racetrack regular said there was more debate among his fellow race car fans in the rowdy infield than there was four years ago. "Dukakis? That was an easy call. This one isn't so easy," he said.

Stock-car racing has been a political symbol of the South since 1976, when Mr. Carter became the first major party nominee to use the annual Labor Day weekend race to kick off his campaign in the South.

But Democrats quickly lost control of the slick-rubber set in 1980. Drivers like Mr. Yarborough, who had supported Mr. Carter for his first term, defected to the Republican side. Ronald Reagan arranged an appearance with Richard Petty and country singer Tammy Wynette - a "twofer" in the Southern culture department. President Bush has tried to keep hold of the Southern stock-car vote, and attended the Pepsi 400 at Daytona over the Fourth of July weekend.

But this year, Mr. Clinton has refused to concede the South, as have other Democratic nominees in the post-Carter era. And if you're looking for the votes of Southern whites, a speedway is the logical place to start.

Stock-car racing, started 40 years ago by Applachian bootleggers like Junior Johnson, is as uniquely Southern as sweet tea, country music and grits. Although NASCAR holds 29 races a year across the country, the most famous tracks and the top drivers are distinctly Southern.

"It's a poor man's Kentucky Derby," said Bill Farris, director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi. "Stock-car racing is at the heart of Southern culture. I think Clinton could make no better stop."

John Long, the 69-year-old uncle of the Greenwood insulator, sort of summed up the milieu. "Everywhere, rednecks," said the retired textile worker as he sat outside his motor home in a speedway parking lot.

Inside the speedway, it was clear that this was a tough crowd for Mr. Clinton. There were shouts of "cheater" and "draft dodger" as the Democratic nominee walked along the track. Mr. Clinton blamed the rudeness on the Repubicans, but he also seemed to marvel at the event.

"I don't know if I've ever been to a proper big NASCAR race," said Mr. Clinton. If he had, he would have remembered the noise alone. Ear plugs were issued to reporters in the motorcade that took Mr. Clinton into the pits and garages.

Watching him was Don Fowler, a top state Democratic leader who helped arrange Mr. Clinton's invitation to Darlington. He was the one to urge Mr. Clinton to speak less than a minute, and to expect boos. But Mr. Fowler said the Democrat, who enjoys solid support among black voters, doesn't have to win a majority among the so-called Reagan Democrats.

"He has to split that crowd at a minimum," said Mr. Fowler.

Roughly the same judgment came from the motor home outside. "My father and my father's father were Democrats all their lives," said the elder Mr. Long. "I voted for Carter, then for Reagan, and then for Bush."

He's voting for Mr. Bush again this year, but he added, "This election is going to be real, real close."

HEADLINE: Bush Campaigns In Midwest As Benefit of Wheat Subsidies Questioned

BYLINE: By TOM RAUM, Associated Press Writer

DATELINE: CHICAGO

KEYWORD: Bush

BODY:

President Bush's promise of $ 1 billion in export subsidies to wheat farmers will result in lower payments from domestic programs for the same farmers, administration and Bush campaign officials acknowledged Sunday.

But the officials said farmers would benefit from Bush's announcement last Wednesday because they would receive higher prices overall for their products.

"The president is committed to helping the agrarian community and the farmer," said White House deputy press secretary Laura Melillo.

Bush's team found itself on the defensive about the much-publicized program as the president campaigned for swing votes in Kentucky and the industrial Midwest.

Bush referred to the farmers' subsidy - but not the controversy - in a speech to Polish-Americans in Chicago.

"This year I took money already appropriated and used it to help farmers whose crops have been destroyed," he said at a Taste of Polonia Festival.

The president also added a new touch to his oft-repeated call for a Republican-dominated Congress.

Noting that "the same party, the same crowd" had been running the House for 38 years, he said, "Ask Millie, our dog, and she'll tell you that's 266 years in a dog's life. Change the Congress. Clean the House."

The president sought to get approval from his ethnic audience by saying he could make a claim no president could make in recent times. "Poland is free!" he declared.

He recalled traveling to Poland in July to see Polish patriot Igance Paderewski buried "in the rich, free Polish soil." The remains of the late composer and pianist had been in the United States and were returned to Poland in line with a promise made years earlier.

After a two-mile jog at a high school track in Louisville, Bush attended church and threw out the first ball in a minor league baseball game. Fans laughed and cheered when the ball made it to the plate this time - unlike his pitch last year at the All-Star game in Toronto.

Proceeds from the game were to help victims of Hurricane Andrew in Florida and Louisiana. Bush and his wife, Barbara, tossed three cans of food into a basket set out for donations.

"The heartbeat in Louisville and Lexington and Indianapolis is far louder and far clearer than the heartbeat up in Washington," Bush said. "When one American pitches in to help another, as you're doing now, for the victims of this terribly devastating hurricane ... we salute you.

"One neighbor helping another - that is the American spirit, the American way," he said.

Bush was also attending aa Polish festival in Chicago before winding up his campaign day in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

The New York Times reported Sunday that wheat farmers who were promised the federal largesse last week by Bush will find that sum more than offset when the higher prices they should receive for wheat in turn reduce government payments to farmers under domestic programs.

When he announced the $ 1 billion grant in South Dakota last Wednesday, Bush did not mention that the farmers it would benefit might lose federal benefits in other areas.

Instead, he characterized the package as the largest-ever sale of U.S. subsidized wheat and presented it as a boon to U.S. farmers in meeting competition abroad from heavily subsidized European wheat.

Torie Clarke, Bush campaign spokeswoman, said Sunday that Bush's action in announcing the $ 1 billion package was "a matter of timing. We're perfectly justified."

She said that the administration had never presented the program as anything other than acting under the nation's existing Export Enhancement Program - which allows Bush to increase U.S. subsidies if he determines that foreign governments are unfairly subsidizing their products.

Some of the export subsidies announced by Bush on Wednesday, in fact, were continuations of ones that had been announced separately by the Agriculture Department annually for the past seven years, she said.

Roger Runnigen, Agriculture Department spokesman, said that the export subsidies announced by Bush are "revenue neutral"; in other words, offset in other programs and not costing any new tax dollars.

In general, administration officials said that the export subsidies would allow wheat farmers to get higher prices for their crops - thus reducing the need for federal price-support subsidies at home.

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS

Being able to sell more of their wheat will also mean lower storage costs, the officials said.

"I don't think that troubles farmers. I think farmers would ultimately rather get their income from the market than from Uncle Sam," said a White House official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The government currently subsidizes the difference between what a farmer gets when he sells his commodity and a "target" price set by the government.

While jogging in Louisville, Bush proclaimed the eight-lap, two-mile run "not bad." Asked what his message the rest of the weekend would be, Bush said: "It'll be an exciting one. Be ready."

Clinton, Bush Spar Over Jobs

Candidates Set Forth Contrasting Proposals For Reviving Economy

By David S. Broder
Washington Post Staff Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 6—President Bush tonight conceded that Americans have been trapped "in a long, dreary, slow-growth economy" but differed sharply with his opponent, Bill Clinton, on how to get job-producing growth again.

In televised back-to-back interviews with NBC's Tom Brokaw the presidential rivals focused on the fundamental differences in their economic plans.

Clinton said "the number one thing" he would do if elected is propose "a jobs program," which he would finance from defense savings and a cut in the costs—but not the benefits—of government medical programs.

While agreeing with Clinton on the need for more investment, Bush said he would rely on tax cuts of the kind he urged last January to stimulate home-building and business expansion.

Clinton, the first to answer questions in the first main debate of the general election campaign, insisted that his public works jobs program and other social spending proposals could be financed simply by an increase in taxes on top-bracket earners while providing tax breaks to the middle class and halving the budget deficit in four years.

Bush hedged a bit by saying that his forecast was based "on the best evidence I have." He added that he would not repeat "the ugly rhetoric" Bush made four years ago in promising "no new taxes."

Clinton also told Brokaw that "I very much want" an agreement

mutually trade barriers between the United States and Mexico. "But it is wrong to ask me to endorse the specific deal" negotiated by the Bush administration until all its terms have been published. Bush has been criticizing Clinton for hedging on the pact. "We know we can't read Mr. Bush's lips," Clinton said. "We have to read the paper. . . . I very much want to be for an agreement, and hope I can be for this one."

On another issue, Clinton again denied he had contradicted himself as the accounts he has given of the steps that allowed him to avoid military service in the Vietnam War. Naming journalists and political enemies for the impression that he has changed his story, "I have told the same story all along," he insisted.

When Brokaw turned to Bush, he cited statistics showing higher unemployment and poverty in the United States than in 1988 and asked if that did not merit the removal of the people in charge.

"I'm not sure it's worse than you make it," Bush said, "but it's not good enough." He blamed "the gridlocked Congress" for blocking his stimulus plan and sounded a hopeful note about the future. "I think things are getting better" on the employment front, he said, "and we are poised for a dramatic growth. I am not one of these doomsayers."

Bush asserted that his truthfulness about his role in the Iran-contra affair had not been called into question by recent disclosures of a memorandum in which former secretary of state George P. Shultz said former defense secretary Caspar W. Weinberger expressed astonishment at Bush's professed ignorance of their efforts to stop shipments of arms to Iran. "I don't think there've been [any] questions of the truth," Bush said, adding that "millions of dollars" of investigations by the special prosecutor had not implicated him in any way in the scandal.

The back-to-back interviews were the closest thing to a debate so far in the 1992 campaign, but neither man chose to criticize his opponent as directly as he routinely does on the stump.

Clinton waived his objections to a "talk show" setting. "I challenge Mr. Bush to come to Lansing, Michigan, on the 15th of this month," the date and site proposed for the first of three debates by the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates. Clinton said he had accepted the proposed format of a single moderator adding, "The other side is going to manipulate it and confuse it and be sure they get their zingers out there."

Bush said that "I expect there will be debates, but I'm not so great that I need a commission or another set of rules. I'll be in touch." He indicated once again a preference for a panel of journalists questioning rather than a single moderator.

Earlier today Bush tore into Clinton's "pay-as-you-go" economic program, which currently counts new revenues to fully offset the cost of proposals Clinton favors.

Before a cheering Polish-American audience at Chicago's Taste of Polonia, Bush said the president's plan "is short on revenue and long on accounting gimmicks" that "don't add up." Clinton, in a statement to reporters, said Bush and his "tax-and-spend Democrat" Republican opponent assumed that "under the Democrat's economic proposals there would be a huge deficit" before a new spending was added. Clinton's plan "actually reduces the deficit," he said.

Bush asked "What we're dealing [with] here is offering pay-as-you-go. Why don't we [have] a balanced budget [amendment]?"

What Bush did not note was the Democratic majority's failure to put proposals which the two parties could actually consider.

The other big issue of the campaign so far—as you can see from Bush's remarks—is the question of the economy and the extent to which Democratic control of Congress is responsible for the country's economic problems. Bush is arguing that if the Democrats in Congress had only gone along with his proposals, the economy would be in much better shape. Clinton argues that Bush's policies have failed to produce growth and that a new approach is needed.

President Bush throws out the first ball at a new major baseball game in Louisville yesterday

As he made his way to an outdoor rally in New Jersey, Clinton was asked about a document issued by his campaign listing 127 Arkansas tax and fee increases while he was governor. That is one less than the 128 tax increases that the Bush campaign has accused Clinton of instituting, an assertion that the Arkansas governor has denounced as false.

"It documents exactly what we said all along, that the Bush charge was false," Clinton retorted. "It was produced how many taxes were raised under Clinton and under Bush, he raised more. It was increases in taxes and fees under Clinton as opposed to taxes and fees under Bush, he raised more. . . . Their charge—[the] tax increases to one is false."

Clinton provided a brief preview of his speech in Bentonville, the home town of Democratic rivals Sam Walton and a location meant to serve as a counter to Bush's attempt to identify himself with the embattled Truman administration's victory over Republican Thomas E. Dewey in 1948.

"There's a big difference between Bush and Truman," he said. "Bush blames everybody else for his problems and Truman took responsibility for his. He never bashed Congress and he never blamed a program they wouldn't pass. Congress passed a major portion of Bush's program and disproved [the Bush version]."

Some campaign aides also distributed a report that, as of mid-1988 Washington, the state in which Barbara Bush was born and has maintained a home, had the highest per capita tax burden in the nation.

"I think Mr. Bush has hung out in the rose garden too much. Remember The first time he ever ran was for Congress

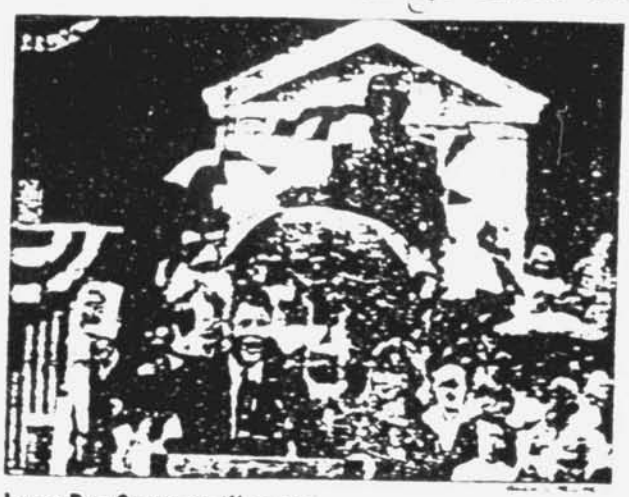
Would-Be Trumans Charge Into Fall Campaign



LABOR DAY CAMPAIGN 'KICKOFF'

Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton, under [illegible] his wife, Hillary, holds up a copy of his newly published book, "Putting People First," at a rally in Independence, Mo. President Bush, below, delivers his message to a crowd of Republicans in Waukesha, Wis.

Bush Accuses Opponent Of 'Waffling,' Reluctance To Fight for His Country

By Ann Devroy
Washington Post Staff Writer

WAUKESHA, Wis., Sept. 7—Insisting that he—not Bill Clinton—is the true political heir of Harry S. Truman, President Bush today attacked his Democratic opponent for "waffling and wavering" and suggested Clinton was unwilling to fight for his country the way he and Truman had.

In what he called the "kickoff day for this campaign," Bush launched a harsh attack on Clinton, pointedly raising the Arkansas governor's lack of military service for the first time and accusing him of "doublespeak" rather than plain talk on issues from the Persian Gulf War to international trade agreements.

Well aware that Clinton began the day in Truman's home town of Independence, Mo., Bush challenged Clinton's right to claim the 33rd president's legacy simply because both were Democrats. But the president also acknowledged that at the end of the 1948 campaign he now cites with increasing frequency, he voted not for Truman, but his Republican opponent, Thomas E. Dewey.

That didn't stop him, however, from drawing parallels.

"Let's just have some plain speaking about Harry Truman and Bill Clinton," Bush said, noting that Truman had run a business, as he has, and ran as an underdog, as he is doing today. Bush added, "Harry Truman wanted to join the military and fight for his country. So do I, and I did."

As the crowd chanted, "Where was Bill? Where was Bill?" Bush went on to mention the military issue a second time, noting Truman "spoke with great pride about his military service."

Bush's comments to thousands of Wisconsin Republicans gathered in this Milwaukee suburb for a Labor Day picnic were his most explicit invitation to voters to compare his military record, as a decorated Navy pilot who at 18 volunteered for service in World War II, with Clinton's lack of service. The Arkansas Democrat avoided military service during the Vietnam War first with a series of student deferments and ultimately with a high number in the draft lottery.

Bush also used the Truman theme to question Clinton's willingness to face tough issues. When he was making the decision to use military force to stop Iraq's President Saddam Hussein, Bush said, Clinton was "waffling and wavering" about what he would do. While Clinton says he supported Bush's actions in the Persian Gulf War, he said at the time Congress voted to support the war that he would have voted with the majority but sympathized with the arguments of the minority who opposed Bush.

Truman, Bush said, was decisive, not equivocal. "He'd find little in common with Governor Clinton," Bush said, "a man who hedges or ducks on almost every tough issue; a man who seems to feel strongly on both sides of almost every issue. . . ."

Quoting one of Truman's favorite statements about the buck stopping at the Oval Office, Bush said Clinton's response to the nation's problems was "first let's blame George Bush and then I'll get back to you later with the answer."

Bush's aides had promoted the Waukesha speech, the first of two he gave today in the battleground Midwest, as dealing with legal reform. The campaign hopes to feature what White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater called "an issue a day."

Arguing that it was time to reform the legal system to reduce unnecessary and costly litigation, Bush accused Clinton of pandering to trial lawyers in his opposition to legal and product liability reform. "I don't want to see only lawyers getting rich," Bush said. "I want to see American workers getting rich."

The decisive Truman would find little in common with Clinton, Bush said.

But it was the sharp anti-Clinton rhetoric that drew the attention and cheers of the crowd, and Fitzwater said Clinton "doublespeak" would be a continuing theme. As for Clinton's military record, Fitzwater said, "We think it's legitimate, especially from a guy [Bush] who's got a war record, and we won't be afraid to draw the analogy."

Bush started and ended his day in Michigan, a virtual must-win state for him if electoral prizes such as California fall Clinton's way. As the sun came up in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, Bush joined about 60,000 others in the annual hike across the five-mile-long Mackinac Bridge.

He returned to Michigan at day's end to appear at a massive Polish festival in the blue-collar ethnic neighborhood of Hamtramck. Bush had appeared here in the early months of his presidency to predict that Poland would be free and that his administration would work to assure it.

Today, Bush recalled that speech and offered a paean of praise for America's ethnic diversity and its immigrants as the "blood and bone" of the nation and the "sweat and sinew" that helped build the country.

Bush got a polite, sometimes enthusiastic reception, as he walked a parade route lined by thousands upon thousands of Michiganders. He reacted with good-natured smiles when Clinton supporters, in pockets along the route and during his speech, chanted boos and tossed handfuls of broccoli, the vegetable he is famous for disliking.

Bush is scheduled to return to Michigan on Thursday to address the Detroit Economic Club. Bush's new team of White House aides has been working on a broadened economic message, acknowledging that while issues like health care and legal reform help give Bush a domestic program to talk about, the economy and what Bush plans to do about it remain the overriding voter concern.

Bush looks back at First Lady Barbara Bush and Michigan Gov. John Engler, right, as they finish Mackinac Bridge walk.

Vice President Blasts Clinton and Hollywood

Quayle Takes Pride in 'Murphy Brown' Emmy

By R.J. Dowling Jr.
Washington Post Staff Writer

[LODI, Calif. Sept. 7] With a gleeful partisanship that occasionally cast the facts to one side, Vice President Quayle today opened the fall campaign season with sweeping attacks on his two favorite targets — Bill Clinton and Hollywood.

Appearing before a modest but enthusiastic crowd on a sidings platform in Grand Junction, Colo., and then at a farmers fair here, Quayle banged away at a central theme of the Republicans' case against Clinton: taxes.

Joking about an Arkansas state government document released last week that said taxes and fees went up 127 times under Clinton — not 128 as the Republicans have claimed — Quayle sought to keep the GOP tax attack alive by saying that past numbers were irrelevant given Clinton's plans for the future.

"I don't care whether it's 128 times or 127 times or 110 times or 150 times," Quayle declared to cheers in Colorado. "He's already told the American people that the first thing he's going to do as president is to raise your taxes. He's going to raise income taxes. He's got a health care tax. He's got a training tax."

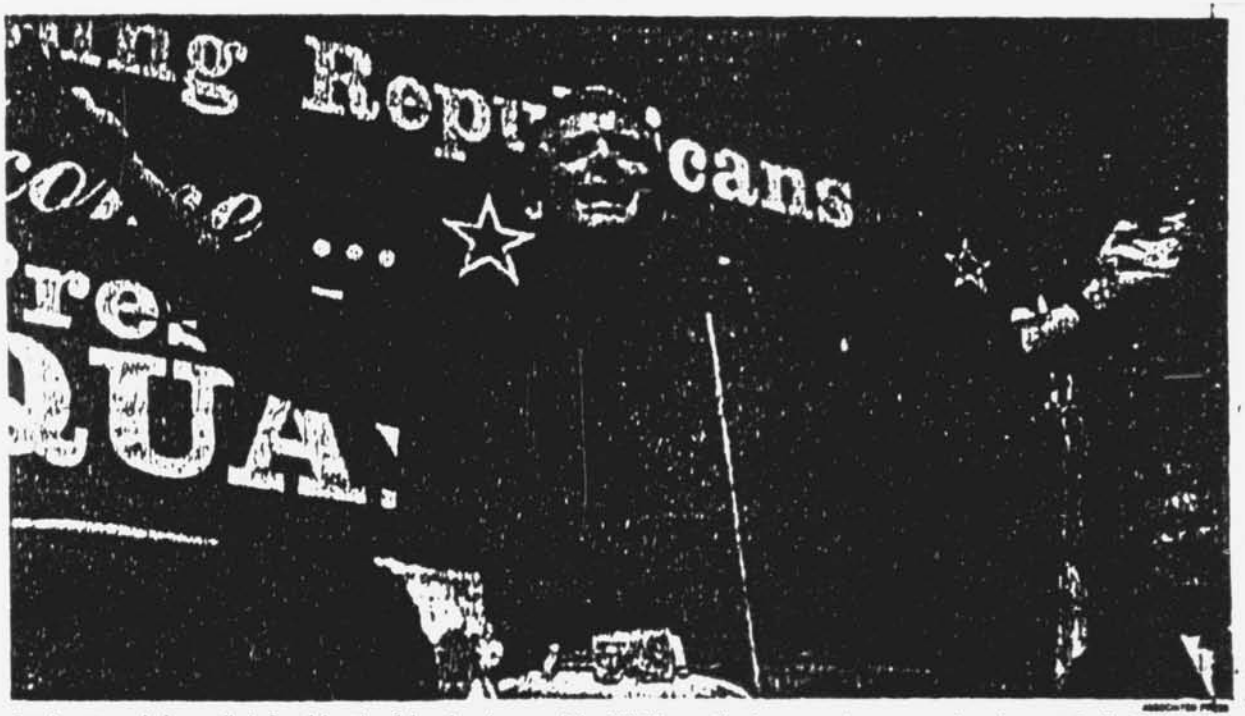
As for Hollywood, Quayle took personal credit for the Emmy awards given to the television show "Murphy Brown," whose fame grew when Quayle criticized the program for "mocking the importance of fathers" by portraying its lead character as deciding to have a child out of wedlock.

"This is the first time a political speech won an Emmy," Quayle said. "This belongs to all Americans that want to stick up for traditional values, thank you Hollywood for recognizing my political speech."

Emphatically denying he ever attacked single mothers, "single mothers are heroines," he said today. Quayle struck a defiant pose toward those he has castigated as "the cultural elite."

"Hollywood, you go ahead and distort what I say," he declared. "You can go ahead and laugh at our values, you can go ahead and ridicule America, but I'm going to continue to speak the truth. I'm going to continue to speak for traditional values, and I'm not going to back down one bit."

In his zeal to attack Clinton today, Quayle sometimes rewove the Democrat's positions beyond recognition. In Grand Junction on Colorado's western slope, Quayle told the crowd: "Bill Clinton will say, 'Well, you know, you can't create jobs and preserve the environment at the same time. You have to have one or the other.'" This, Quayle added, was "nonsense."



Quayle gestures during a rally in Grand Junction, Colo., where he warned that Bill Clinton will raise taxes and pursue a costly environmental policy if elected.

In fact, Clinton's statements on the environment are the opposite of what Quayle said they were. Clinton has said repeatedly that job creation and environmental protection go hand in hand and that being forced to pick one or the other would represent a "false choice."

Asked to explain the discrepancy, David Beckwith, Quayle's press secretary, said no matter what Clinton and his running mate, Albert Gore Jr., have said, "they don't really believe it. They're just saying it because it sounds good." But Quayle dropped the reference to Clinton's environmental record when he spoke here later.

Quayle also said, "Bill Clinton's approach is to ration health care." Clinton has never said he favors rationing, but Beckwith said, "That's what you'd get if you had a government run health care plan."

In Colorado, Quayle's attacks on Clinton were on the issues. But he adopted a personal tone when he met with reporters at the Stockton Airport near here, saying it would be "a big, big risk for the American people to put Clinton in there."

"I don't believe the American people, when it's all said and done, are going to vote for a person that they have grave questions about," he said, "questions about his character, questions about his trust."

As for President Bush's potential problems on the trust issue caused by his broken "no new taxes" pledge, Quayle noted that Bush had declared the tax increase a "mistake."

The difference between Republicans and Democrats on taxes, Quayle said, is that "we've learned, they haven't."

Quayle, Conceding 'Mistake,' Says Bush Won't Raise Taxes

By KAREN DE WITT
Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8 — Vice President Dan Quayle brought what could be called his campaign of distinctions to morning television here today, characterizing this election as a choice between Democratic tax raisers and regulators versus Republican free marketeers who deeply regretted that they were ever party to the 1990 tax increase.

Mr. Quayle said the tax increase had caused the current recession, and he gave one of his most impassioned responses to a question about why voters should trust President Bush not to raise taxes again in a second term.

Mr. Quayle said the President had "reluctantly" gone along with the "Democratic Congress's demand for a tax raise."

'It Was a Mistake'

"He looks back on that and he says not only does he regret it, but it was a mistake," Mr. Quayle said. "We raised taxes on the American people and we put this country right into a recession. We are struggling to get out of it. He's learned. You do learn. He made a mistake. He made one mistake. He'll never make it again. It's been painful to him. It's been painful for the country, but he has learned."

Mr. Quayle then castigated Gov. Bill Clinton and his running mate, Senator Al Gore of Tennessee, for wanting to raise taxes, which Mr. Quayle said would undercut the economy.

Mr. Quayle appeared on the television program for an hour, taking questions from viewers and station reporters.

He defended the Bush Administration's actions on AIDS, noting that spending on AIDS research was greater than on cancer and other life-threatening diseases.

To one man who asked about the seeming anti-homosexual tone at the Republican National Convention, Mr. Quayle told man to ignore the speeches and "listen to what the President and I say."

Mr. Quayle made further attempts to clarify his comments about single mothers and the television character Murphy Brown, saying that his point had been that fathers were needed to help re[illegible] children.

HEADLINE: U.S. business confidence drops for first time since December

BYLINE: By Glenn Somerville

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

KEYWORD:
ECONOMY-CONFIDENCE

BODY:

After rising through the first half of the year, business confidence fell sharply over the summer, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday, as fears mounted that a recovery was withering rapidly.

The chamber's latest Business Confidence Index, measuring the attitudes of 5,515 businessmen and women, shows they turned markedly pessimistic by August after six months of buoyant hope.

The index- a bimonthly average of three subindexes measuring the economic outlook, business sales and hiring prospects six months ahead- fell to 58 in August from 64.2 in June, when it was last compiled.

"You can almost see people's confidence wilting," the business group's chief economist, Lawrence Hunter, said in an interview. It was the first time since December that the index had fallen.

President Bush in a campaign speech, acknowledged that the economy was "lousy" but said America remains an economic superpower and is poised for recovery.

Consumers are losing confidence about job prospects, a fact that worries Bush. Just eight weeks from the Nov. 3 presidential vote, surveys show the shaky recovery has become voters' No. 1 concern.

Bush, speaking to workers in Collegeville near Philadelphia Wednesday, said that with his economic stimulus proposals and education reform initiatives, "we should be able to recover and recover well."

Later in Middletown, N.J., Bush said he would not ever raise taxes again on the American people. "No more tax increases," Bush said.

The prospect of fading consumer and business confidence is a potential double-whammy for the economy: Worried consumers generally cut their spending, and pessimistic businessmen trim hiring plans.

Hunter said the chamber's survey is "a Main Street index" that measures the attitudes of entrepreneurs like those who run small retail businesses, machine shops and restaurants and are close to their customers.

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Nearly three-quarters of those surveyed have fewer than 25 employees.

"The fact that these people see a decline in August when momentum in a recovery should be building is significant," Hunter said. "People are losing confidence that this recovery will blossom."

The Business Confidence Index had risen steadily in surveys conducted in February, April and June before faltering last month.

Hunter said the deterioration "reflects the continuing inability of the economy to rise from recession." Not only is little improvement likely next year, he added, but there is "the distinct possibility that things will get worse."

A separate report on business executive confidence released late Wednesday confirmed the findings of the Chamber study.

The Conference Board, a New York-based business research group, said its business confidence index fell to 62 from 70 in the second quarter. Nevertheless, the reading remained over 50, meaning there were more positive responses than negative, the board said.

The steepest drop in the Chamber's latest confidence report came in the subindex that measures the economic outlook, which declined to 56.7 from 70.9 in June. An index number of 50 indicates the prospect for an expanding economy, while a figure of 70 or more portends strong growth.

Only 37.7 percent of respondents saw an improving economy over the next six months, compared with 54.4 percent in June.

Some 24.4 percent of respondents in August expected the economy to get worse.

Separately on Wednesday, the Commerce Department reported a second straight pickup in wholesale business during July, as sales gained 1 percent to a seasonally adjusted $149.7 billion after a 1.8 percent June rise.

Inventories, which had swollen to a record $200.2 billion in June, were drawn down in July by a slight 0.3 percent, possibly signaling manufacturers were cutting back production until they see indications of stronger sales.

Bush Renews Pledge of No New Taxes, and Says It Means Never

President Plans Blitz to Get Economic Message Across

By MICHAEL WINES

MIDDLETOWN, N.J., Sept. 8 — Traveling to Pennsylvania and New Jersey suburbs, President Bush renewed his no-new-taxes pledge today, promising he would not raise taxes again, ever.

The President campaigned on the growing edge of Hurricane Earl, which ended up defending his management of an economy that even he conceded not long ago was in trouble.

"I mean the economy, Mr. Bush," one heckler, his no-new-taxes pledge and his ads, a bodyguard said he would ... agree to such a plan in a second term ... were asking with one hand ... and increase," he said, and I'm not going to do it again. Ever. Ever.

Bush Vows No More Tax Raises

'88 Pledge Restated On the Eve of Major Economic Address

By Bill McAllister
Washington Post Staff Writer

MIDDLETOWN, N.J., Sept. 9—President Bush, who has spent much of the campaign apologizing for breaking his 1988 vow not to raise taxes, today found a new way of restating his pledge.

"We do not need to raise taxes in this country," Bush said. "I found out the hard way. . . . I'm not going to do it again—never, ever."

Bush's declaration, greeted by applause from a crowd of about 4,000 at a Bush-Quayle rally in this central New Jersey town, came the day before he travels to Detroit to give a major economic address. The themes of his new economic plan will be presented to the nation Thursday night—in the form of a paid political ad.

Bush, who has been dogged by his broken pledge—"read my lips, no new taxes"—told the rally at a Veterans of Foreign Wars post, "I've already vetoed one Democratic tax increase and I'll veto another if I have to. I've got a pen here in my coat just to do that. No more tax increases."

Today, as he did during his speech at the Republican National Convention in Houston, Bush left the impression that Congress had forced his back to the wall in 1990 when he reluctantly agreed to a tax increase as part of the budget agreement. But when the 1990 budget summit was on the brink of collapse, it was Bush who issued a statement volunteering that a tax increase must be part of the bipartisan agreement.

Several of Bush's top advisers still privately say that a tax increase will be needed during the next presidential term to bring the federal budget deficit under control. Despite the 1990 budget agreement Bush now says he regrets, the administration predicts that the budget deficit this year will hit a record $333.5 billion and forecasts deficits of more than $200 billion a year for several years. During Bush's administration, the federal debt has grown by more than $1.4 trillion.

A recent report by the General Accounting Office said "the amount of deficit reduction needed to achieve either balance or surplus will be difficult, if not impossible, to achieve if any major areas of spending or potential revenues are set 'off the table.'"

Before the Republican convention last month, officials of the Bush campaign and administration debated whether the president should reiterate his "no new taxes" pledge in this year's acceptance speech. Then, the decision was not to do it, sources said.

On July 1, Bush said he would not "trap myself again" when asked if he would promise not to raise taxes.

"I'll be damned if I want to get into some other formula so you can come back and remind me of a broken pledge," he said during an interview on CBS's "This Morning." "I'm not going to do that."

Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton has charged that it was irresponsible of Bush to make his "no new taxes" pledge and a breach of trust with the American people to break it. Clinton's economic program calls for higher income taxes on the wealthiest 2 percent of Americans.

Bush had planned to talk about education today, but in appearances in suburban Philadelphia and New Jersey he found his message muddled by questions about the economy.

Asked what he would say to workers who had been laid off by plant closings, the president replied:

"Let me say this on the economy: It is lousy. We know that."

The 11 questions he took during an "Ask George Bush" session at Uniform Tubes Inc. in Trappe, Pa., were poorly but most of them dealt with economic issues and put the president on the defensive. He asserted that he could improve his relations with the next Congress because so many of the members would be new and reaffirmed he will continue to stress "family values" because "we're talking about the fabric of our society."

For his taped presidential speech on the economy, the Bush campaign has reserved five minutes Thursday night on ABC, CBS, NBC and CNN. The tactic exploits an incumbent's advantage because the presentation will resemble an official Oval Office address, although it is a commercial estimated to cost more than $1 million.

Bush's advertising team has been struggling—his last ads were widely panned—and apparently decided that one five-minute buy would garner more attention than a series of 30-second spots.

"He will offer a diagnosis of the economic situation and talk about how his proposals will work to stimulate the economy," said White House spokeswoman Laura Melillo. "It will include some of the things he's been talking about in recent weeks—job training, agricultural markets, health care, legal reform."

While in New Jersey, Bush praised the recently negotiated North American Free Trade Agreement, noting that 250,000 jobs in the Garden State are dependent on foreign investment. Clinton has not endorsed the agreement, saying he needed to see the full text of the accord, which the administration released Tuesday. Bush said Clinton's stance reflected a lack of leadership.

"Nowhere have I seen leadership defined as, 'Hey, I'll get back to you later.'" Bush said.

It Wasn't Quayle's Day In Southern California

By E. J. Dionne Jr. and Kent Jenkins Jr.
Washington Post Staff Writers

Yesterday was not the best of days to be an aide to Vice President Quayle. There was a lot to explain.

First, there was the matter of the crowds. The official schedule said the San Diego County kickoff rally that Quayle would address was supposed to draw 2,000 people. Roughly 500 showed up.

Then there was the vice president's speech to the San Diego Rotary Club. It had been built up by aides as a major address. But it happens that the president is giving his major economic speech today, and a vice president does not upstage his boss. So Quayle's aides busily ratcheted expectations down.

The mood of the day reflected a simple fact: It is not easy to be a Republican in California these days. The latest polls show President Bush trailing even in San Diego County, a place Republicans have to win if they are to have any chance of taking the state's 54 electoral votes. Bad economic times lead even Quayle's aides to concede, in the words of one, that California "is probably the worst state for us out there."

No wonder: The lead story in yesterday's San Diego Union-Tribune was about Hughes Aircraft Co. shifting 2,000 defense jobs to Tucson.

None of this seemed to faze the public Quayle, who was all enthusiasm and broad smiles. In his speech, Quayle acknowledged the discontent, insisted that the administration really cared and argued that Bill Clinton would make things worse.

While Quayle tried to reassure California voters that he and the president did understand how bad the economy is, Democratic vice presidential candidate Albert Gore Jr., campaigning in Louisiana, turned his attention from America's ailing economy to its lingering drug problem, accusing the president of waging a "phony war" that has left the nation's appetite for drugs unchecked.

Speaking to public school students in Shreveport and New Orleans, Gore sharply attacked Bush's record on crime and drugs, a traditional area of political strength for Republicans. He accused Bush of appointing "a defeated political crony" to run his anti-drug program, and of failing to curb the supply of illegal drugs or the demand for them.

Much of Gore's criticism was aimed at National Drug Policy Director Bob Martinez, whom Bush appointed after Martinez failed to win a second term as governor of Florida.

Martinez "has not earned the respect of either the drug abuse professional community or the law enforcement community," Gore told high school students in Shreveport. "He has presided over a failed war against drugs."

Gore's campaign aides made sure reporters knew that the Tennessee senator's remarks came on the third anniversary of a nationally televised anti-drug speech Bush made that subsequently caused him considerable embarrassment. In the speech, Bush held up a bag of crack cocaine that undercover agents had purchased in a park across the street from the White House. It was later learned that the agents lured the dealer to the park at behest of White House officials.

Bush also went to school yesterday, but his topic for the 2,700 students and townfolk at Norristown Area High School, northwest of Philadelphia, was his rival's record on education.

He said Arkansas ranked 47th in percentage of adults with high school diplomas in 1980 and now is 48th. "Today they're dead last in the percentage of adults with college degrees," Bush said.

For good measure, the president also slammed Clinton's environmental record, saying the Institute for Southern Studies ranked Arkansas "dead last" for environmental initiatives and 42nd for river and stream pollution. That has led to a boom in night fishing in the state because, the president said, "it's so easy to spot the fish: They glow at night."

Dionne reported from California and Jenkins from Louisiana. Staff writer Bill McAllister, traveling with Bush, contributed to this report.

Bush Offers Agenda To Revive Economy

Proposals Repackaged in 'Renewal' Plan

The Washington Post - September 11, 1992

By Ann Devroy
Washington Post Staff Writer

DETROIT, Sept. 10—President Bush today drew together a disparate package of his administration's past proposals to revive the nation's economy and reintroduced them under a new umbrella that he said will be the basis for a second-term "agenda for American renewal."

In a speech to the Economic Club of Detroit, a five-minute campaign commercial broadcast tonight on four television networks and a 29-page document sent to Republicans nationwide, Bush sought to convince American voters that he has a coherent plan to achieve a goal of almost doubling the size of the U.S. economy. The plan, he argued, is based on principles of limited government and reliance on the marketplace that differ significantly from those of his Democratic opponent, Bill Clinton.

Bush's presentation, the first substantive effort of the new White House team installed last month by Chief of Staff James A. Baker III when he arrived from the State Department, provides a unifying rationale for many of the administration's previous initiatives. It offered two major proposals that were new—to "right-size" the executive branch of the federal government by reducing and eliminating agencies and cutting salaries and personnel, and to launch a "strategic network" of free trade agreements across the globe.

"I want America to seize this moment," the president said. "I want to stimulate entrepreneurial capitalism, not punish it; I want to empower people to make their own choices, not yoke them to new bureaucracies. I want a government that spends less, regulates less and taxes less. And I will fight without hesitation . . . because Americans never retreat, we always compete."

The political rationale for the repackaging was clear in Bush's introduction by Michigan's Republican Gov. John Engler, who called the president "the man with the plan." Bush has been widely criticized for going from one election-year economic plan to another in order to convince voters he understands and will work on reviving the stagnant economy.

"Perhaps the point that we haven't conveyed effectively," a senior aide said, "is how [prior Bush proposals] all fit together. So that's what this is trying to do today, to show the comprehensive approach."

In a statement issued from his Little Rock headquarters, Clinton rejected the package as "more of the same: more tax cuts for upper-income people and more deficits and less growth. We've tried this for 12 years. Now, just two months before the election, the president repackages it."

At the same time, a statement put out by Clinton's campaign said that many ideas included in the speech—such as cutting the White House staff and preparing the American people "for a lifetime of learning"—echoed Clinton's own proposals.

Among the guiding principles in Bush's speech was his pledge to cut taxes and reduce spending. As "just an example" of how $132 billion in spending reductions could be used, he cited a 1 percent cut in income tax rates and a 5 percent reduction in the small business tax rate. As to other specifics of his budget proposals, Bush would not commit himself to such a 1 percent reduction.

The agenda distributed to Republicans lists a Baker's dozen—13 legislative items—that Bush said will be his top priorities the first year of his second term if he is re-elected. The purpose of the list is to gain a voter mandate for a specific legislative package, something Bush did not do in his first presidential campaign.

"Many people have said in the past that candidates don't go out and ask for a mandate, they don't talk about the ideas they want to try and accomplish as soon as they get elected," said a senior official. "These are the 13 things he wants to get done."

Among the familiar items on the list are Bush's education package, which includes a proposal to allow the use of federal vouchers for private schools, his health care proposals outlined this year, revision of the legal system, limits on congressional terms and a ban on contributions by political action committees, all of which the Democratic Congress has rejected in whole or part the past two years.

In the economic realm, the last of top priorities includes such Bush favorites as giving the president the power to veto individual budget items and a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget, plus "a package to cut spending" that includes the cap on the growth of mandatory spending and the taxpayer's "checkoff" unveiled at the Republican National Convention last month.

The directly economic priorities also include a job training program Bush unveiled last month, approval of the North American Free Trade Agreement and new trade negotiating authority for completion of trade pacts in Latin America, eastern Europe and the Pacific.

The overall goal is economic growth and the specific pledge from Bush was to almost double the U.S. economy to a gross domestic product of $10 trillion by early in the next century. An aide said that is achievable assuming a growth rate of 3 to 4 percent, and a similar inflation rate, an ambitious outline for an economy growing at less than 1 percent during his administration.

An official called the goal "useful" in telling voters that Bush's major effort will be promoting growth, although a pledge Bush made in his 1988 acceptance speech to create 30 million jobs over eight years has been ridiculed by Clinton because there has been an overall loss of private-sector jobs since Bush became president.

In the pledge to "right-size" the executive branch, Bush promised to cut the budget of the White House operation by 33 percent if Congress agrees to cut its operations the same amount, and said he would cut the salaries of all federal employees earning more than $75,000 a year by 5 percent. The Office of Personnel Management said 54,102 federal workers would be affected by the pay cut, which would exclude postal workers, uniformed military and judicial workers.

The president named only one agency, the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, as arguing that government had proliferated into too many agencies, bureaus, offices and departments.

Bush's 40-minute address and the "Agenda for American Renewal" document borrowed a concept from Baker's farewell speech as secretary of state last month in asserting that after focussing in his first term on the end of the Cold War and its global implications he is now poised to "target America."

"For America to be safe and strong, we must meet the defining challenge of the 1990s," Bush said. "To win the economic competition, to win the peace. We must be a military superpower, an economic superpower and an export superpower."

Elaborating on his philosophy of government, Bush outlined a list of his beliefs he said would guide his agenda. Among them were his belief that "we are a nation of special individuals not special interests," and his belief in the entrepreneurial power of business to renew the economy and the goal of government to avoid overregulating and overtaxing business.

Bush listed as well the theme that government can help people not with handouts but with giving them "the means and confidence to make the decisions that matter," such as educational choice for their children and job training as a component of welfare.

Bush listed the preparation of America's children for the workplace of the future and helping American businesses sharpen their competitive edge to provide jobs for the next generation as other major fronts for his efforts.

Promoting economic security for Americans, another of Bush's major goals, will be accomplished by "developing individual capability, not dependency. And that independence comes through the private sector, not the government."

Government's role, he said, would to help individuals adjust to a changing global marketplace with job training, better health care and pension programs. And for those now left behind, Bush said his programs, from welfare reform to urban homeownership, are aimed at "making individual discipline and self-reliance the goal of all of our programs."

With less than two months to go in the election campaign, Bush aides acknowledged it is late to offer voters a coherent rationale on which the president seeks a second term. "Better late than never," said one aide.

One of the first questions to Bush after his speech was why he had waited so long to give an economic agenda. Noting he had addressed himself to many of the issues before, Bush said, "What I've tried to do here is bring all the elements together . . . in a comprehensive way."

A senior aide briefing reporters was asked what was new. Listing the effort to "integrate" various Bush proposals the aide added, "Everything doesn't have to be new to be good or to work."

BUSH PLANS SALE OF 72 F-15 PLANES TO SAUDI ARABIA

MORE CAMPAIGN LARGESS

President Travels to Missouri to Announce Proposal That Could Save Many Jobs

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Special to The New York Times

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11 — President Bush tore apart his campaign schedule today to put on another demonstration of the powers of the rival Office, dropping into St. Louis to hand out what the White House called a $9 billion deal to sell advanced F-15 fighters to Saudi Arabia.

It was the second time in nine days that Mr. Bush had dispensed this sort of plum contract to the American arms industry, helping secure thousands of jobs in states like Missouri, Texas and California, where a major part of the battle for the Presidency will be fought this fall.

Mr. Bush made the announcement at a time when it poses the most political risk, with the Labor Party's ascension to power in Israel and clear signs of progress in the Middle East peace process, neither the Israeli Government nor American Jews are likely to put up the sort of opposition to the sale that they might have just a few months ago.

Congress Unlikely to Block Sale

Congress, which has 30 days to try to block the sale if it chooses to do so, is unlikely to oppose a job-saving deal of this kind during a campaign that is turning on the nation's sluggish economy and high unemployment rate.

According to the White House, the President has now given out more than $23 billion in Federal subsidies, foreign-arms-sales contracts and hurricane-related disaster assistance in slightly more than a week as he campaigns for re-election in a nation gripped by recession and, according to opinion polls, unhappy with Mr. Bush's economic performance.

Some Misstep Prone Aides Seen

Some of this largess, notably the disaster relief, comes at the expense of taxpayers. But the arms sales, particularly bring new money into the country. Last week the President flew to Fort Worth to announce a $6 billion sale of 150 F-16 fighters to Taiwan. Today he canceled an appearance at a trucking company in Joplin, Mo., at the last minute and flew to the McDonnell Douglas aircraft plant here for about a half hour to tell a cheering crowd that he was approving the sale of 72 F-15 fighter planes to the Saudis.

Standing in front of a newly painted F-15, its cockpit canopy ajar, Mr. Bush told the workers that "the military technology you produce is the finest in the world" — the same compliment that he paid to the F-16 production line at the General Dynamics plant in Texas last week.

"I am aware that the past few years have been difficult for this company and a lot of Americans as they adjust to a new future," Mr. Bush said the McDonnell Douglas workers here, adding, "In this time of economic uncertainty, I want to do everything I can to keep Americans at work."

White House aides and campaign officials explained today's sudden change of plans by saying Mr. Bush had made his final decision on the sale

Thursday night. But it had been widely known in Washington that the decision was made, by and large, after Mr. Bush received assurances from Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin last month that the Israeli Government would not object.

Today the Conference of Presidents of American Jewish Organizations said it was "wary" of the proposed sale but pointedly did not mention any plans to fight it — especially since the President had given assurances that he intended "to maintain Israel's qualitative edge" in armaments, the organization's statement said.

In Washington this afternoon, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney met with the Israeli Ambassador, Zalman Shoval, apparently to reassure him of Washington's commitment to maintaining Israel's technological edge in the region.

In Congress, Representative Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, the House majority leader, has made it clear he would support the sale. It would, after all, produce jobs as or near his district.

Some Objection Expressed

But Senator James M. Jeffords of Vermont, the ranking Republican on the Senate Subcommittee on Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs, did offer a commonly voiced objection when he said: "I'm greatly disturbed about it. If we're the world leader and if we're serious about the proliferation of weapons in the Middle East, we ought not be out there selling to Saudi Arabia. We ought to be working extremely hard on the British and anyone else not to sell to them."

> Another plum contract for the nation's arms industry.

A GIFT FOR McDONNELL DOUGLAS

The sale of F-15's will allow McDonnell Douglas to retain one of its largest and most lucrative weapons programs. Business Day, page 35.

The announcement lent some news value to what was otherwise a day of small-bore events in small Missouri towns where Mr. Bush promoted his economic programs.

At Missouri Southern State College in Joplin, the glee club warmed up the crowd by singing "It's My Party and I'll Cry If I Want To." Gazing out at the campus lawn, Mr. Bush spoke of the First Family's dog, saying, "I think Millie would like it out here in this oval. I'll tell you."

In Joplin and at a job training center in Excelsior Springs near Kansas City, Mr. Bush tried out a new punch line intended for his television appeal. Borrowing from the popular horror film series "Nightmare on Elm Street" to press his argument that the Democratic nominee, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, is trying to play on fear in his campaign, Mr. Bush said, "Governor Clinton is running a Freddie Krueger candidacy."

Speech Before Robertson Group

Mr. Bush left Missouri for Virginia Beach, where he spoke tonight to the Rev. Pat Robertson's political organization, a chore that Mr. Bush finds politically necessary as he seeks to shore up his right wing.

As a matter of policy, the F-15 sale did not carry the same impact as the sale of the planes to Taiwan, which marked a reversal of 10 years of American policy. The United States has sold 83 F-15's to Saudi Arabia over the years, starting in the Carter Administration. But as a master of politics, both sales carried the same implications as Mr. Bush tries to put the power of his incumbency behind his campaign for re-election.

White House aides and Pentagon officials said the sale would produce $9 billion in revenue, $5 billion for the 72 planes themselves and the rest in contracts for parts and maintenance, and generate $3 billion in taxes. The White House said it would save 40,000 jobs in Missouri, California, Connecticut and 42 other states.

Without the deal, the F-15 production line would shut down in November. The Bush Administration canceled the F-15 program as part of the cuts in military spending.

Jobs Termed 'Major Factor'

The White House insisted, as it has with each measure of Federal largesse Mr. Bush has doled out in recent days, that his action today had nothing to do with the campaign. "It provides a credible Saudi defensive deterrent, helps protect vital American interests in the Persian Gulf and reduces the amount of U.S. force needed in the region," a White House statement said.

Marlin Fitzwater, Mr. Bush's spokesman, said the jobs involved were a "major factor" in the decision. But Senator Christopher S. Bond, Republican of Missouri, said, "Anybody who says that an announcement of the sale in 1992 is for politics is full of beans."

Mr. Bond predicted that the sale would not be blocked by Congress, which does not have to give its approval but can block the deal with a two-thirds majority vote within 30 days.

Bush Focuses on Economy In Talk to Fundamentalists

'Family Values,' Jobs Connected, President Says

By David Von Drehle
and Michael Isikoff
Washington Post Staff Writers

VIRGINIA BEACH, Sept. 11— President Bush took his streamlined economic agenda out for a spin today but as sometimes happens with his pruned new vehicles, this one wound up bouncing through a few detours.

Ultimately, however, he managed to stay on track. Struggling off suggestions from advisers that he deliver a message of tolerance, Bush delivered his economic pitch here tonight to the fundamentalist Christian Coalition, the group many credit, and many blame, for pushing last month's Republican National Convention dramatically to the right.

The whole purpose of Bush's 29-page "Agenda for American Renewal," which he unveiled in a Thursday afternoon speech and a blitz of five-minute television ads Thursday night, was to satisfy the public clamor for an economic plan. That clamor seemed to intensify as the conservative "family values" program of the Christian right sank in the polls after the convention.

Tonight, Bush said "family values" and his economic agenda are one and the same. "One major threat to the American family is a weak economy," Bush said. "Today family budgets are stretched by rising health care costs. Low-income families are hurt because too often welfare encourages dependency, not personal responsibility. And when a mom or dad loses a job, the impact is felt first right at home."

According to polls, many voters have not taken well to the fervent antiabortion, anti-gay and anti-feminist rhetoric typified by the Christian Coalition, the political arm of evangelist Pat Robertson.

Bush's appearance here drew fire from Democrats who charged that the president was lending credence to what they described as the "religious bigotry" and intolerance preached by Robertson.

"The Republican Party has now been taken hostage, and there's a gun to its head held by Pat Robertson," said Woody E. Stallings, the local Clinton-Gore campaign coordinator, at a demonstration at a nearby church. "We don't want a White House that lets Pat Robertson dictate what it preaches to its people."

In recent days, Vice President Quayle, a favorite of the Christian right, has appeared to be trying to soften his line, and tonight Bush seemed to pull down some of the harsher rhetoric of the convention. "When I talk about the importance of family, I don't mean to suggest that we should somehow go back to the days of Ozzie and Harriet. That may be wrong," he said. "Nor do I pass judgment on what kind of family you live in, whether both parents work or just one parent or you're a part of a single-parent family."

Bush's economic speech appeared to be a way of acquainting the president's sometimes troublesome allies with his new battle plan.

Along the way, though, came several detours. Bush began the day in Joplin, Mo., dutifully ticking off the six key points of his economic plan, but he soon overwhelmed his own pitch at a fighter-plane factory in St. Louis, where he announced the sale of 72 F-15 jets to Saudi Arabia.

Bush also matched his economic pitch—a combination of free trade, job training, vouchers for private schools, welfare reform and government cuts—with a new attack on Democrat Bill Clinton for "playing on the fears" of the American people.

"Instead of offering serious ideas of his own, he simply says, 'Watch out, senior citizens. Watch out, veterans. Watch out, disabled Americans,'" Bush said in Joplin. "Governor Clinton is . . . more interested in playing on people's fears than in dealing with this country's real problems."

George Stephanopoulos, communications director of the Clinton campaign, scoffed at the accusation. "The only thing Americans have to fear is four more years of George Bush economic policy," he said. "Four more years of higher taxes, higher regulation and higher unemployment."

The Christian Coalition session, billed as a "Road to Victory" conference, included workshops on lobbying state legislatures, influencing local school boards, the use of computers in grass-roots organizing and developing winning strategies in electoral campaigns. Some conservative activists say the nuts-and-bolts focus of the session is another sign of the increasing political sophistication of the religious right.

Founded by Robertson from the remnants of his 1988 presidential campaign, the political action and lobbying group has spent millions in recent years organizing evangelical Christians at the state and local level.

One sign of the group's increasing influence within the party was the presence, in addition to Bush, of Education Secretary Lamar Alexander and former drug policy director William J. Bennett at the conference. "Pat Robertson has a right to say what he thinks, say what he believes, and I'm glad he does it and I'm glad to be on its side," Alexander said, winning thunderous applause from the crowd of more than 1,500.

Quayle Visits Hurricane Victims in Tent City

By KAREN DE WITT
Special to The New York Times

HOMESTEAD, Fla., Sept. 12 — Vice President Dan Quayle came to this hurricane-flattened city today to hear from victims of the disaster and to reassure wary Florida voters that the Bush Administration cares.

"We're still committed to Homestead," said Mr. Quayle, who was accompanied by his wife, Marilyn, and two of the couple's three children. "We've come to hear from the people and see what kind of requests we get."

President Bush has twice visited the areas devastated by the Aug. 24 hurricane, but it was Mr. Quayle's first visit.

Among the Federal aid President Bush promised was $480 million to rebuild Homestead Air Force Base, which the Pentagon estimates added $405 million a year to the local economy before it was destroyed by the storm. But on Thursday the Senate Appropriations Committee cut that money from the President's $7.6 billion fund for rebuilding South Florida.

Mr. Quayle today called the base "a linchpin to the community" and said that it should not be "closed by Mother Nature."

He later visited a tent city, where he participated in a round-table discussion with eight of residents, and toured two disaster application centers and a Red Cross kitchen.

Under a lowering sky with a thunderstorm threatening, the Vice President and his wife listened to the tales of the hurricane's homeless.

Many, like Carmen Melchor, were thankful they were sheltered and fed and alive. "We're fine," said Mrs. Melchor, whose husband, Jose Ortiz, was off helping with volunteer cleanup work.

An onlooker, Maritza Gonzales, had arrived in the camp with her three children and her husband, John Gonzales, three days earlier. She said the apartment they had been sharing with 14 other people had become too crowded. "I used to be a housewife, but now I don't have a house," she said, adding that she had money to rent an apartment but could not find one.

Earlier today, Mr. Quayle, who heads the White House group that makes space policy, visited Cape Canaveral for a space shuttle launching.

He found a political opening when he was asked by a local television reporter why little had been said about space programs during this Presidential campaign.

Mr. Quayle responded that he hoped it was because there was a bipartisan consensus on NASA, but added: I don't believe that's really the case. As you know, the Democratic Congress attempted to kill the space station again this week. We were able to stop that. I'm afraid that if George Bush isn't reelected, we're going to see rather dramatic cuts in our space exploration budget. And that will not be good news for the people of Florida."

The Republicans

Bush Is Harsh, His Backers Harsher

By MICHAEL WINES
Special to The New York Times

YORBA LINDA, Calif., Sept. 13 — President Bush opened a three-day campaign swing through the Far West today with a pungent political attack on Gov. Bill Clinton before several thousand backers at a rally. But here in Orange County, a land more Republican than Pat Nixon's cloth coat, Mr. Bush's remarks were easily the day's mildest comments.

Indeed, Mr. Bush was nearly upstaged by two earlier speakers, former President Ronald Reagan and Representative Robert K. Dornan of California. Mr. Reagan drew a larger crowd, and thunderous cheers, with a speech that disparaged Mr. Clinton's efforts to avoid military service during the Vietnam War.

Mr. Dornan, a bearded, redheaded and very conservative politician who is well known for his rhetorical flourishes, threw away the Emily Post guide to politics. He told the crowd a joke based on past accusations about Mr. Clinton's marital problems, and alluded to the draft issue by calling the Democrat "Chicken Little of Little Rock."

When Mr. Clinton was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University during the Vietnam War, Mr. Dornan went on, he spent his time in a pub, "eating compulsively to the point of exhaustion," "throwing darts" and "drinking ale" while other men his age fought and died.

A deputy White House spokeswoman, Judy Smith, said later that Mr. Dornan's remarks were his own. "What we're trying to do is focus the campaign on issues," she said. "He's entitled to his opinion. Free speech."

But whether they come from surrogates or the President himself, comparisons between Mr. Clinton's lack of a military record and Mr. Bush's record as a Navy pilot in World War II are clearly the wave of the future in this campaign. There were even suggestions that Mr. Bush would personally raise the issue during this trip, perhaps during a proposed speech on Tuesday at a National Guard convention in Utah.

Mr. Bush's staff is negotiating his appearance at the convention. Asked whether the President would raise Mr. Clinton's draft record there, the campaign spokeswoman, Torie Clarke, declined to comment.

Today, in Orange County, Mr. Bush stuck largely to his standard stump speech. Recent polls suggest that he has narrowed Mr. Clinton's nationwide lead to as few as 10 percentage points, from 25 points before the Republican National Convention. Mr. Bush's strategists are hoping this trip, combined with recent White House decisions to help out California's depressed military sector, will narrow that gap still further.

'No Rocket Scientist'

Today, Mr. Bush accused Mr. Clinton of supporting budget cuts that would turn the military into a force "whose idea of high-tech weaponry is the Super Soaker water gun."

"He wants to cut it $60 billion beyond what military experts and our civilian experts tell me is right," Mr. Bush said. "These cuts would cost as many as one million jobs in defense, especially in California's hard-hit aerospace industry."

The President also took a poke at a recent speaking lapse by Mr. Clinton, in which the Democrat confused the Patriot missile — the air-defense weapon that downed Iraqi Scud missiles during the Gulf War — with so-called "smart bombs" that can be guided by laser down chimney shafts and through windows.

"Governor Clinton may be a Rhodes scholar," Mr. Bush said. "But he's no rocket scientist."

The President's California trip begins a tour of Washington, Oregon, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah that will dwell mostly on environmental issues.

HEADLINE: Bush, Clinton Offer Northwest Voters Views On Jobs, Environment

BYLINE: By TERENCE HUNT, AP White House Correspondent

DATELINE: COLVILLE, Wash.

KEYWORD: Political Rdp

BODY:

President Bush battled Democrat Bill Clinton for votes in the Pacific Northwest on Monday, declaring that environmental laws should be changed to "make people more important than owls."

Bush vowed not to sign an extension of the Endangered Species Act unless it's rewritten to give more emphasis to economic priorities and timber harvesting.

Clinton, campaigning in Oregon, maintained that he was the candidate who could best promote economic development while at the same time preserving the environment.

"I know that you can be pro-growth and pro-environment," the Democratic nominee told a crowd in Portland.

Bush told a cheering audience at a lumber company near the Canadian border that the balance between the environment and jobs has been lost.

"It is time to make people more important than owls," he said. "It's time to put the mills back to work."

Bush delivered his promise on a trip through timber- and spotted-owl country of Washington and Oregon, accusing Clinton of favoring the environment rather than jobs. Thousands of timber workers have lost their jobs because of protection of the owl and an industry slump.

Clinton, who has been endorsed by both the Sierra Club and the League of Conservation Voters as well as by major unions representing 125,000 timber workers, maintains that the Republicans are asking voters to make a false choice between jobs and the environment.

" Bush gave us neither. We think you can have both," said Bruce Reed, one of Clinton's domestic policy advisers. "The choice is between George Bush and jobs."

After his Portland appearance, Clinton traveled to Eugene, Ore., where he was visiting with five families whose lives have been affected by changes in the timber industry.

He has called for a summit on the spotted owl - an idea that Bush derided as "false hope." "No more studies, let's change the law," Bush said. "My opponent will not fight to change the law to restore balance."

Clinton said earlier this year that "science should be the sole criterion in determining whether a species should be listed as endangered."

The 19-year-old Endangered Species Act has protected more than 500 animals and plants, including the bald eagle, grizzly bear, peregrine falcon and whooping crane.

The Fish and Wildlife Service declared the northern spotted owl a threatened species in June 1990, citing excessive logging of old-growth forests as a threat to its survival.

Since then, logging of the Northwest's national forests has come to a virtual standstill as federal courts have found government harvesting practices to be in violation of U.S. environmental laws.

Bush said the law was "being used by people with extreme views, particularly here and in Oregon, to achieve in the courts what no sane elected official would ever have voted for - the complete lockup of the most productive forests in the entire United States."

"The Endangered Species Act was intended as a shield for species against the effects of major construction projects like highways and dams - not a sword aimed at the jobs, families and communities of entire regions like the Northwest."

Bush said he would not sign an extension of the Endangered Species Act "unless it gives greater consideration to jobs and to families and to communities, too. And I will not sign it without a specific plan in place to harvest enough timber to keep timber families working in 1993 and beyond."

He also vowed to fight court injunctions "that have put an economic stranglehold on the Northwest, in order to free up the timber that we need today, because the families and the timber communities of the Pacific Northwest need relief now."

Bush began his attack on Clinton in California, saying, "In his zeal to capture his party's nomination, Gov. Clinton has made every promise to every environmental group who sent him a survey.

"He and his running mate are advancing a philosophy that goes back to where command and control regulation is the only solution, a philosophy that will not only cut jobs but could impede technology, environmental progress, not promote it," the president said at a sparsely attended morning address at a wilderness preserve outside of San Diego.

presidency. He carried California by just 51 percent in 1988 and lost Oregon and Washington, and that was when the economy of each state was in better shape.

Endangered Species Act Must Change, Bush Says

People and Jobs 'Deserve Protection Too'

By Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writer

COLVILLE, Wash., Sept. 14—President Bush vowed today that he would not sign an extension of the Endangered Species Act unless it is changed to take more account of the economic cost of protecting threatened wildlife because "people and their jobs deserve protection too."

Bush came to this remote logging town to make the case that he would strike the proper balance between jobs and the environment while Democratic rival Bill Clinton and his running mate, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. (D-Tenn.), would sacrifice the well-being of workers to environmental extremists who are "twisting" the law.

The 1973 law designed to protect endangered species from extinction [illegible] has become a major hunting [illegible] Pacific Northwest, [illegible] the spotted owl [illegible] Federal Register [illegible] action of National Forests in Oregon and Washington" and been blamed for the loss of thousands of jobs for loggers and other forest products industry workers.

The spotted owl, which Bush once described as "that little hairy, feathery guy" inhabits western Washington, but the president told a rally here in the northeastern part of the state that "it is time to make people more important than owls."

Campaigning in Oregon and Washington four years ago, Bush promoted himself as the environmental president. Today, revisiting both states after a campaign stop in Southern California, he presented himself as the environmental president with a healthy dose of economic reason, in contrast to the Democratic ticket.

"My opponent talks about putting people first," Bush said, referring to the title of Clinton's economic plan. "Well, we can start right here in the Pacific Northwest."

Bush quoted a passage from Gore's recent book, "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit" calling for protection of the spotted owl because "the jobs will be lost anyway."

"I challenge Governor Clinton. Do you agree with your running mate? Do you endorse the book that you once called magnificent?"

Clinton was also in Oregon today to talk about the dispute between environmental groups and the timber industry and told a small group in Eugene that there should be "no net loss" of jobs because of restrictions on logging to protect the spotted owl or because of other environmental concerns.

Clinton met in a back yard in Eugene with a group of people whose economic well-being is tied to timber, who told him of hardships that had occurred because of environmental lawsuits that have tied up the sale of timber from federal lands.

He said that part of a $100 million tax subsidy program now used to encourage the export of raw logs should be diverted to retrain timber industry workers, upgrade logging mills and otherwise bolster the Pacific Northwest's economy.

"I can't promise to make things the way they were," Clinton said. "We can't go back to that."

Environmentalists have challenged Bush's diagnosis of the Northwest's timber industry woes, saying the loss of jobs that occurred there stems from a combination of automation, increasing exports of raw unprocessed logs and a series of court decisions that have halted logging because the Bush administration was in violation of environmental laws including the National Environmental Policy Act and the National Forest Management Act.

"The Endangered Species Act is not what has led to injunctions [against logging] in the Northwest," said Kevin P. Kirchner, an attorney with the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund. "The administration's failure to comply with the National Environmental Policy Act and the National Forest Management Act have led to the injunctions."

Appearing in Rancho Penasquitos, near San Diego, before coming here, Bush simultaneously attacked Clinton's environmental record in

> "I can't promise to make things the way they were. We can't go back to that."
> —Gov. Bill Clinton

Arkansas and suggested that Clinton would be an environmental extremist if elected president.

"Under Governor Clinton, Arkansas ranks 50th, worst in the country, for utility of state environmental initiatives, according to an independent analysis," Bush said. "But it's his goal to capture his party's nomination. Governor Clinton has made every promise to every environmental group who sent him a survey."

Later at Burrel Lumber Co. in Medford, Ore., Bush derided Clinton as "Governor Doublespeak."

Describing the Endangered Species Act here today, Bush said, "The law is broken and it must be fixed."

Clinton told the back yard gathering: "If I win this race in 50-odd days, I am determined to break this logjam. You're entitled at least to have all these federal government agencies on the same side and to have a coherent policy and to have a commitment to the region and to the people that resolves this in a fair and balanced way."

The Endangered Species Act, which restricts development or other activities once a species is declared to be in danger of extinction, is up for reauthorization this year. With the issue of jobs versus the environment a politically volatile one, it will not be considered by Congress this year. However, the law will remain in effect with passage of the Interior Department appropriations bill, now before a congressional conference committee.

Under a 1978 amendment, the law allows for exemptions if protection of a threatened species jeopardizes a national or regional economic interest.

After the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service declared the owl a threatened species in June 1990 and said excessive logging was a threat to its survival, Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan Jr. convened a Cabinet-level committee, nicknamed the God Squad, which in May granted limited authority to permit logging on about 1,700 acres of federal land in Oregon.

The administration has also submitted a plan to Congress that would reduce the number of acres set aside to save the owl from 5.4 million to 2.8 million. The administration acknowledges that change would "highly likely" result in the extinction or near extinction of the owl after more than a century.

Democratic state Auditor J.D. Williams alleged Tuesday that his Republican opponent for Idaho s 2nd Congressional District seat has not taken a firm stand against cutting Social Security or Medicare benefits.

"Is he in favor of using them to balance the budget?" Williams asked.

But the campaign manager for state Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo, the GOP nominee, said Tuesday that Williams "evidently has been distracted and has missed something along the way."

"From the beginning Mike has said he opposes any cuts in Social Security and he supports maintaining the integrity of the Social Security trust fund, pure and simple," John Hoehne said. "That deal with the American public is a deal that ought to be honored under any and all circumstances."

Crapo, an Idaho Falls lawyer, was on a fund-raising trip in Washington, D.C., Tuesday.

Williams questioned during a Boise news conference whether Crapo would be willing to use the Social Security trust fund to help balance the federal budget. He cited a Crapo campaign flyer on the budget and federal spending that he said does not address the issue.

"We cannot borrow, mortgage or raid the Social Security trust fund. A deal is a deal," Williams said. "When the congressional ax swings on budget cuts, it should not fall on seniors' programs."

But Hoehne said the flyer Williams referred to was "totally focused on reform. It s not intended to cover everything from soup to nuts."

Williams also criticized Crapo s call for across-the-board spending cuts to help reduce the budget deficit, calling them "chicken." He said only selective cuts based on goals set for each federal program and agency would ensure programs that help people most are not eliminated.

"I will have the discipline as a congressman" to vote against funding beyond deficit-reduction targets, Williams said, even if the appropriation would affect his district.

"Once those goals are set, I will not vote to exceed those goals."

Entitlements - except for Social Security and Medicare - also should be subject to cuts, he said, but only in annual increases to existing benefits.

Meanwhile, Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings challenged his Republican U.S. Senate opponent, Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne, to join him in opposing the Bush administration s North American Free Trade Agreement.

"This is a bad agreement that sends Idaho jobs to other countries," Stallings said in a statement issued Tuesday.

After campaigning Monday with Vice President Dan Quayle in Caldwell and Boise, Kempthorne acknowledged that Idaho sugar producers are concerned that the agreement will enable other countries to dump low-cost, subsidized sugar onto the U.S. market.

Kempthorne said he urged Quayle to have decisions on the issue made in the open, "not settled in a back room." But he said he did not yet want to take a stand on the agreement because it would eliminate the opportunity to be part of the bargaining process.

"I want to be a player," Kempthorne said. "I have to make sure it will be a good thing for us."

But Stallings said the agreement clearly was bad for Idaho's economy, and he accused Kempthorne of waffling on the issue while jobs are at stake.

"Idaho needs a U.S. senator who leads, not follows," the four-term Democrat said. "Idaho's sugar beet, potato and wheat growers need a senator who will speak up strongly and loudly for them, not straddle the fence."

CAMPAIGN '92

Bush, Clinton and the Draft Issue: En Garde at the Guard

By Edward Walsh and Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writers

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 15 — President Bush and Gov. Bill Clinton dueled at a discreetly safe distance today during separate appearances before the annual convention of the National Guard Association here, never directly addressing the question of Clinton's attempts to stay out of the military during the Vietnam War.

An expected confrontation over Clinton's draft record did not materialize as Bush spoke carefully and for the most part indirectly about what he called "the controversy swirling around Governor Clinton" while the Democratic presidential nominee ignored the subject.

But the president did pointedly and at times emotionally speak about the "awful authority" invested in the commander in chief, saying that every presidential candidate should be held to the "highest standard" because he "might have to decide if our sons or daughters should knock early on death's door." Bush also implicitly tried to contrast Clinton's handling of his draft history with the "candor" displayed by Vice President Quayle four years ago when he came under attack for joining the National Guard during the Vietnam War.

In the end, it was left to officials of the rival campaigns to claim tactical victory in the near-confrontation set up when Clinton abruptly altered his schedule so he could appear here today and personally respond to an expected Bush attack on his draft record.

Torie Clarke, the Bush-Quayle campaign press secretary, said that in changing his schedule, Clinton was lured into a trap and had helped keep the draft issue alive.

"We can't believe he walked into this," she said. "This guy wants to be commander in chief, but he can't avoid the land mines on the campaign trail."

"The point of all this is that voters want to hear about their lives past," replied Paul Begala, a senior consultant to the Clinton campaign. "They want the election to be about the economy. I think Bush finally understood that today, which is why he gave the speech he gave."

Begala also said that by not directly challenging Clinton on his draft record before an audience of about 4,000 active and retired Army and Air Force National Guard members, Bush in effect put the draft issue aside. "I think it's largely want to win the election they better talk about the economy."

Dee Dee Myers, the Clinton campaign press secretary, said a section of Clinton's speech responding to a direct attack on the draft had been prepared but not used when an attack did not materialize.

Both candidates were warmly received and cheered as they extolled the accomplishments of the National Guard and promised to retain the Guard and the reserves as an important part of the nation's military gested that Clinton's draft record may not be as large an issue in the election as the Bush campaign hopes.

One exception to this was Lt. Col. James M. Drake, 45, of Frankfort, Ky., who said, "I went to Vietnam. I didn't go hide from it. He [Clinton] hid from it and that's not the guy I want to be my commander in chief."

A more typical reaction came from Maj. Drue Ross, 46, of the Utah National Guard. "It doesn't they could to get out of the draft. He did what he felt was right. He wasn't against the military, he was against the war."

Ross, who said he usually voted Republican, said the major issue for him was "the direction the country is going to go." He added, "I think there are things that need to be fixed and I don't know if either one has the right answer."

Republican strategists believe that Clinton's draft record is only one element but an important one or a personal character and trustworthiness, and it was in this broader context that Bush addressed the subject today.

"There's been a lot of controversy swirling around service to country, about using influence to avoid the military," he said. "And I've read a lot of speculation that I was going to come out here and use this forum to attack Governor Clinton. I want to tell you that I do feel strongly about certain aspects of the controversy swirling around Governor Clinton, but I didn't come here to attack him. I came here to defend and support that National Guard and those who serve in it."

Bush, who omitted any mention of his own service as a Navy pilot during World War II, also drew an implicit contrast between Clinton and Quayle, whom he said had been "savagely attacked and ridiculed by the national press" but who "stood his ground and answered every question calmly and with candor. He told the truth and this is service to country."

"Why do these questions even matter? Why are they part of our national debate?" the president asked. "They matter because despite all our problems at home we can never forget that we ask our president to lead the military, to bear the awful authority of deciding to send your sons and daughters in harm's way."

His voice choked with emotion as he appeared to be fighting back tears. Bush read a part of a letter from a woman in Illinois whose son was killed during the Persian Gulf War, adding that "sending a son or daughter into combat, believe me, is that toughest part of the presidency."

"Does this mean that if you have never seen the awful horror of battle you can never be commander in chief?" Bush asked rhetorically. "Of course not. Not at all. But it does mean that we must hold our presidents to the highest standard because they might have to decide if

So what if the toasted bagel was tepid and losing heat, while the grapefruit half was dried out and tasted a tad pre-masticated -- probably the result of sitting out too long in the air-conditioned galley of the 747.

On Tuesday's flight from Salt Lake City to Denver "Aboard the Presidential Aircraft" -- as per the sky-blue lettering on the napkin beneath the juice glass -- breakfast was served on Pickard china, softly accented in gold. The meal was described on a gilt-edged menu, prettily embossed with the famous seal.

This, after all, was Air Force One, as a glossy card lying in the rearmost cabin helpfully reminded the passengers -- and George Bush, understandably, was sparing himself no effort to keep it.

"DESTINATION WEATHER FORECAST," the information card disclosed to those curious about the climate in the Mile-High City. "CONDITIONS: Partly Cloudy. TEMPERATURE: 78 Degrees."

It was arguably a datum of more than passing interest: For Bush's reelection battle is being waged largely at room temperature -- in jumbo jets, limousines, holding rooms and "buffer zones" (as the Secret Service calls the areas reserved at each event for the White House press pool), with only intermittent adventures in the great outdoors. But now, at the next stop at an industrial park in the Denver suburbs, it would be warm enough for the president to doff his suit jacket, the better to wave at the specially invited audience, flinging his arms upward as though jerked by a string, and shout the fractured aphorisms that enliven his speeches.

This is what Bush likes to call his "campaign mode."

But two things seemed apparent as the White House press charter -- a less elegant but far livelier aircraft than Bush's flying fortress -- touched down at Andrews Air Force Base around 1 a.m. Wednesday, at the end of a three-day swing through California, Washington, Oregon, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico. First, the president seems resigned to his life on the hustings as something to be suffered in the cause of job security -- a painfully necessary if temporary descent from the lofty business of governing. Second, George Bush, try as he might to get close to the ground, views the country and its problems from a perch of cozy isolation -- the perennial perspective of American presidents who perforce live their lives in a beautiful cocoon.

"I'll tell you, I really enjoyed flying in here in that helicopter," he confided to a few thousand loggers at a lumber mill in Colville, Wash., against a postcard-ready backdrop prepared by his advance staff (who warned the traveling press that, at 60 degrees, they might need sweaters to ward off a chill). "For those of you who haven't been up there," Bush went on, gesturing, vaguely, toward the presidential heavens -- "there are a lot of trees around here! So don't listen to some of the critics."

It was a funny line, certainly, but also a revealing one -- suggesting the vertiginous nature of Bush's "vision."

Having donned khakis and a windbreaker to announce that he wouldn't extend the Endangered Species Act if it meant sacrificing jobs on the altar of spotted owls -- to grateful cheers and whistles from the loggers -- Bush was halfway through his foray into six states where, except for Utah, he is struggling to hold his own against Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

"The polls may show us behind today," the president told a couple of thousand supporters at the industrial park in Englewood, Colo., who sweltered in the midday sun as he spoke from a shaded platform, "but I know we are going to be ahead in November because we have the right ideas."

Whether Bush really believes that is anybody's guess: He tends not to take questions from the fourth estate during his wanderings in the Land of the People. ("No! No, ma'am!" he advised a New Mexico radio reporter who asked him if she could ask him something.) This business, it would seem, is dangerous enough -- never mind that the president is nearly always presented with friendly invited audiences who occasionally must show tickets before being herded through the magnetometers and handed " Bush -Quayle '92" signs to hold up during his speeches.

For instance, in Englewood, in front of a high-tech company devoted to computerized aircraft navigation systems, Bush took off on one of his favorite targets -- the legal profession.

"Somebody asked me the other day," he recounted to the crowd, launching one of his stump speech staples. " 'An apple a day keeps the doctor awap-ap-ap-ap-apple a day," he suddenly stammered, as his listeners gazed at him in baffled silence. "... keeps the doctor away," he bravely pressed on to a punch line. " 'What works for lawyers?' " the president finally managed, and thus brought his set-piece joke to a harrowing crash landing.

But this was a small matter, much like his ill-fated attempt in Colville to compare the timber workers with "suburbanites," an arduous labor that ended with the coinage "serbanite" -- perhaps a subliminal reference to the troubles in Sarajevo. People by now have grown accustomed to Bush's quirks.

Of more consequence to his reelection chances, it seemed, was the president's barely disguised discomfort with having to campaign in the first place -- in stark contrast to Democratic challenger Clinton with his obvious zest for mixing it up with the voters. Bush seems like a man given an onerous task, but determined to do it -- the same guy who described himself in happier times (the 1988 Republican convention) as someone who always "completes the mission."

"I was thinking of giving a political speech, a real stemwinder with catchy sound bites, the usual biting insults," Bush told a respectful audience of National Guard Association conventioneers in Utah's Salt Palace. "Then I got to thinking -- I'm not going to do that. You've already sacrificed enough for your country. Instead, I'd like to talk about a more serious subject."

Bush delivered his lines well, and received a commensurate payoff in knowing laughter. All in all, the Salt Lake City speech was his best performance of the trip -- a sober, heartfelt and moving discussion (even members of the press were seen wiping their eyes) of the "awesome" burden of being commander in chief, while putting Clinton on the defensive over his tangled and troublesome draft record.

But at the end of the day, after touring the robotics R&D operation at Albuquerque's Sandia National Laboratories, Bush was unmistakably plaintive as he ad-libbed to his audience of lab technicians and scientists: "I'm just waiting for one of you to come up with a robot that can give a public speech. I'm sure it will make my life easier and also yours."

Bush's distaste for "politics" was hard to miss -- a jarring attitude from one who, until a few months ago, had thrived so successfully in the occupation. It's as if he's trying to tell us, with his confidential grin, "I'm not a politician, but I play one on TV." Politics, for Bush, is not "serious"; it is "catchy sound bites, the usual biting insults" -- a cynical pursuit, as well as his personal cross to bear, that has little to do with running the country.

Not that this man renowned for his social skills has suddenly turned aloof. Spotting a flag-waving rope-line crowd composed largely of military families -- as he did Tuesday afternoon at New Mexico's Kirtland Air Force Base -- Bush invariably plunges in, squeezing hand after hand with such lightning speed that it seems he is frantically milking a many-uddered cow. Clinton, by contrast, nearly always lingers, pausing to engage strangers in actual conversations (and usually quoting some especially sage voter in his speech at the next campaign stop). But the governor is always running late. The president is always precisely on time -- as befits a man whose schedule is mapped out in two- and even one-minute intervals.

Still, there is an element of cognitive dissonance in Bush's approach to the game. One can only imagine what is swirling through his head, for instance, when he condemns Clinton, as he did Tuesday in Colorado, as a man who sees America as "a vast collection of interest groups to be appeased." This, on a trip in which he promised sweeping regulatory relief to a timber industry being held in check by environmental laws -- "to keep timber families working in 1993 and beyond," Bush told the cheering loggers; pledged to the National Guard Association that "as commander in chief I can assure you, we will never shortchange the National Guard," and vowed to spend $ 166 million for a new research program benefiting his audience at Sandia as well as workers at other labs.

These were all enticing pitches as far as they went, but the president seemed still to be casting about in his effort to close the big sale. At every stop he touted "my Agenda for American Renewal" -- the two-week-old plan cooked up by White House Chief of Staff James Baker to revive the sagging economy as well as Bush's sagging poll numbers -- but he discussed it in such generalities that it seemed more a slogan than a strategy.

"I want to unleash the incredible power of entrepreneurial capitalism so you can climb as high as your dreams will carry you," Bush said in Colorado, in a stemwinder, replete with catchy sound bites and the usual biting insults, that flitted from topic to topic -- exports, education, health care, government bureaucrats, Clinton's pandering, Saddam Hussein -- in a way that did nothing to make the message work its magic.

Bush's "Agenda," in any case, has yet to help him out of the hole.

"Four more years!" the crowd had chanted as Bush strode past the buffer zone and ascended the stage.

"That's the idea," the president beamed, connecting at long last. "You got it. You got the message."

HEADLINE: Bush Raises Clinton Draft Record; Clinton Says He's Ready to Command/

BYLINE: By STEVEN KOMAROW, Associated Press Writer

DATELINE: SALT LAKE CITY

KEYWORD: Political Rdp

BODY:

President Bush told a military group Tuesday that Bill Clinton's draft record matters since any president "might have to decide if our sons and daughters should knock early on death's door." Clinton steered clear of the draft issue while telling the group he was ready to lead the military as commander in chief.

The candidates addressed the National Guard Association an hour apart in appearances that had been seen as a chance for a hard-hitting exchange on Clinton's descriptions of how he avoided the Vietnam draft.

Bush spoke of "controversy swirling around" the issue, but his references were brief and, for the most part, indirect.

Aides said Clinton had prepared a response in case Bush attacked directly on the draft issue, as other Republicans have, but decided it was unnecessary after hearing Bush's speech.

The Democrat emphasized the subject he considers at the center of the campaign: the economy. "National security begins with economic security," he told the group.

Bush, speaking first, raised the draft issue even as he said it was not his intention to make a political assault.

"There's been a lot of controversy swirling around about service to country. and influence to avoid the military, and I've read a great deal of speculation that I was going to come out here and use this forum to attack Gov. Clinton," he said.

"I didn't come here to attack him," Bush told the group. Still, "I want to tell you I feel very strongly about certain aspects of the controversy swirling around Gov. Clinton."

"Despite all our problems at home, we can never forget that we ask our presidents to lead the military - to bear the awful authority of deciding to send your sons and daughters in harm's way," he said.

Bush, a Navy flyer shot down in World War II, said, "Does this mean that if you've never seen the awful horror of battle that you can never be commander in chief?"

"Of course not. Not at all," said Bush, who followed non-combatant Ronald Reagan into the White House. "But it does mean that we must hold our presidents to the highest standard."

Clinton, who watched Bush's speech on television before arriving at the hall, rearranged his schedule to be on hand to respond to Bush directly. But he ended up ignoring the president's swipes.

"I will never allow a hollow army," Clinton vowed. "We still must have the best-equipped and best-trained military to meet today's threats," he said, almost echoing Bush's own remarks about the importance of the military in a still-dangerous world.

Clinton said he would not shrink from his responsibilities as commander in chief and said his goal would be, "when we fight, always to win."

The Arkansas governor acknowledged in April that he received an induction notice in 1969 but was allowed to finish his first year of graduate school because the letter arrived late. That summer, he pledged to join an ROTC program to avoid the draft, but he later backed out of that agreement and made himself available to be drafted. By then, a lottery system was in effect and Clinton drew a high number and never was called.

Critics have fastened on the fact that details of Clinton's draft history have come out piecemeal and have accused him of inconsistencies in his descriptions of what occurred.

Both Bush and Clinton lauded the National Guard but said spending reductions would be necessary as the United States adjusts to a post-Cold War world.

Bush said Clinton would slash the overall military budget too much. Clinton said he would cut just 5 percent more than Bush, focusing on such items as "star wars" research, and would actually put more emphasis on the National Guard and Reserves than Bush would.

Campaigning later in Albuquerque, N.M., Bush shelved plans to build a $ 1 billion production reactor for tritium, a key ingredient in nuclear weapons for America's dwindling arsenal, but pledged more than half the savings for other scientific projects.

The president once again defended Vice President Dan Quayle's decision to join the Indiana National Guard during Vietnam. "His critics attacked the National Guard as a haven for draft dodgers and those critics are wrong," Bush said.

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Both candidates got warm receptions from the audience. Clinton's speech was interrupted twice by a failing public address system, and he received applause each time it came back on and brushed aside the inconvenience with a joke.

Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., who accompanied Clinton to the platform along with the commander of the Arkansas National Guard, said he had urged Clinton to attend. And he suggested the tactic worked in heading off a Bush attack.

"I think the president backed away here today on the draft issue," he said. "I'm not sure he would have been so kind had the governor not come here today.

But Torie Clarke, a Bush campaign spokeswoman, suggested the Republicans had lured Clinton into a trap, and that his appearance was elevating the draft issue to new heights.

"This guy wants to be commander in chief, but he can't avoid the landmines on the campaign trail," she said.

In the audience, Gen. Bob Fowler of the Tennessee guard said he didn't want to say who he'd support, but he added, "The main issue is not about Bill Clinton's draft record, it's about the economy."

- BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) - Vice President Dan Quayle visited a toddler with a life-threatening disease Tuesday before he held a private meeting on health-care reform that wrapped up an overnight campaign stop here.
- Quayle said after the session that the Bush administration "will provide health coverage to all" through its system of tax credits, vouchers and other measures.

  He criticized the Clinton health-care strategy as unworkable and said a Canadian approach wouldn't succeed in states like Montana because of their vast rural areas.
- Quayle's visit in the hospital room of a 9-month-old girl identified only as Morgan also was private. The child from the rural Montana town of Havre suffers from a rare genetic disease that has made her a dwarf and carries a host of complications.
- From the youngster's room at St. Vincent Hospital, Quayle went to a conference area to discuss health-care reform with about 15 people.

  "The health-care system's going to be changed," he said in opening the session attended by hospital presidents, physicians, business people and others.
- Reporters were ushered from the room after Quayle's initial remarks; campaign officials said closure was necessary to ensure candor.

  Some participants said afterward that the vice president expressed a particular interest in rural health care and knew of pending efforts in Montana to use telecommunications as a way of extending care in outlying areas.
- Lane Basso, president of Deaconess Medical Center in Billings,
- said Quayle also discussed what he considers shortcomings of the health-care plan put forth by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, the Democratic nominee for president.
- "There's no doubt in my mind that Vice President Quayle recognizes some of those proposals might put a strain on small businesses in the agricultural sector," Basso said.

  He said the meeting lasted about 30 minutes.
- Quayle left Billings for Sioux Falls, S.D., Tuesday morning after spending about 18 hours here.

  His stop at the St. Vincent pediatric floor included a visit with an asthma patient and several mildly ill children in a day program designed to let their parents employed at the hospital continue - working. Quayle used a crayon to autograph the children's artwork, and he passed out keychains.

  Earlier in the day, he stopped at the GOP headquarters downtown and greeted breakfast customers at Stella's Kitchen and Bakery, operated by James Ziegler, a Republican Yellowstone County commissioner, and Stella Ziegler, a GOP candidate for the Montana Legislature.

- "Got enough brown sugar there?" Quayle said to a man with practically a cup of it in front of him.
- Customers' reactions to Quayle's visit were mixed.
- "I think it's wonderful," Bob Clark, a Billings chiropractor, said as Quayle worked his way around the cafe, shaking hands. "Evie's been wanting to kiss him."

  Clark's 2 1/2-year-old daughter, Evan, squirmed in a seat beside her dad.

  Customers Dennis and Nina Monson of Glasgow were less enthusiastic.

  "It was a little embarrassing, really," said Dennis Monson, who described himself as a political independent likely to vote for Clinton.

  Dennis Monson is a teacher, and his wife, in an apparent poke at a GOP campaign theme, described her occupation as "housewife - some family values there."
- The restaurant visit was a surprise element in Quayle's campaign stop.
- He arrived at Billings Logan International Airport on Monday at about 6 p.m., spoke briefly to an airport crowd of 200 or so, then went to a $125-per-person fund-raiser that lasted about 45 minutes. The hospital visit dominated the rest of his itinerary.

• Vice President Dan Quayle said Tuesday night that the character of Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton "is a major issue in this campaign."

• Quayle made the comment in an interview aboard Air Force Two en route to Milwaukee after a campaign rally earlier Tuesday in Mosinee.

The vice president said Clinton "obviously has not come clean with the American people" on how he avoided the draft during the Vietnam War.

"Every week there s a new fact that he s evidently forgotten to tell us. I think he ought to just put it all out on the table," Quayle said.

He said there is a "bigger issue" than just Clinton's story on his draft experiences.

"He literally tries to have all sides of every issue," the vice president said. "He ll find out that is very difficult to do in a presidential campaign."

• Quayle contended that Clinton has waffled on the new free-trade agreement with Mexico, the recent announcement of the sale of F-15 fighter planes to Saudi Arabia and on how much Clinton would raise taxes.

"Whatever the issue, it s his inability to have straight talk," Quayle said.

• At his appearance Tuesday evening in Mosinee, Quayle painted Clinton as a taxer.

"I ll tell you the first thing Bill Clinton will do if he ever becomes president of the United States is raise your taxes," Quayle told the crowd of about 2,000 in an airplane hangar at Central Wisconsin Airport.

• Quayle said that Clinton s campaign itself admits that Clinton raised taxes and fees 128 times in his 10 years as governor of Arkansas, only one less than the original Republican claim.

• "He s not helped that state at all," Quayle said, referring to Clinton as "Tax Hike Bill."

The Clinton campaign has responded to the tax charge by saying that if the same accounting methods are applied to President Bush, he has raised taxes dozens, if not hundreds, of times in his nearly four years as president.

• Quayle was interrupted now and then by a few cat-calling protesters, one of whom shouted that he should "tell the truth" about Clinton on taxes and another who kept yelling "censorship." That man later explained to a reporter that he had been prevented from bringing a Clinton poster into the rally by a security person.

• Quayle kicked off a two-day campaign swing in Wisconsin

• Vice President Dan Quayle, campaigning in Milwaukee Wednesday morning, told an audience at Children's Hospital of Wisconsin that "there's got to be changes" in America's health care system.

• But Quayle said reforms should not involve "government-rationed programs" or new payroll taxes but rather a system of tax credits and vouchers to make insurance more affordable.

• "We recognize the problem," Quayle told business people and medical officials at the hospital, which is on the county grounds in Wauwatosa. "You have 34 million Americans without health insurance, and costs are going up and up."

• Quayle was greeted enthusiastically in the lobby of the hospital by hundreds of staff members and some patients. The vice president signed autographs, shook hands and chatted with onlookers, some dressed in hospital scrubs.

• Inside the hospital Quayle, with his coat off, met with three young patients working with therapists in a rehabilitation wing of the hospital.

The vice president's schedule for Wednesday also called for a health care speech at a Kiwanis luncheon meeting at the • War Memorial on the lakefront. Members of the Milwaukee County
• Labor Council had planned to hold a rally to meet Quayle shortly before noon outside the War Memorial. However, the vice president arrived shortly after 11 a.m. and went inside.

• After Milwaukee, Quayle was to go to Racine for a rally and fund-raising activities before leaving for Washington at 5 p.m.

Questions on Neil Bush

• Quayle started off his morning by brushing off questions concerning an NBC television report Tuesday night that alleged that Neil Bush had received $2 million in federally guaranteed loans for his gas company in Colorado and that his personal investment had been minimal. The show maintained that he profited from being the president's son. Neil Bush has denied any wrongdoing.

"This is simply a diversionary tactic by the Clinton camp," • Quayle told reporters outside the Grand Milwaukee Hotel early Wednesday. "They clearly don't want to talk about Bill Clinton's problems with the draft."

• The allegations are "irrelevant" to the campaign, Quayle said.

Norquist Speaks Out

At a news conference Wednesday morning, Mayor John O. Norquist decried Bush's "lack of a record" on health care issues. The conference was held in front of the Briggs & Stratton plant at 3333 W. Good Hope Road, Glendale.

Speaking from a prepared statement, Norquist said "The only plan we get comes right before the election, and

- that included a private fund-raiser Tuesday night at Wausau
- Insurance Companies in Wausau and scheduled appearances in Milwaukee on Wednesday at Children s Hospital, a downtown Kiwanis Club luncheon and a fund-raiser at the Astor Hotel for Sen. Robert W. Kasten Jr. (R- Wis.).
- Wednesday afternoon Quayle is to travel to Racine for another rally and fund-raiser.

In his roughly 20-minute stump speech, the shirt-sleeved vice president touted his affinity for his Midwestern audience.

"We understand the importance of traditional values," he said.

"Hard work, integrity, personal responsibility, love of God, appreciation of freedom and love for our families.

"I will never back down from speaking about traditional
- values," Quayle said.

The vice president also said that Bush administration policies are good for farmers because Bush promotes exports.

The last time the country had a Democratic president and
- Democratic Congress there was a grain embargo, Quayle said, referring to former President Jimmy Carter.
- Quayle also criticized Clinton s proposal for reforming the health insurance system. He said the payroll tax Clinton proposes to levy on business would "cripple small business" and eventually lead to rationing of health care.
- Quayle again recalled Carter, saying that Carter had attempted to ration gasoline for a time, leading to long gasoline lines.

The vice president called for reform of the nation s legal system and for enactment of term limits on congressmen.

He said the U.S. has 5% of the world s population and 70% of its lawyers. Excessive legal costs slow economic growth, he said.
- Quayle said if a limit of two terms is good for the presidency, term limits should also be good for senators like Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Howard M. Metzenbaum (D-Ohio), two Democratic liberals.

if he's re-elected, we won't hear about health care again. Bush wants to create tax loopholes, not control spending.

"Even the American College of Physicians wants to hold the line on spending. But Bush refuses to act," Norquist said.

• "Health insurance is a jobs issue for Milwaukee and the United States. Without a national health care plan, America will continue to lose companies and jobs," the mayor said.

Evening Speech at Mosinee

• Quayle arrived at Central Wisconsin Airport at Mosinee late Tuesday and spoke to more than 500 people who sat on bales of hay in an airport hangar.

He pledged a major reform of the nation's medical services in a second Bush administration and blamed Congress for failing to act on the president's plan to provide tax credits and vouchers.

Clinton's plan for health-care reform would "eventually ration health care in America," he said.

"Remember the last time we tried to ration a commodity or ration a sector of our economy?" he said. "That was when Jimmy Carter tried to ration energy, and we saw long gasoline lines."

Under Clinton's plan, employers would have to provide coverage or pay into a pool to cover uninsured Americans.

• Quayle also said Bush pledged to improve the farm economy by increasing food exports with the opening of more foreign markets for agricultural goods.

"I hope the farmers of America remember the last time we had a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress. What you • got was a grain embargo," Quayle said.

The Associated Press and Journal reporters Erik Gunn and Leonard Sykes Jr. contributed to this report.

Bush Depicts Differences On Economics

Clinton Ideas Called 'Social Engineering'

By Jonathan Freedland
Washington Post Staff Writer

ENID, Okla., Sept. 17—President Bush today portrayed Democrat Bill Clinton as an advocate of change controlled and directed by the central government and social engineers and himself as an advocate of economic growth fostered by entrepreneurial capitalism.

"At a decisive moment in history comes your choice about who should lead the American economy—the government planner or the entrepreneur, the risk-taker," he told the crowd of party faithful gathered in Enid's convention center. "I stand with the private sector and with the risk-taker."

The speech was the second step in Bush's effort to produce a comprehensive statement of his economic program and then match it against Clinton's to make the case that while Americans may want change, the change Clinton advocates is discredited.

As an example of Clinton's preference for bigger government, Bush cited Clinton's proposals for $220 billion in new spending, what the Democrat calls investment in education, job training and other areas, and his lack of specific spending cuts.

Clinton's social engineering philosophy, Bush said, translates into a "government-knows-best" outlook that rejects private school choice for parents, the GOP proposal of moderate improvement of health care systems rather than dramatic overhaul, and less government regulation.

Whether discussing his differences with Clinton on taxes, spending, free trade, government regulation or legal reform, Bush linked Clinton's solutions with state intervention traditionally associated with socialist or communist governments. "From Mexico to Eastern Europe, from Russia to South China, command-and-control economies have been dismissed as failures," Bush said. "At the exact moment that the rest of the world is going our way, why should we want to go their way?"

Each difference, he suggested, was rooted in a philosophical conflict: the principles of free enterprise and small government vs. the forces of big government. "This is the most fundamental disagreement between us, whether the driving engine of growth is government intervention or entrepreneurial capitalism," he said.

In a passage on reducing federal intrusion in the marketplace, he suggested that life under the Democrat's "dictates and taxes" would resemble life behind the old Iron Curtain. "From Warsaw to Prague to Moscow, government price controls have led to one thing: rationing of service. In health care, that will mean longer lines, inefficient service, and lower quality."

On taxes Bush went beyond describing Clinton as a "tax-and-spend liberal" to say that the "motive to his madness" is to produce money for "social engineering" he wants to try on the nation. "From Santa Monica to Cambridge, my opponents are cranking up their models—ready to test them, on you."

Introducing the phrase, which he used five times in a 31-minute speech, Bush said: "My opponent and his advisers can trace their intellectual roots to the social engineering ideas popular at the turn of the century . . . over the years those early social engineers became interventionist liberals who wanted to create a welfare state."

Clinton, the president said, knows "that the welfare state doesn't sell in America," so he has relabeled the doctrine "investment." But, he said, "it's still big-time government spending directed by Washington planners who want to reorder social and economic priorities."

Personalizing the attack, Bush urged his audience to "look at the differences in who we are and what we believe in." He contrasted his own early business career as a Texas oilman before entering politics in 1964 with that of Clinton, who, he said, "chose to run for office at an exceptionally early age." Bush said "I built a company from the ground up, created jobs and paid my taxes. . . . He wanted to determine how the people's taxes should be spent, how to shape people's lives through more government programs."

Throughout the speech, the president associated the Arkansas governor with foreign ideas and institutions. He said Clinton had learned his belief in social engineering at Oxford University in Britain; that these were views that had saddled Europe with "inefficient industrial monstrosities"; and that Clinton's opinions were at odds with the values of free industry that had built Enid, which he described as a "metaphor for America."

Bush Paints Clinton as 'Social Engineer'

By MICHAEL WINES
Special to The New York Times

JONESBORO, Ga., Sept. 17 — President Bush delivered a slashing assault on Bill Clinton's economic policies today, painting his rival as a social engineer whose proposed tax and spending increases threaten the livelihoods and freedoms of Middle America.

Unleashing some of the most pointed language of his campaign, Mr. Bush cast the Democratic Presidential nominee as an Oxford-educated liberal bent on reviving big government theories that have failed in capitals from Warsaw to Prague to Moscow.

He would unite the Presidency and the Congress to achieve one end above all others, more government, the President said at a rally here. A government that taxes more spends more regulates more encourages more lawsuits and shuts off more products from the markets that Americans create.

Adopting Mr. Clinton's policies, the President said, would be like going out to the used car lot down the road and buying the lemon that you got rid of 12 years ago. That was an allusion to former President Jimmy Carter, who presided over the last economic downturn to rival the current one.

Enthusiasm in Oklahoma

Mr. Bush spoke in Enid, Okla., an oil patch town of about 50,000 people that has not fully recovered from the 1980's collapse of oil prices but which turned out enthusiastically for him today. About 2,000 people filled a civic auditorium to hear Mr. Bush's remarks and thousands more lined a town square to watch his limousine roll by.

That was a far larger crowd than met him this afternoon in Jonesboro, an Atlanta suburb. Here, perhaps a thousand people visited a new subdivision to hear Mr. Bush talk about his efforts to help house ownership.

In Enid, Mr. Bush billed his address from the outset as a serious talk, not a rally speech about the economy. In fact, it was a bare-fisted effort to sow fear among voters unhappy with the President about the consequences of voting for the Democratic alternative.

That follows a strategy set by Mr. Bush's top aide, James A. Baker 3d, to focus the debate on the future of the economy rather than on its current condition.

Making Clinton Unpalatable

The strategy also underscores what opinion polls have long indicated: that confidence in Mr. Bush's economic stewardship is so low that he must make Mr. Clinton seem even more unpalatable if he is to win a majority.

> A bare-fisted effort to sow fear among voters.

With its disparaging references to Oxford, the 1980's and Mr. Clinton's economic elite, and its allusions to socialism, the 41-minute speech was redolent with the blue-collar appeals that helped Ronald Reagan lure Democrats to his fold in 1980 and 1984.

Mr. Bush made no attempt today to explain or maximize the economy's present problems. Instead, he argued that the real danger facing the nation is that voters will "grasp change blindly without considering seriously where these changes will lead us or what they mean in our daily lives.

"At a decisive moment in history comes your choice about who should lead the American economy: the government planner or the entrepreneur, the risk-taker," the President said. "This is the most fundamental disagreement between us: whether the driving engine of growth is government interventionism or entrepreneurial capitalism."

Risk-Taker Turned Politician

Mr. Bush, a full-time politician and Federal official since 1966, cast himself today as the risk-taker — a Texas oilman who for 18 early years "built a business from the ground up, created jobs and paid my taxes."

By contrast, he said, the role model for Mr. Clinton, who has spent almost his entire adult life in government and politics, is not the entrepreneur but the government planner, the lawyer or policy professor who flatters himself that he understands the American economy better than the workers and the entrepreneurs who have their sleeves up.

Later, he added: "My opponent is drawn to these views. He and a number of his advisers studied them at Oxford in the 1960's."

The Clinton campaign quickly counterattacked by questioning Mr. Bush's talk of his experience running a small business. "When George Bush left Yale to work in the oil industry, he got the benefit of some 'family values,' Kennebunkport style," the campaign said in a press statement.

Quoting from published reports, it said Mr. Bush's uncle Herbert Walker had given Mr. Bush $300,000 to start his oil business in the early 1950's, an amount that the Democrats said would be the equivalent of $1.5 million in today's dollars. They said fewer than 1 percent of small businesses have a stake of more than $30,000 at the outset.

George Bush is saying that everybody would be better off if they had an Uncle Herbert, the Clinton camp said. "What small businesses need to survive is Uncle Sam on their side, not on their way."

Mr. Bush holds an economics degree from Yale University. But he warned today that a Clinton administration would be ruled by a different economic elite of the so-called "best and brightest," who he said "can trace their intellectual roots to the social-engineering ideas popular at the turn of the century, that created the modern welfare state."

Mr. Clinton calls his economic policy "investment" in the nation's infrastructure. Mr. Bush said: "But no matter what you call it," he added, "it's still big-time government spending, directed by Washington planners who want to reorder social and economic priorities. And we can't have that."

That, he said, is the way of "command and control" economies that have been discarded "from Mexico to Eastern Europe, from Russia to South China."

On paper, at least, the two candidates do have opposing views of what the next four years should hold. Mr. Clinton's proposal for change includes $150 billion in new taxes on the well-off and on business, and $220 billion in new Federal spending to stimulate economic growth.

Freeing Money to Invest

Mr. Bush has proposed to cut taxes by perhaps $130 billion or more, and to reduce Federal spending by hundreds of billions more, mostly by restraining the rise in Federal spending on Medicaid and Medicare and other programs. The President says that would increase growth by freeing money for businesses to invest and hire new workers.

But the two candidates' records suggest the differences are not so stark. As the Governor of Arkansas, Mr. Clinton has espoused pro-business, fiscally moderate policies. And despite Mr. Bush's advocacy of lower taxes and smaller government, the share of national income consumed by Federal spending has risen to near-record levels during his tenure, from 22 cents to 24 cents of each dollar.

In Georgia, Mr. Bush again handed out Federal benefits to prospective voters, announcing a cut in insurance premiums on 15-year Federal Housing Administration mortgages. The White House said that would reduce the up-front cost of buying a home with such a mortgage by $650 and cut annual premiums costs by $165 to $325 a year.

Bush Seeks to Cast Himself As a Free-Market Feminist

By MICHAEL WINES

BASKING RIDGE, N.J., Sept. 18 — Facing a significant gap in support between men and women in the latest opinion poll, President Bush took his top female aides to tow, lined his speaker's dais end-to-end with women and cast himself today as a feminist, free-market style.

Speaking to several hundred employees at A.T.&T. corporate headquarters in central New Jersey, Mr. Bush argued that his economic programs offer women and families more equality and opportunity than the "Government mandates" that he said were favored by his opponent, Gov. Bill Clinton.

"The first order of business," he conceded early, "is to admit that there is still unfinished business" on the agenda of women's concerns.

"Women work as hard as men and still earn less, and that's not acceptable," he said. "And most working women do more than equal work on the job and at home, and that's not acceptable either. And many women are trying to do it all alone."

Bush Discounts Arguments

But Mr. Bush maintained that laws that mandate sexual equality or confer social benefits, like family leave in emergencies, were in fact counterproductive because they cost businesses money, forced layoffs and slowed the economy. Better, he said, to help the economy create more jobs and to give women more opportunities to advance in those jobs.

If such an indirect argument seemed unlikely to appeal to women who feel shortchanged by the marketplace, one Presidential aide brought along to brief reporters, Constance Horner, put it more succinctly. "It doesn't do a pregnant woman any good to take leave from her job if some other member of the family doesn't have a job because of it," she said.

Ms. Horner, director of the White House Office of Personnel Management, said nevertheless that such a situation would never occur in her office. Using discretion granted her by White House personnel rules, she said, she has recently allowed two aides to extend their pregnancy leaves from the normal maximum of 10 paid weeks to three months or more, with the extensions unpaid.

Ms. Horner said she was not sure at the time what the Federal policy was on maternity and other family-related leaves of absence. "I just did it," she said.

The President's message was warmly applauded by the A.T.&T. employees in this overwhelmingly Republican, upper-income region, but it was not clear how well it would be received in the working-class regions where the Bush campaign most needs women's votes.

Mr. Bush is struggling to raise his political stock with women, a task both Congress and his own campaign have made none too easy.

President Bush speaking yesterday to a group of about 400 women at the AT&T corporate headquarters in Basking Ridge, N.J.

A poll of 1,504 registered voters published today by The Wall Street Journal and NBC News indicated that male voters are evenly split between Mr. Bush and Mr. Clinton, with each getting 46 percent of the support. But among women, Mr. Bush trailed by 18 points, 54 percent to 36 percent. And among working women, the gap was cavernous: 58 percent to 34 percent. The poll was conducted between last Saturday and Tuesday and has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus three percentage points.

The Bush campaign's spokeswoman, Torie Clarke, said today that the reasons for Mr. Bush's sagging popularity with women were not easy to pinpoint. But some seem clear: even Republicans concede, for example, that Mr. Bush suffered with women after a series of strident messages on family values conveyed at last month's Republican National Convention, often on prime-time television.

The Republican platform and some televised speakers, like Vice President Dan Quayle's wife, Marilyn, and the conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan, were implicitly critical of working women and women's rights. The party platform is hostile toward the sizable majority of women of both parties who support at least some form of legalized abortion.

Ms. Clarke said campaign strategists "are not happy with the perception" created by the convention that the President is unsympathetic to women's issues. She asserted that the perception was baldly inaccurate.

"What's important — what's the real issue — is to look at President Bush," she said. "He's the one people will be voting for."

Quayle Attacks Clinton on Draft And Is Heckled at a Rally in Ohio

By STEPHEN LABATON
Special to The New York Times

RAVENNA, Ohio, Sept. 19 — Vice President Dan Quayle today renewed his attacks on Gov. Bill Clinton for avoiding the draft, and a few moments later was heckled and taunted for 20 minutes as he tried to speak at a campaign rally here.

Swinging through a state that has become pivotal for the re-election prospects of Mr. Quayle and President Bush, the Vice President went out of way to keep alive the debate over Mr. Clinton's efforts to steer clear of the draft in 1969.

"Sooner or later, Bill Clinton is going to have to come clean with the American people on how he avoided military service," Mr. Quayle told reporters at an airport near here. "Bill Clinton just needs to come clean. He needs to come clean on this issue and how he avoided military service."

Asked how Mr. Clinton's avoidance of service in Vietnam differed from his own decision at the same time to join the National Guard in Indiana, the Vice President said: "Couple of differences. One, I told the truth and got all the facts out. Two, I served. I put on a uniform. Wore the uniform for six years. I didn't avoid military service. Bill Clinton did."

Message of Dissent

Mr. Quayle was here to raise money for the Republican Party and to kick off the 14th annual Ravenna "Balloon A-Fair." But the balloons were not to be cast aloft until Sunday, and the only sight in the air today was a plane circling over the crowded town square where Mr. Quayle spoke towing a sign that read: "Ohio Needs Jobs Not Mr. Potatoe Head."

He was greeted by a cacophony of competing chants — his supporters calling for "Four more years," while an apparently larger number of detractors chanted "Four more months" and "No more Bush." The critics included scores of college students and union workers from plastics, rubber and auto plants.

Mr. Quayle initially maintained his composure, trying to ignore the protesters, but they quickly raised his ire and he responded with such lines as: "I hear our opponents screaming out there. I'd be screaming too if I supported Bill Clinton."

At another point he said: "I guess a lot of Clinton's lawyers are here. I hear it."

When he asked rhetorically, "Who do you want as President?" the crowd roared back "Clinton." Still later, he accused the Clinton supporters of "booing traditional values."

"I need your help once again," he implored the crowd. "You've heard our opponents today. They booed my comments about traditional values. They booed my comments about lowering taxes. They've booed my comments about reforming the legal system. They've booed my comments about reforming health care. Let me tell you this: We will never give Bill Clinton the opportunity to be the President of the United States."

'Murphy' Crew Snubs Quayle's Baby Gift

Vice President Watches TV Show's Opener With Single Parents, Friend Named Brown

By Richard Tapscott
Washington Post Staff Writer

Still trying to turn a public relations problem to his advantage, Dan Quayle yesterday did what no other vice president has probably ever done: He wrote a letter to a fictional television character.

Quayle, who helped create a wave of publicity with his criticism of the television show "Murphy Brown," wrote to "Baby Brown," the newborn son of the TV character played by Candice Bergen, and promised that he and President Bush would provide opportunities to all children—"no matter what their family situation."

The letter was just one way Quayle marked the season premiere of the popular television show that he singled out for criticism last May because its main character had mocked "the importance of fathers by bearing a child alone, and calling it just another 'lifestyle' choice." The vice president also watched the show with some real life single parents last night in Northwest Washington.

During a campaign stop in Kentucky yesterday, Quayle said he had "the greatest respect for single mothers."

He expressed surprise when told that his letter, along with a stuffed baby elephant, had not been delivered and opened on CBS's "This Morning," where Bergen was being interviewed.

Producers of "Murphy Brown" declined to have the letter and present opened, saying in a prepared statement that they were going to send the gift to "a homeless shelter so that a real child can enjoy it."

David Beckwith, Quayle's press secretary, responded tartly to the rejection.

"I find it particularly ironic that the Hollywood liberals, those defenders of free speech, didn't want to give the vice president a few seconds to express his views when they have an hour tonight to give a distorted view in front of 15 million viewers," Beckwith said.

Quayle watched the show last night at the home of Zora Brown, a Quayle family friend who invited him over for the season premiere, she said, because she was "tired of sitting around with my friends and talking about Dan Quayle and single motherhood. And I was tired of watching it becoming trivialized by the networks."

Zora Brown, who delivered a seconding speech for Quayle at the Republican National Convention, said her sister was a single mother and her brother once had custody of eight children.

"This is not a trivial matter to us, a laughing matter to us," she said. "... In the black community, this is a major problem ... I thought the vice president should have an opportunity to talk to some of my friends and hear what they had to say."

The group watching with Quayle included an unwed mother, a divorced mother with two children, a single father with a teenage daughter, Brown's brother and three professional women who have concerns about the press and a mockery of motherhood being made on TV," Brown said.

While Quayle continued to soften his stand against Murphy Brown yesterday, he did not abandon parallel lines of attack on Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton.

During a speech before the National Association of Home Builders in Lexington, Ky., Quayle quoted from a Clinton speech to a Hollywood fund raiser last week in which the Arkansas governor invited the show business community to "write a new future for the United States."

"I want you to write America's future," Quayle said today, "and I want Hollywood to begin reflecting our values."

Quayle and aides maintain that his criticism of Brown has been twisted by opponents and that he intended no offense to single mothers, who he said live their lives "against the odds."

Staff writer Martha Sherrill contributed to this report.

PRESIDENT BUSH
... on Clinton, "there's no refund"

Bush Launches Broadside On Clinton's Governorship

By Ruth Marcus
Washington Post Staff Writer

SHREVEPORT, La., Sept. 22—President Bush today unleashed a broad assault on Democratic nominee Bill Clinton's performance as governor of Arkansas, contrasting the rhetoric of "Candidate Clinton" with the record of "Governor Clinton" and warning that "once you buy what he's selling, there's no refund."

Campaigning in the six states that border Arkansas, Bush sharply attacked his opponent's record on crime, civil rights, the environment, health care, taxes, economic growth and children in the Bush campaign's most concerted effort to define Clinton as an unsuccessful governor who as a presidential candidate is promising more than he can deliver.

"This man has the gall to go around America and promise the moon, when on issue after issue, the sky has fallen in his own back yard," Bush said in Springfield, Mo., as he launched the day-long broadside on Clinton's 12 years as governor.

With his advisers having concluded that Bush's own record and agenda alone are not enough to sell the American people on his reelection bid, the president used the day to build doubts about Clinton, part of a broad campaign effort that will continue throughout the week and include a new TV ad attacking Clinton's record in Arkansas on taxes.

Clinton, campaigning in East Lansing, Mich., the site of what was supposed to be the first televised debate of the campaign, said Bush was attempting to divert attention from his refusal to debate. "I'm not surprised that instead of showing up here today to make the case that the next four years ought to be like the last four, Mr. Bush is instead flying to states all allbound my native state to tell them what a bad governor I have been," he said.

Bush described the presidential race as a situation where "the American people are interviewing two men for the same job," and pressed the case that whatever his own "shortcomings" and admitted "mistakes," Clinton "is not the leader for America."

His critique of Clinton's 12 years as governor was sharply worded but sometimes short on context.

For example, Bush described Clinton as a boastful hypocrite on civil rights, who bragged about having "the best civil rights record" but has failed to persuade Arkansas's Democratic legislature to enact a civil rights statute.

Clinton has supported a state civil rights bill, but the measure has encountered strong opposition from rural legislators, and last year died, in part as a result of opposition from the state Chamber of Commerce.

Bush also described Clinton as a "Governor Taxes" who doubled state spending in the last nine years and paid for it by heaping taxes on the poor and working class.

But Clinton's tax decisions have been based in large part on his search for ways to fund the education reforms that have been his top priority and he has tried unsuccessfully to make it easier to raise the income tax, which requires a three-quarters vote, compared with a bare majority for raising the sales tax.

And his 1991 tax package eliminated taxes for 252,000 low income taxpayers and reduced the tax burden for 122,000.

"Candidate Clinton . . . the Doberman puncher," Bush said, was a tough-talker on crime, but his state coddled criminals while its crime rate soared under "Governor Clinton the Chihuahua." Bush described Clinton as the beneficiary of Arkansas' "powerful chicken industry" with "chicken litter" creating rivers so polluted "the fish light up at night."

And he said that while Clinton promises a solution to the health care problem, more than 42 percent of Arkansas workers—the second highest percentage in the nation—lack employer-paid health insurance.

"He talks one way around the nation," Bush said in Longview, Tex. "He delivers misery at home."

"Next time you hear Candidate Clinton promise to be a progressive change agent for the entire United States, think of civil rights and taxes in the state he's left behind," Bush cautioned in the Springfield speech, which devoted only scant attention to Bush's own record and proposals.

"Think of crime and child abuse and education in that great state of Arkansas. Think of the environment that he's neglected, the health care problems he's ignored. Think about all this the next time Candidate Clinton says he will do for America what he's done for Arkansas."

The Clinton campaign, striking back, accused Bush of "skirting around Arkansas today, just the way he skirts around the real issues of the campaign."

It also released two documents in which Bush either praised or exonerated Clinton on two of the issues he attacked him on today—education and taxes. One was a Bush note to Clinton after they both participated in an education summit of governors in 1989, a conclave where Clinton served as an effective mediator between the administration and Democratic chief executives. "Well done—oh so well done," Bush wrote to Clinton.

Also noted by the Clinton camp was an April 1989 interview in which Bush refused to criticize Clinton for seeking to raise taxes. "I can't pass judgment on the fiscal problems of Arkansas . . .," Bush said.

"I will not criticize or extend the read-my-lips syndrome to every governor that has to—is mandated—to balance budgets," he said.

On a day in which his campaign rejected a proposal to reschedule a debate for next week, Bush proposed that Clinton debate himself—"Candidate Clinton versus Governor Clinton."

He added, "You see, we've all heard what Candidate Clinton says he can do for America. But that's very different from what Governor Clinton has done to Arkansas, to the good people of Arkansas."

Bush retooled a line he has employed in his attacks on Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein. "My argument is not with the people of Arkansas," he noted. "They are good, decent, hard-working people. Frankly, they deserve treatment better than they've received from Governor Clinton."

To underscore today's anti-Clinton theme, Republican National Committee Chairman Richard N. Bond, leading a team of campaign officials in Michigan, unveiled a video named "Clinton versus Clinton" which uses film clips to make the case that he has been on different sides of issues from the Persian Gulf War to whether he would have an abortion litmus-test for Supreme Court nominees. On a train tour of Ohio and Michigan this weekend, Bush is expected to launch new attacks on Clinton.

Sprinkled through Bush's appearances today were thinly veiled references to what Bush has called "the controversy swirling around" Clinton and his draft record.

Looking over a vintage torpedo bomber in Longview, Tex., Bush recalled that it was the type in which he was shot down over the South Pacific during World War II. "I am proud I served my nation in combat," he said. In Greenville, Miss., responding to Clinton's suggestions that Bush fears debating, Bush said, "Who is he to call me afraid, for heaven's sake?"

In a frenetic day of campaigning more suited to late October than late September, Bush portrayed himself as a reluctant aggressor, insisting that he had so far "resisted the urge to focus on Governor Clinton's record," although his campaign has for months attacked Clinton as the "failed governor of a small state."

Staff writers Ann Devroy in Washington and David Maraniss in Austin, Tex., contributed to this report.

The New York Times - September 23, 1992

Bush, at 6 Stops in South, Opens Harsh Attack on Clinton's Record

By MICHAEL KELLY
Special to The New York Times

SHREVEPORT, La., Sept. 22 — Trailing in polls around the nation, President Bush today unleashed a harsh critique of Bill Clinton's record as Governor of Arkansas and depicted him as a man who could not be trusted to lead the country.

A combative, sometimes strident Mr. Bush derided Mr. Clinton as a "man who has the gall to go around America and promise the moon, when on issue after issue, the sky has fallen in his own backyard."

"He talks one way around the nation, he delivers misery at home," Mr. Bush said. "We've all heard what Candidate Clinton can do for America, but that's very different from what Gov. Clinton has done to Arkansas. The record of Governor Clinton proves that it doesn't matter what the candidate will say to anyone, because he won't deliver." [Excerpts, page A20.]

A Tactic Renewed

To lend emphasis to the argument, Mr. Bush staged an elaborate game of political encirclement, with Air Force One flying more than 2,500 miles in a single day to touch down in the six states bordering the one his opponent has governed for five terms.

Reprising a tactic from the 1988 Presidential campaign, Mr. Bush laid out a broad, highly detailed attack on Mr. Clinton's record, accusing him in unusually harsh language of a wide array of failures in leadership in areas like the economy, the environment, crime, civil rights and health care.

Although statistically the President was on solid ground in his criticism of the Governor's record, a closer examination shows that Mr. Clinton has accomplished much in his state, and that the statistics must be put into context to be understood fully. [News Analysis, page A20.]

In his stops today, a day that had once been set aside for a televised debate between the candidates, Mr. Bush spoke of Mr. Clinton as someone who believes he can win election "only by touring down America," as one who is "playing that old game liberals love to play — class warfare," as the sort of Governor who "coddles criminals" and wants to "raise taxes that will kill jobs."

But, in apparent recognition of Mr. Clinton's determinedly middle-of-the-road persona, Mr. Bush also attacked from the left, criticizing the Governor for his environmental record and his state's care of children and its record on civil rights legislation.

The President's tactics seemed to draw in part on those he used in 1988, when he scrapped Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of his political appeal by depicting him as a spendthrift who had done a poor job at home in Massachusetts.

Bush advisers said today that the President emphasized he was returning Mr. Clinton's attacks on him, because Mr. Bush did not want to be seen as the first candidate to go on the offensive. Now that the fight has been joined, however, Mr. Bush may stick to his tough tone, a senior aide said, even though classic political strategy calls for a return to a more positive tone just before Election Day.

"He's going to go out and say it and keep on saying it, because it's time for our principal to get into the fight," the aide said.

Difficult Straits for Bush

In the past, Mr. Bush has preferred to stay above personal attacks, letting surrogates handle them. It was perhaps a measure of the difficulty he faces with only six weeks until Election Day that he is now handling the job himself, and in states that, by recent history's guide, should have already been safely in the Republican column.

"We've got to get this in the mix," a second Bush adviser said, speaking on a condition of anonymity. "But at the same time, and in almost the same proportion, we've got to give people a reason to be for George Bush."

The President said: "For month after month, Governor Clinton has persisted in attacks on me — persistent, unrelenting and many very personal in nature. Frankly, he has distorted my record, and his campaign chairman even called me a racist. And this week, the Governor unveiled for the first time in this Presidential race negative campaigning, negative television advertising.

"So far, right up to today in Springfield, I have resisted the urge focus on Governor Clinton's record. But I must tell you, I am very tired of the distortions, tired of the half-truths. And the stakes are too high to let America be deceived by a negative campaign.

"So today, I have chosen to lay it on the line, talk about my opponent's record, talk facts, talk about the record in Arkansas, the Governor's record. And that means explaining the Grand Canyon that separates his rhetoric from the reality of his record."

In both tone and particulars, Mr. Bush's speeches at rallies in Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee vividly recalled his attacks on Mr. Dukakis as a left-leaning, blame-America-first, soft-on-crime liberal.

The New York Times

President Bush visited the states bordering Arkansas yesterday.

Trying the Cantoe Analogy

In Tulsa, Okla., the President said Mr. Clinton had "talked a lot, but done nothing," on civil rights. Later in Longview, Tex., flanked by hundreds of pompom-bearing cheerleaders, he charged his opponent with having a "sorry record, by any Texas standard," on health care, and of taking such poor care of the Arkansas environment that "the rivers are so polluted the fish glow in the dark."

Then, in Shreveport, La., where Mr. Bush was joined on the tarmac by a number of uniformed police officers, he said he wished that the tough-on-crime Candidate Clinton — "the Doberman puncher," he called him — could meet "Governor Clinton, the Chihuahua on crime," whom he accused of having "the worst record in the entire nation, when it comes to keeping criminals behind bars."

The Republican attack rested heavily on what Bush strategists see as Mr. Clinton's great weakness, that many voters do not fully trust his character. Mr. Bush thus spoke of Mr. Clinton as "slippery when wet," and made glancing references to his rival's much-publicized difficulty in explaining why he did not serve in the military during the Vietnam War.

In Shreveport, a man listening to Mr. Bush's invitation-only rally at the airport yelled out a question about Mr. Clinton and the draft, prompting Mr. Bush to reply: "No, I am not going to talk about the draft today. I'll let the American people make up their minds about that. All I will say is that I am proud I put on the uniform and fought for my country."

Quickly responding to Mr. Bush's attacks, the Clinton campaign accused the President of being afraid to make his charges directly to the Governor's face and of distorting his record.

Poking at the Record

"They obviously don't want to debate the Arkansas record face to face with Governor Clinton, as they turned down the debate that was scheduled to be held in Michigan today," the Clinton campaign's spokeswoman, Dee Dee Myers, said. "And they obviously are afraid to go into Arkansas and try to say this, because in Arkansas people know that the Governor's record is one of progress, with per capita income going up, welfare reform working, schools getting better."

While the direction of attack that Mr. Bush tried today is not new in general character — "the failed Governor of a small state" has been a Republican line for some time — the specific accusations were far sharper and more detailed and numerous than has been the case.

On civil rights, Mr. Bush dismissed Mr. Clinton's claim of a good record by saying that, as Governor for 12 years, Mr. Clinton had failed to sign a civil rights law banning discrimination. "That's right," Mr. Bush said. "Arkansas is one of only two states in America without a civil rights statute."

On Mr. Clinton's taxing and spending record, Mr. Bush said, "If you want a horror story, listen to this: he has more than doubled Arkansas state spending since 1983, and he has paid for a big increase the taxes that hurt the poor working families the most." Mr. Clinton, he said, had doubled the state gasoline tax, raised the tax on beer, instituted taxes on mobile homes and "even taxed food stamps until the Federal Government made him stop."

On the issue of crime, Mr. Bush's charges sounded like a replay of the attacks his campaign leveled against Mr. Dukakis over a Massachusetts program that allowed a murderer serving a sentence of life without parole to escape while on a weekend furlough and then brutally attack a Maryland couple.

Mr. Bush said Arkansas under Mr. Clinton's stewardship had "the worst record in the entire nation," in terms of paroling inmates who had served only small parts of their sentences, with "most inmates serving less than one-fifth" of their sentences. Violent crime, he said, had increased more than 38 percent during Mr. Clinton's tenure.

Ms. Myers, the Clinton spokeswoman, said Mr. Bush's charges were in many cases distorted because the President omitted to say that Arkansas's tax burden was in fact extremely low; that Arkansas led the nation in job growth in 1992 and that the Clinton Administration's failure to enact civil rights measures had not been for lack of trying.

SECTION: WHITE HOUSE BRIEFING

LENGTH: 1913 words

HEADLINE: REMARKS BY PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH
AT AN AIRPORT RALLY
GREENVILLE, MISSISSIPPI

KEYWORD:
BUSH GREENVILLE

BODY:
PRESIDENT BUSH: (Applause/cheers.) Thank you all. (Applause/cheers.) Wow! Thank you, Kirk (ph), thank you, Governor Fordite (ph).
Let me just start off by telling the people of Mississippi something you already know. You've got a great governor, a great new governor fighting for the people here -- (applause/cheers) -- and a (wonderful wife, Pat?). (Applause/cheers.)
May I salute our state chairman, Evelyn McFail (sp), a great political leader -- (inaudible) -- (laughter) -- and national committee woman Suzanne Rogers (sp) and my old friend whose home town we're in, long-time political warrior Clark Reed (sp). I'm proud to be standing next to him. (Applause/cheers.)
You know, you keep hearing the cry up there in Washington "clean house," all around the country because of the mess the Congress has made of things. BUt you've got two people that we don't want to clean -- we want to keep them there forever, and I'm talking about Trent Lott and I'm talking Thad Cochran, two great United States Senators. (Applause/cheers.)
I want to take some catfish back with me, so I'd like to ask somebody to bring (it?) to me. (Applause/cheers.) (Laughter.)
(Laughs.) I love these signs. "Arkansas for Bush. " We're not giving up on one single state around here. (Applause/cheers.)
You know, for the past few weeks, I've been traveling the length and breadth of our wonderful country campaigning for the ideas, the economic ideas that I believe in, my agenda for American renewal. And I want to open up new markets for American products, create new jobs for American workers because American workers never retreat, we always compete and we always win. We must open up the market. (Applause/cheers.)
All you hear out of the Clinton camp is gloom and doom. Let me tell you, the figures released this morning show that housing starts, a key indicator, are the largest increase in 18 months. Inflation is down, interest rates are low. Our economy is poised for a take-off if we make the right choice in November. Elect me as president. Do not put this recovery at risk. (Applause/cheers.) (Chants of "Four more years.")
You know, the backbone -- the backbone of Mississippi is small business, small businessmen, small businesswomen and I believe that small business will be the sturdy horse pulling the wagon of a recovering economy. And so I want to give small business relief from taxation, from regulation and, yes, from litigation. (Applause/cheers.)
Today -- you know, this is a ghastly figure, but do you know that Americans spend up to $200 billion in one year on lawyers and lawsuits and I think that is outrageous. As a nation we ought to sue each other less and care for each other more. Help me put a lid on these outrageous lawsuits. (Applause/cheers.)

I am so glad to see so many kids here today and I want to give our kids what they truly deserve, the finest schools in the entire world. And I want every parent, all across this country, to have the freedom to choose their schools for their kids, whether it's public, private or religious. (Applause/cheers.)
And there's so much more to our agenda for American renewal. Crime, fighting crime, fighting drugs, many other things. But while I've been out talking positively for the future, my opponent has chosen to fix his energies on the past. And month after month -- I believe it's about 11 months now, Governor Clinton has persisted in these one-sided attacks on me, distorting my record, telling untruths about what I've been trying to do for this country, and this week -- you remember all the things about negative -- be careful of the Bush campaign negatives -- this week, Governor Clinton launched the first nationwide negative television advertisements and so far up to now, I have resisted going after him. But I'm telling you, I am tired of these exaggerations and I -- (applause/cheers) -- and today I started to fight back. Today I started to fight back and we're going to talk about his record, his record next door. It is not fair to the people of Arkansas. (Chants.)
(Laughs.) I will. Just a minute here. (Laughter.) You know, today, we've been to all six states surrounding Arkansas and I want to see that we can move beyond Governor Clinton's rhetoric and see what he's really done for the people next door, for the people of Arkansas, or put it this way, what he's done to the good people in the state of Arkansas. (Applause/cheers.)
I support the people over there. I've been there many, many times. They are good, hardworking, decent people, and they deserve better treatment than they have had from that Governor of theirs for ten years. (Applause/cheers.)
You know, you hear a lot about debates. Governor's talking up there in Michigan, waving his arms around, talking about my being afraid to stand up with him. Who is he to call me afraid for heaven sakes? (Applause/cheers.)
The other side they're eager to debate. Well, I've got an idea. On the one side you can have candidate Clinton standing over here, and then over here you can have Governor Clinton and let them debate the rhetoric versus the record. (Applause/cheers.) Let him talk about a series of broken promises and let's just look at one issue and that's the need to give the middle class, you who pay the bills and do the work a big, fat chunk of the American pie. candidate Clinton, standing here, is playing the same old game that the liberals always play: class warfare. You've heard it over and over again and candidate Clinton is good at it, using the same tired, twisted, partisan statistics to explain how the poor only get richer if the rich get poorer.
Let me tell you this: According to candidate Clinton, the one over here, the last ten years have been a nightmare. Well, if you look at the facts, it simply is not true. Inflation is down; interest rates are down, and the American worker is still the most productive in the entire world. (Applause/cheers.)
You know, they got -- back in Washington, they have this thing called the Urban Institute, not usually one of my most ardent admirers, but listen to what they had to say about the 1980s, and I quote, "The rich got a little richer and the poor got much richer." And that is the truth. Our conservative policies of cutting taxes have meant more money in the pockets of all Americans. Candidate Clinton doesn't think it is fair, but maybe it is because Governor Clinton doesn't have much experience with tax fairness right across the border in Arkansas. (Applause/cheers.)
He talks about my record, let me talk about his factually. He's more than doubled Arkansas spending since '83. He's paid for it by raising taxes that hurt working families the most. He's raised (and extended his?) sales tax repeatedly. He's more than doubled Arkansas' gas tax. He's even taxed food stamps until the federal government forced him to stop. And he started taxing mobile homes and then he raised taxes on beer and then he tried to tax child care. And I guess it doesn't matter whether the burp is from the beer or the baby bottle, he's going to slap a tax on it. (Applause/cheers.) And I don't think we need that -- (applause) -- I don't think we need that for the United States of America.

Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Listen to what the Arkansas paper -- I'm going right to his home front for this one -- said about his tax policies. If Congress followed the example of Bill Clinton has set as governor, it would pass a tax program that would hit the middle class the hardest. Well, I don't want to favor the rich at the expense of the middle class. I want to cut taxes for all working Americans so that everyone can get rich because that's what America is all about. (Applause/cheers.)

Candidate Clinton wants to do for the American economy what Governor Clinton has done to Arkansas and I've got one question. WHy in the world should we let him do that to us? (Applause/cheers.)

As a candidate now he's come out of the box and he has already proposed the largest tax increase in American history and that's not even counting the payroll taxes that he wants to slap on for training and health care.

Now, you tell me, is that fair to the middle class? The answer is no. (Shouts of "no.") He's been talking the talk of economic fairness, sounding like Robin Hood -- rob from the rich and give some crumbs to the poor. But Governor Clinton has been more like Captain Hook -- scaring the wits out of the middle class. And I believe in something entirely different. I believe that government is too big and spends too much of your money. And I want to change that. (Applause/cheers.)

That's why I ant that line item veto and the balanced budget amendment and that tax off -- tax cut off to let people check their box on their income taxes. If the Congress can't do it, let the American people do it and let me follow through to get these taxes down and get this deficit down. (Applause/chants.)

There's a good idea. They say "Clean the House." I'll tell you. There's going to be 150 new members of Congress or something like that and the day I am reelected, I'll sit down with them and I'll say, "Look, the American people said they don't want to spend more. They don't want to tax more. They want to get government under control. They want to do something about crime. Now you new members of Congress help me get all this done in the first 100 days. Give the people a break." (Applause/cheers.)

You know, I feel the same way on this tax situation as Kirk Fordite (ph) does. He went to the mat with that state legislature to ease the tax burden on the working men and women. And Governor Fordite (ph) might not have won that first round, but he's going to come back again and again and he knows the same as I know that you can spend your money better than any government planner can. Low taxes are the way to get the economy moving again. (Applause.)

So, whether it's -- the issue is fairness, the environment, health care, civil rights, fighting crime, improving our schools, candidate Clinton promises America the moon while Governor Clinton watches the sky fall in over in Arkansas. He has a lousy record and I don't want him to do to the United States that which he has done to the great state of Arkansas. (Applause/cheers.)

You know, I'm proud to be back in Mississippi and I think of this when as Kirk (ph) referred to it as one of the most patriotic of states. And I will say this: No, I am not going to bring up the draft issue, but let me just simply say I am proud that I wore the uniform of the United States of America -- (applause/cheers) -- and I am proud that I served -- (applause).

We have a great country. We are the leader of the entire world. Soviet communism is dead. Peace is on the move all around the world and Governor Clinton says we're a nation in decline. He ought to get outside of Little Rock and travel and find out that we are the most respected nation on the face of the earth, and I want to keep it that way by keeping us strong, keeping us determined, keeping us economically viable at home. (Applause/cheers.)

You have a great -- you have a great, proud state, and I'm proud to be back in it. May God bless the people of Mississippi and the people of the United States of America. (Applause/cheers.)
Thank you very, very much. (Applause/cheers.) Thank you. What a great turnout. (Applause/cheers.)

HEADLINE: REMARKS BY PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH
AT A RALLY AT CRAIGMONT HIGH SCHOOL
MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE
TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1992

KEYWORD:
BUSH MEMPHIS

BODY:
PRESIDENT BUSH: (Applause/cheers.) Thank you. (Applause/cheers.) Thank you very much. What a wonderful welcome. (Applause/cheers.) Thank you. Thank you very much. (Chants of "Four more years.") Thank you. Thank you all very much. Thank you all very, very much and may I salute first Congressman Sundquist. You're lucky. You've got a great member of the United States Congress -- (applause/cheers).
Barbara Bush off on some other part of the campaign trail sends her love to Martha Sundquist, great wife of Do. And may I say how pleased I am to have been introduced by one of the truly great members of the cabinet, a man who served this country with such distinction, a national leader for education, Governor Lamar Alexander. (Applause/cheers.) What a class act. (Applause/cheers.)
And may I thank and salute Dr. Haus (sp), the superintendent of the schools here in the -- in Memphis. Dr. Langston (sp), the Shelby County GOP, and -- (inaudible) -- Bush -Quayle chairman in '92. And may I single out Dr. Walters (sp) -- (applause/cheers) -- the -- I didn't know kids clapped that much for a principal. But you're right. She is outstanding and I -- (applause/cheers) --
And also -- (inaudible) -- Ashford (sp) who greeted me earlier, the student body president. You've got a class act president of this school too. (Applause/cheers.) You know -- (applause) -- I left the White House at 6:40 this morning. We started out on the campaign trail in Springfield, Missouri, and this the sixth state we've visited in just a little over 12 [TEXT OMITTED FROM SOURCE]
And this morning, new figures came out. Housing starts are up, the largest increase in a year and a half -- (applause/cheers) -- inflation is under control, interest rates remain low, and I believe the stage is set after a long begrudging, anemic growth, set for an economic recovery if we make the right choices in November. I need four more years to -- (applause/cheers) --
You know -- (chants) -- (inaudible) -- you know, the choice -- the choice before the American people is really clear. Governor Clinton's already started with his program. He wants more government and higher taxes. That is bad for America. (Boos.) And I believe in something completely different and so does Don. I believe that government is too big and spends too much of your money and I want to cut taxes and provide incentives to get this economy moving again. (Applause/cheers.)

You know, small business will be the horse pulling the wagon (or?) recovering economy, and so I want to give small businesses relief from taxation and regulation and litigation. (Applause/cheers.)
You know, parents don't coach Little Leagues for some -- for fear. But they -- people don't -- doctors don't deliver babies for fear. Today Americans spend up to $200 billion a year on lawyers and lawsuits and I think it's crazy. As a nation, we've got to sue each other less and care for each other more. (Applause/cheers.)
But I -- I have one wish above all others, though, and as I look out at the young faces in this audience, I think of the potential of our great country and of the challenge of our schools -- (applause/cheers). And your great governor, Lamar, puts our challenge in education this way. When the fifth graders graduate from high school, they will have changed so much we will barely recognize them. But for our young people to succeed, our schools will have to change so much that we barely recognize them either. And that's why I am so excited about America 2000 movement, the program to literally revolutionize education in this country. (Applause/cheers.)
And I'm excited about our new American schools, about our higher standard for students, about freeing teachers from government bureaucracy, and about giving every parent the choice to choose the best school for their child to learn in. (Applause/cheers.)
And so one of the reasons I came here to this wonderful institution is to say thanks to Memphis because you are the big part, a major part of America 2000. You are a leader in a revolution that is changing America from the school yard, right on up. (Applause/cheers.)
And so to the parents and the teachers and business leaders and the community activities I say thanks for caring about the kids, thanks for being loyal to Memphis' future. And of course, there's another reason I cam here today, as one or two of you may have heard. There's an election coming up in November. And I have been traveling all across America, making our case for our renewal agenda. And while I've been outlining my positive ideas for the future, Bill Clinton has been -- chosen to focus his energy on the past. And literally -- you go back now, a lot of you are students about government and politics, month after month for the last 11 months, Governor Clinton has persisted in attacking me, distorting my record, and this week he unveiled the campaign's first negative commercial. He's been saying, "Oh, wait until the Republicans go negative." It is the Clinton-Gore ticket that has aired the first national negative ad. (Boos.)
Now, I have a confession to make. I haven't talked much about his record because I think the American people would rather hear a positive discussion about what we'll do to renew America. (Applause/cheers.) But I will also admit that I'm a little tired of having my own record distorted, and I think it's time we don't just listen to what he says but take a look at what Governor Clinton does. (Applause/cheers.) And that is what I've been doing today. That's exactly what I've been doing today from Missouri to Oklahoma, to Texas, to Louisiana, to Mississippi and now in the great state of Tennessee, pointing out the fact -- (applause/cheers) -- pointing out the facts, no exaggeration, about Governor Clinton's record on economic fairness, on civil rights or lack thereof, on the environment, on health care. And over and over, you see the same pattern emerging.
Governor Clinton promises the moon to America, while the sky is falling in on Arkansas. (Applause/cheers.) And regrettably -- regrettably for the young people in that state, the wonderful young kids across the way in Arkansas, education is no different. In his new book, candidate Clinton says America has failed to provide its children with either the best education or adequate protection from violence. And I disagree. I am proud of what we've done to promote America 2000. And I am -- (applause/cheers) -- and I am especially proud of the leadership of that great son of Tennessee Lamar Alexander. (Applause/cheers.)

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

And you know, yeah, sure, Governor Clinton, candidate Clinton, is critical of our record, but what has Governor Clinton done? And here are the facts -- (cheers) -- let me give it to you. You're not going to like it. On behalf of your friends in Arkansas, but here's the record. Here are the facts pure and simple. During the 1980s, Arkansas fell from 47th to 48th place in percentage of adults with a high school diploma. Arkansas' rankings on its primary college entrance exams, the ACT, have declined. Twenty-eight states use the ACT as their primary college entrance test.

The New York Times reported that in 1979, Arkansas ranked 20th out of those 28 and its latest ranking is down to 25th out of 28.

While we're going up, the nation, he's going down in the state of Arkansas and ti is not fair to the young people there. (Applause.) It is not fair to the young families across the way. And we know that more than three-quarters of Arkansas high school graduates require remedial instruction when they get to college. Think about that. Three out of four Arkansas college students spend their first year of college re-learning what they missed in high school. That is not fair to the families of Arkansas. (Applause.)

And when it comes to the percentage of adults with a college degree, Governor Clinton's Arkansas still ranks 50th, 50th in the entire nation. Now these are facts pure and simple and you can see to the Grand Canyon that what candidate Clinton says about improving education and what Governor Clinton has actually done. And if you believe as I do -- (applause) -- if you believe education is important, I ask you to look beyond the rhetoric, look at the records, and I have fought for higher standards, I have fought for less regulation, I have fought to reinvent our schools and I have fought for parental choice. These ideas are not popular in all places. But if you care about education, I think you must look at the two candidates and ask yourself a simple question: When it comes to reforming our schools, which candidate will tell America what it wants to hear and which will tell America what it needs to hear. (Applause/cheers.)

You know -- (chants) -- okay -- (chants) -- enough talk -- enough talk of politics for the day. It's been a long, long day. It's been a wonderful day. And as you can imagine campaigns can be grueling. And once in a while I get home, you know, after midnight, after being attacked in the press (in the?) craziest mood I've ever seen out there, and Barbara will ask me this simple question. "You know, we've got a good life. We've got a wonderful family. Why do you put up with it?" And I'll tell you why I put up with it, why I want four more years. I want it for the children, for the bright- faced kids I see on the parents' shoulders at rallies all across the nation. (Applause/cheers.)

Don Sundquist tells me that there are six young people from Russia with us this evening -- (applause/cheers). They're part of an exchange program. And think about -- think about how ten years ago such a program might never be possible. Think about how five years ago these very kids -- (inaudible) -- half a way around the world knowing nothing of our world but fearing as our own families, our own kids did, that the world they knew might be destroyed in a moment with the mere press of a finger on a button.

Well, that terrible, awful nightmare has receded from our children's minds and today -- (applause/cheers) -- and today these Russian kids -- these Russian kids can join with Memphis kids and they could read stories together and play basketball and laugh at the same jokes and share the same sweet memories and think of all that has happened to make this possible. In another time in another age, Thomas Payne wrote these simple words: "We have the power to begin the world again." Well, we have begun our world again. And our new work is a world of hope. It's a world of promise. A world of peace. A world of unprecedented opportunity. And I want our children to realize the magic of this new world, to believe in miracles just as we can look at our Russian friends here tonight and say "Miracles have finally come true." And -- (applause/cheers) --

And if we can renew the world, and I take great pride in the fact that our administration has literally changed the world, made peace a reality and not a dream, made democracy on the mark, made -- made tranquility around the world something real and something we can touch and feel. And if we can change the world, then I have no doubt that we can renew America and we can strengthen our economy, we can reinvent our schools and there is much work to be done -- (applause) -- and I believe I am the leader to do it. (Applause/cheers.) That -- and that is why I am running for reelection and that is why I ask for your support.
And don't ever let the governor from across the way convince you that we are a nation in decline. We are the most respected, freest, greatest nation on the face of the earth and I want to lead you for four more years. Thank you and may God bless the United States of America. Thank you very, very much.
(Applause/cheers.)

HEADLINE Quayle revs up Phoenix crowd
Health-care reforms of GOP are touted

In a fast-paced visit to Phoenix on Tuesday, Vice President Dan Quayle detailed sweeping reforms that the Bush administration says would provide quality health-care for the working poor.

Although the theme of the presidential campaign over the past few days has been the nation's health-care crisis, Quayle clearly was trying to sway voters in Arizona.

"Every state is important," said Dave Beckwith, Quayle's press aide. "We are confident Arizona will come into the fold."

But a poll released Tuesday indicated Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton's maintains his lead among the state's voters.

Clinton leads President Bush, 44 percent to 36 percent, with 20 percent undecided, according to the latest Arizona State University KAET-TV poll. The survey attributes Bush's showing to his inability to hold on to his GOP base in the state.

In a KAET poll last month, Clinton led Bush 42 percent to 36 percent, with 22 percent undecided.

Quayle didn't appear worried during a rally in downtown Phoenix. Smiling, the vice president greeted hundreds of sign-waving, horn-blowing supporters at Patriots Square, promising "more jobs through tax cuts."

Some of the horn blowers clearly were fans of Clinton and running mate Al Gore, holding signs showing their presidential preferences.

But Quayle ignored them. After his speech, he moved among the crowd, shaking hands and signing autographs.

Earlier, Quayle told 200 employees at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center that the GOP is proposing a plan of tax credits, deductions and government-financed vouchers to allow consumers to shop for the health-care program that fits their needs.

Quayle said the Republican proposal would prevent others from experiencing the plight of one Ohio woman. He said she had a job offer but couldn't take it because her employer did not provide health insurance.

Quayle said the Republican proposal would allow tax deductions of up to $3,750 a year for medical expenses on an earned income of up to $80,000 a year.

Democrats counter that Bush's proposed tax deduction would amount to only about $563 a year, about the cost of one month's coverage.

The basis of the Bush plan is a bill stalled in the Democratic-controlled Congress that would cap awards in medical-malpractice suits.

Quayle said $20.7 billion a year is spent on "defensive medicine," which forces doctors to order more tests and prescribe more medicine in hopes of avoiding costly malpractice lawsuits.

Both the Democrats and Republicans want to prevent insurance companies from "cherry picking," covering only the healthiest patients.

- A St. Joseph s employee asked Quayle how he would limit the expenses associated with high-technology medicine. The vice president replied that the issue needs to be addressed but that "there is a catch."

"We don t want collusion or price-fixing," he said.

- But Quayle said there should be some communication within health-providing industry to determine costs of various procedures in a particular community.
- Quayle criticized the Democrats' plan, saying it would ration health care and would be similar to Canada s socialized medicine.

He said that works fairly well for primary care but is "not very good by U.S. standards" for specialty care.

- When he visited the hospital, Quayle signed the leg cast of 55-year-old Peg Fisher.

"I don't believe it," she said. "I am a born-again Republican and proud of it."

Supporters of Clinton and Gore at a rally in front of St. Joseph s earlier in the day agreed with the vice president s suggestion that America s health-care system needs major reform.

- But Clinton backers, including two Phoenix physicians, blasted the Bush-Quayle plan, saying it does not guarantee health care for every American and would not control runaway costs.

"The best leadership we have comes from Bill Clinton and Al Gore," said Dr. James Malone, chief of surgery at the Maricopa Medical Center.

Malone and Dr. Paul Geimer, president of the Maricopa Foundation, a health-maintenance organization, said America s health-care system is "in crisis."

Bush Warns of 'Misery on Main Street'

Clinton Serves Up Rhetorical Grits During Georgia Bus Tour

By Ruth Marcus and Howard Kurtz
Washington Post Staff Writers

President Bush said yesterday that Bill Clinton and his "Oxford cronies" would mean "misery on Main Street" as his campaign mounted a broad attack on the Democratic nominee's record, including a television ad depicting Clinton as a tax-and-spend governor.

In a Washington briefing, a seven-minute attack video, the 30-second ad and a campaign swing by Vice President Quayle, the theme was the same: Clinton as a proponent of big government and an untrustworthy candidate who has taken both sides of issue after issue.

The Arkansas governor, meanwhile, was ladling out rhetorical grits on a down-home bus trip through southwest Georgia. "I'm glad to be in a place where I don't have an accent," Clinton said. "A place where a moonpie is something you eat, a mud cat is something that plays baseball, a promise is something you keep, and a president is someone who cares about ordinary working people, like the pride of south Georgia, Jimmy Carter."

Campaigning with Sen. Sam Nunn and Gov. Zell Miller, Clinton struck a tone of moderation, saying, "We had to change the Democratic Party so the Democratic Party could command the confidence of a majority of the American people."

It was a day filled with economic charges and countercharges. Bush used a visit to Greensboro, N.C., to propose a $20 billion, five-year program of tax breaks for small business, telling a gathering of business people that "I've been there myself" as a Texas oilman.

If Clinton is elected, the president said, "you can board up the windows or you can hand out the pink slips." But a senior administration official acknowledged that the chances Congress would approve the tax breaks this year are "slim to none."

In a rally at State College, Pa., where he appeared with Pennsylvania State University football coach Joe Paterno, Bush continued to pound Clinton as a backer of government bureaucracy. Clinton supporters, including one wearing a chicken suit and others sporting beaks, clucked to show their disapproval at "Chicken George" for balking at a debate with Clinton.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater again used harsh language in discussing Clinton's draft record. "He lies about it every day," Fitzwater said.

The new TV ad, which uses speeded-up footage of Clinton signing bills and playing saxophone, says: "Bill Clinton has promised to increase government spending $220 billion. Guess where he'll get the money?"

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's communications director, called the ad "highly misleading," saying that "the very taxes that Bush hits us on are ones that he himself has raised," including levies on liquor and wine. He said Arkansas taxes as a percentage of personal income have declined under Clinton and that the ad ignores Clinton's plans for $145 billion in spending cuts. "They're just trying to scare people," Stephanopoulos said.

But Charles Black, senior adviser to the Bush campaign, said: "I don't think they can even pretend they can make up all that with spending cuts. . . . He can talk now about taxing the rich, but for 12 years in Arkansas he's been taxing the poor, the working class and the middle class."

Asked if the campaign was wary of running a humber ad, Black told reporters: "I suppose a humorous ad gives you less backlash than other formats. . . . It makes it more memorable, more entertaining, and therefore makes it stick better."

Sources said the Bush campaign, which has aired previous ads on network television, bought time in Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Louisiana, North Carolina, Connecticut and Maine. The video, which may be used in future ads, features a mock "Clinton vs. Clinton" debate. In one scene, Clinton vows to serve his four-year term as governor; in the next he accepts the presidential nomination.

Quayle carried the same message to a rally in Oklahoma City, saying Clinton's position has shifted dramatically on tax cuts, the Persian Gulf War, welfare reform, school choice and public funding for abortion. Noting that Oklahoma native Will Rogers once said he never met a man he didn't like, Quayle said Clinton "never met a tax he wouldn't hike."

On the Democratic swing through Georgia, Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, tried to shore up Clinton on military issues. Nunn said Clinton "never, ever asked me how much can we cut from defense. Many times he's asked me what we need to do to secure our nation. . . . I trust Bill Clinton to be the commander in chief of this country."

Later, at a rally in Valdosta, Clinton retaliated for Bush's attempt to portray him as an elitist by calling him an "Oxford man." Clinton, who studied at Oxford as a Rhodes scholar, noted that Bush had attended prep school and Yale and got "$300,000 from his daddy to start the family business."

BUSH SAYS CLINTON IMPERILS BUSINESS

Democrats Accuse President of Squandering Arms Cuts

By MICHAEL WINES
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 — President Bush continued his political assault on Gov. Bill Clinton today, using his first television attack ad and two pointed speeches to broaden his profile of Mr. Clinton as a tax-and-spend liberal.

Mr. Bush said at a morning rally in Greensboro, N.C., that Mr. Clinton's plans for higher business taxes would wipe out scores of thousands of jobs in that state alone and millions of businesses nationwide. Later, at Pennsylvania State University, he told a roaring crowd of students that his rival was "taxing everything he can get his hands on" as Arkansas Governor in the 1970's and 1980's.

By contrast, Mr. Bush proposed in Greensboro to cut small-business taxes by $20 billion in a second term, something he said would create new businesses and jobs in "the backbone of the economy."

Another Debate Canceled

By Administration estimates, that brought to $165 billion over five years the total of tax cuts that Mr. Bush has pledged to seek since his campaign began. (Page A22.)

Criss-crossing Georgia by bus, Mr. Clinton and his running mate, Senator Al Gore of Tennessee, responded by attacking Mr. Bush's economic record in speeches and in a new commercial. The Clinton campaign again accused the President of avoiding confrontation when organizers of a debate set for Tuesday in Louisville canceled it today.

over Mr. Bush's objection to the format.

In Columbus, Ga., Mr. Clinton accused Mr. Bush of squandering billions of dollars in military spending cuts made possible by the collapse of communism.

'Got It Upside Down'

He said Mr. Bush has poured that money "into a looming budget deficit to pay for the S.& L. crisis and ballooning health-care costs." And Mr. Gore lambasted Mr. Bush for what he called the worst economic performance since the Great Depression.

"Unemployment under Bush and Quayle is up," he said. "New housing starts are down. Poverty is up. Personal income is down. Bankruptcies are up. Consumer confidence is down. Everything that should be down is up, everything that should be up is down. They've got it upside down. We want to turn it right-side up."

Mr. Bush and Mr. Clinton have traded punches before. But today's campaigning seemed to mark the full emergence of the President's own negative political strategy, weeks after the Clinton campaign began a daily pounding of Mr. Bush's performance as President.

A senior Bush campaign official said the race was moving toward a new stage in which the President, having set his advisers' view set out a plausible economic policy and rebuilt some lost credibility, would start reminding voters of Mr. Clinton's liabilities.

"A big chunk of his lead is pretty soft — over a third of it — and they know it," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Attacking on Fast-Forward

Moving to claim that chunk, Mr. Bush's advisers summoned reporters to the Washington campaign headquarters today to view a 30-second commercial that combines humor with a biting attack on Mr. Clinton's taxation record as Arkansas governor.

The advertisement intersperses speeded-up film clips of Mr. Clinton signing legislation with a recitation of his state tax increases on groceries, beer, mobile homes, consumer goods, tourism and cable television. It concludes by noting that Mr. Clinton wants to raise Federal spending by $220 billion if he is elected President, and asks: "Guess where he'll get the money."

The Bush campaign said the commercial went on the air today but declined to say where it had bought broadcast time.

Campaign officials made it clear that the commercial is but the first of many negative advertisements. "The fact is, Bill Clinton has been a big taxer in Arkansas," the campaign's senior political adviser, Charlie Black, said. "We're simply raising the legitimate point that you have to judge what's likely to happen with taxes on his record."

The Clinton campaign's communications director, George Stephanopoulos, called the commercial misleading. "It's interesting to see George Bush talking about spending when he is on this pander parade," Mr. Stephanopoulos said, referring to Mr. Bush's recent trips around the nation to distribute Federal largess like disaster relief and contracts to build aircraft.

He added: "It's hard to imagine anybody with less credibility on taxes than George Bush, a man who says 'read my lips' about taxes. It's time to reach for your wallet and check the facts."

Heckling Over Debate

By some measures, it was one of Mr. Bush's better days, with sharp speeches and lively crowds, while Mr. Clinton drew subdued audiences. But the President was dogged by questions about his refusal to debate Mr. Clinton until both campaigns have negotiated a format and locales. Mr. Clinton has agreed to a series of debates proposed by an independent, bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates.

That group today scrapped plans for a first debate, set for this Tuesday in Louisville, because Mr. Bush had not agreed to the format. Last week, a debate scheduled to take place in Michigan earlier this week was canceled for the same reason.

At a rally in State College, Pa., Mr. Bush was loudly heckled on the matter. "I want a debate," he asserted, "over issues, and an argument over ideas, and I will stand on my record. And I won't let that Arkansas Governor run away from his record either."

The Clinton campaign chairman, Mickey Kantor, said his candidate would be in Louisville on Tuesday whether or not Mr. Bush showed up. "We keep accepting," he said. "They keep rejecting. They are missing in action."

On the road in North Carolina, Mr. Bush accused Mr. Clinton of supporting programs that would tax millions of small businesses into bankruptcy.

Mr. Bush claimed that local businesses would be ruined by Mr. Clinton's tax proposals, including $150 billion in new personal and corporate income taxes, a 1.5 percent tax on payrolls and a health care plan that would require another 7 percent payroll tax.

"If you're like the typical small business, you operate with a profit margin of about 2 percent," Mr. Bush said. "His payroll taxes alone amount to 4 percent to 5 percent of your operating expenses. That's your profit margin and then some. So here's your choice: you can board up the windows or you can get out the pink slips."

Mr. Bush unveiled his own business plan, combining tax and policy changes costing $28.1 billion over five years. The plan mixed new proposals with some that have been languishing for months in Congress.

Passage Unlikely

Bush aides said legislation implementing the program had not been drafted. Nor was it especially likely that a Democrat-dominated Congress would pass the program, they conceded.

Mr. Clinton, meanwhile, unleashed another negative television advertisement in Mr. Bush's adopted home state, Texas. Like earlier ones, it focuses on the high unemployment rate, using a close-up shot of Mr. Bush's lips as background for the complaint. Bush promised 30 million jobs in eight years. He's 29 million short."

It concludes by asking, "Can Texans really afford four more years of this?"

Mr. Clinton said today that his campaign "is competitive all across the South, and we intend to press them through the fall. Today's bus trip aimed to calm Georgians' fears that Mr. Clinton's efforts to avoid the Vietnam-era draft and his advocacy of sizable military spending cuts would not result in harm to a state of big military bases, sprawling defense plants and conservative, patriotic servicemen and women.

Support From Nunn

Standing on stages draped in flags, Mr. Clinton supported both the defense establishment and retraining programs for workers displaced by Pentagon cuts. For insurance, he brought along Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia, chairman of the Armed Services Committee.

Mr. Nunn said Mr. Clinton would be "a Commander in Chief we can trust," and likened him to Thomas Jefferson. "You've been accused of everything that Thomas Jefferson was accused of, except being raised on cornbread," Mr. Nunn said. "And I'm waiting for that one, because that's going to help us right here in the South."

With an advertising film crew along to record the proceedings, Mr. Clinton was more sober and substantive than usual, beginning his day with a restatement of his defense policy for an invited audience.

He and Senator Gore missed few chances to appeal to regional pride. "I'm glad to be in a place where I don't have an accent today," Mr. Clinton said. "A place where a moon pie is something to eat, a Mudcat is someone who plays baseball, a promise is something you keep and a President who cares about ordinary people." The Mudcats are a local baseball team.

FORT WORTH -- Echoing a new Republican campaign theme, Vice President Dan Quayle condemned Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton on Wednesday for what he called a series of "flip-flops" on key issues.

Speaking before a receptive crowd of about 400 Tarrant County Republicans at the Radisson Hotel, Mr. Quayle launched a frontal attack on Mr. Clinton's "character," using the word eight times in a 20-minute speech.

"These differing positions reflect a fundamental element of Governor Clinton's character: the triumph of expediency over principle, of convenience over truth," Mr. Quayle said. "Governor Clinton says he is the candidate of change, but he truly is the changing candidate."

On other issues, The Associated Press reported that Mr. Quayle told reporters flying back to Washington with him Wednesday night that abortion "is not an issue with the American people."

"It is a figment of your imagination if you think that this is an issue that is talked about a lot," he said when a reporter said that huge protest marches for and against abortion rights in Washington were not news media creations. "It's simply not the coffee shop talk. They're asking, 'What are you going to do about jobs?'"

In Fort Worth, Mr. Quayle outlined a list that he tagged Mr. Clinton's "top 10 flip-flops," saying the Arkansas governor has reversed himself repeatedly on several issues for the sake of political expediency.

The speech coincided with a new television ad for President Bush that shows Mr. Clinton seemingly debating himself in spliced-together clips of his statements on several issues.

Mr. Quayle, whose Fort Worth speech wound up a two-day Texas swing before he headed to Oklahoma, cited 10 issues on which he said Mr. Clinton has taken conflicting stands, using Clinton quotes for his "top 10" list.

The issues ranged from Mr. Clinton's 1990 pledge to serve a full term as Arkansas governor -- a pledge made before he entered the presidential race -- to what Mr. Quayle called his soft-pedaling of an earlier strong stand for a middle-class tax cut.

Mr. Quayle also contrasted Mr. Clinton's early reaction to a proposal of granting government vouchers to help pay for private school educations, when he said he was "fascinated" by the plan, to a later speech in which he disparaged the proposal.

The speech picked up on GOP attacks on Mr. Clinton's military record, citing his conflicting statements on how he avoided military service in Vietnam.

In addition, Mr. Quayle quoted Mr. Clinton as favoring sanctions before military intervention in the Persian Gulf war, as well as support for the war.

Other issues on Mr. Quayle s flip-flop list were public funding for abortions, congressional term limitations and financing for health insurance.

In Little Rock, Ark., Clinton spokesman George Stephanopoulos accused Mr. Quayle of distorting Mr. Clinton s record. He released a statement rebutting each of Mr. Quayle s criticisms.

In some instances, Mr. Stephanopoulos said, there are differences between what Mr. Clinton has done as governor and what actions he would take as president.

Bush Says Clinton's Plans Stifle Business Competition

By GWEN IFILL
Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Sept. 25 — Saying that Democrats are captives of the "government elite" and preoccupied with playing by a set of old rules, President Bush asserted today that Gov. Bill Clinton's policies would cripple business competition.

Speaking to employees at the suburban headquarters of the Motorola Corporation and to a conference of executives involved in the research and development of high technology, Mr. Bush made an edgy and defensive assault on Mr. Clinton, who he said failed to promote new business approaches as Governor of Arkansas.

Mr. Bush said that Mr. Clinton had failed to improve his state's education system, was indecisive on major issues and that even his best intentions would be stunted by "park-happy partisans" in Congress.

"He and his advisers talk about industrial policies, economic plans designed by a government elite," he said the Motorola conference in Schaumburg. "And the planners dictate the terms, pick winners. If you're lucky, they let the private sector have a piece of the action. And all of it is paid for with new tax dollars from the middle class."

Mr. Bush said Mr. Clinton's plan to increase financing for research and development would "get the foundation of American science and technology enterprise" by cutting reimbursements to universities involved in research.

The President's criticism of Mr. Clinton's record on education — an issue on which he had praised the Governor in the past — was a departure for Mr. Bush. "Three-quarters of Arkansas's high school graduates needed remedial education when they get to college," Mr. Bush said. "And so it's off for him to talk about high tech when the residents of his state have to worry about getting out of high school."

Mr. Bush said his Administration would encourage the private sector to increase research. He said this would increase foreign trade and lead to the creation of more jobs.

He announced today that the Administration would sign new cooperative agreements with private companies on burning trash to produce electricity.

"We Should Compete"

"In short, I believe we should compete [illegible]

[illegible] Government that reaches into the pocket of every American taxpayer."

The Clinton campaign immediately dismissed Mr. Bush's remarks. George Stephanopoulos, Mr. Clinton's communications director, cited the endorsements Mr. Clinton has received from 400 corporate executives.

"If Bill Clinton's so bad for the high-tech industry, why are all the leading high-tech companies supporting him?" he said.

Mr. Bush's remarks today seemed designed in part to seize what has been a potent theme from Mr. Clinton: the desire for change. But as the President spoke at the University of Chicago, more than 100 abortion-rights demonstrators, students and Clinton volunteers protested across the street.

"When the shouting is finished, and all this campaign winds down to its end, it will come down to a very personal and serious decision for every American," Mr. Bush said. "What kind of tomorrow do you want? Do you want a tomorrow in which we look forward and take on the competition, or one where we turn inward to protectionism and pull back?"

Mr. Bush said Mr. Clinton would "kill competition" in areas like health care insurance. Mr. Clinton on Thursday expanded on his proposal for universal health care, saying that he would provide tax credits to small businesses to ease the costs of complying with the plan.

Bush says Clinton aides would dictate business policy.

GETTYSBURG Walking the streets of the borough where another Republican delivered one of the most famous speeches in American history, Vice President Dan Quayle yesterday, exhorted the thousands gathered there to back this year s GOP ticket.

When a few dozen Democratic hecklers made their voices heard, Quayle just grinned and let loose a volley at Democrat Bill Clinton.

"Abraham Lincoln talked of empowering people and individual liberty," Quayle said. "We as Republicans believe in empowerment by lowering taxes to create jobs and opportunity. Bill Clinton thinks the way you get more jobs is to raise taxes, and that is wrong."

The walk though Gettysburg was the most public event of his morning swing through the midstate. Quayle also attended a private fund-raiser and a meeting with weekly newspaper representatives in Harrisburg. While in Gettysburg he addressed the 113th annual Pennsylvania State Firemen s Association convention.

Quayle s wife, Marilyn, visited Camp Hill on Thursday, a day after President Bush campaigned in State College.

Republicans need a strong win in GOP-dominated central Pennsylvania to carry the state and its 23 crucial electoral votes. Although Bush narrowly won the state four years ago, recent polls show the president trailing Clinton.

Campaign officials expect more visits to the area by both campaigns before Nov. 3.

Yesterday, in the Republican stronghold that Lincoln made famous, Quayle was treated like royalty as he walked down Stranton, Carlisle and York streets.

A teen-ager s jaw dropped in wonder, and she waved her hand to show the crowd it had been touched by the vice president.

A man trailing Quayle during his walk called out "Four more months!" Another man, looking out a second-story window, shouted back, "Four more years!" The crowd cheered.

When people around him asked about the economy, Quayle climbed onto a porch to address the crowd.

"I m not saying things are good with the economy," said Quayle, wearing a casual blue shirt and slacks, without jacket or tie. "Things could be better, but we could make things worse by electing someone who will start raising taxes and expanding regulations."

Clinton has said he wants to raise taxes on the wealthiest 2 percent of Americans, but Clinton backers, Quayle said, want to raise the tax rate on the wealthy from 28 percent to 36 percent.

To raise $150 billion to finance his programs, Quayle said Clinton won t be able to stop at tax increases on the wealthy.

In order to raise that money, Americans making as little as

$35,000 a year would have to be taxed at a rate of 36 percent, Quayle said.

Before leaving, Quayle made a point of stopping in the Lincoln Diner, where he sat and talked with the luncheon crowd and hugged two patrons who were celebrating birthdays.

"I m for anybody that s not Bush," said Renee Kary, a Gettysburg College freshman with a Ross Perot button and a Clinton sign. "Unfortunately, I m four days too young to vote."

Campaigning with Quayle in Gettysburg was U.S. Rep. William Goodling, the Jacobus Republican who represents the district. One of Goodling s opponents, Republican-turned-independent Tom Humbert, was among the crowd.

On Tour, Bush Attacks Clinton's Tax Plan as Expensive for the Middle Class

By GWEN IFILL
Special to The New York Times

ARLINGTON, Ohio, Sept. 26 — Trying to win back disgruntled middle-class voters, President Bush said today that Gov. Bill Clinton's economic proposals would hurt the middle-class taxpayers that the Democratic challenger has pledged to help.

White House officials produced new economic estimates that they said demonstrate that Mr. Clinton's plan to raise the taxes of the top 2 percent of the nation's earners would actually cost a couple with a gross income of $61,000 about $2,800 a year in higher taxes.

That is the big secret of this campaign, Mr. Bush said standing on the bunting-draped rear platform of a train that stopped in four Ohio towns today. "To capture all the revenue that he wants to raise to pay for all these promises, Bill Clinton will have to go after the middle class. I am not going to let him do that, and neither are you."

President Bush offered his harsh new critique as he began a two-day he said, was shorthand for what Mr. Clinton really intends, which is to raise taxes only on those people who earn $200,000 or more a year.

Issues get murky on who is in the middle class.

And the tax burden on the middle class, he said, would still be eased by allowing taxpayers to choose between increasing the deductions they are allowed for children and across-the-board tax relief.

In Washington, an economist with Congress' Joint Committee on Taxation noted that it was difficult to pin down the top 2 percent, but said the figure fell between Mr. Clinton's and Mr. Bush's notions, at about $155,000. This figure was based on report by the Internal Revenue Service this spring.

Mr. Clinton's plan, the President

[illegible] and warming to his appeals to working Americans, Mr. Bush used a quotation of a line from a country music song that Mr. Clinton has often used to attack the President on the issue of health.

A man heard that song, he said, "drives a Buick after [illegible] Monday sang it. Maybe [illegible] They're giving after the middle class a ways and [illegible] blues. Big government gets the gold and you get the stiff."

Mr. Bush also renewed a [illegible] complaint about Mr. [illegible] economic plan, asserting that [illegible] Democratic plan [illegible] how he would pay for it. The budget says the Mr. Clinton has suggested to help reduce the deficit [illegible] $1.4 trillion in spending [illegible] he outlined.

The White House had said the trip was patterned after a similar journey made by President Reagan from Davenport to Harrysburg, Ohio, in 1984. Move to Campaign Follows Calls By Veterans Groups for Ouster

By Ann Devroy and Bill McAllister
Washington Post Staff Writers

The White House announced yesterday that Edward J. Derwinski, who has been unpopular with many veterans groups, resigned as secretary of veterans affairs to join the Bush presidential campaign.

The resignation of a Cabinet officer four months before the end of a presidential term is rare. But officials with President Bush, who is campaigning on a whistle-stop train trip through Ohio and Michigan, said Derwinski was not forced out.

Sources close to Derwinski, however, said his resignation was related to opposition to the former Chicago Republican congressman from veterans organizations angry over Derwinski's efforts to open two veterans hospitals to non-veterans.

According to individuals familiar with the dispute, the Veterans of Foreign Wars had let the White House know it would not endorse Bush for reelection as long as Derwinski remained head of the Veterans Affairs Department.

The VFW was one of the first organizations to endorse Bush in 1988, and an official of the organization said yesterday it is possible the VFW might do so now.

The announcement of Derwinski's resignation came as the president took his campaign on a train tour across the heart of Ohio that ended last night with a torchlight parade and fireworks at big rally in Livonia, Mich.

Bush sounded a familiar Republican warning with a r twist: that his Democratic opponent end up taxing the middle class to pay his campaign promises no matter how ch he denies it.

That is the big secret of this campaign," sh told a cheering audience in Marysville, io, on his first stop. "To capture all the enue that he wants to raise, to pay for all se promises, Bill Clinton will have to go r the middle class."

Bush portrayed Clinton as a president would have to raise taxes, and as a gov or who repeatedly did raise taxes in Ar sas. Bush hammered that theme as his car train, the "Spirit of America," made its 233-mile journey. Along the route, occasional bystanders waved to the train, and at the four stops yesterday, many hundreds gathered as the unusual train, blowing its whistle, pulled into town.

Bush called it "blowing the whistle" on Clinton and based his tax assertions on Clinton's proposal to raise $150 billion in new revenue by increasing income taxes on the top 2 percent of the income scale, what the Democrat describes as persons making over $200,000 a year.

Bush and his aides said Clinton's figures do not add up. To produce that much revenue with the top tax rate at 36 percent, the Clinton ceiling, Bush said the Democrat would have to increase taxes on much lower-paid wage earners—down to individual taxpayers with $36,600 in taxable income, or even lower. "Big government gets the gold and you get the shaft," Bush told his midday audience in Marysville.

Clinton, Bush said, "says don't worry, all the money will come from the rich, those people who drive Jaguars, eat their quiche and inherit money." But, Bush told his cheering partisans, Democrats from Jimmy Carter to Michael S. Dukakis have sung "that old song . . . they're going after the rich but the middle class ends up singing the blues."

Clinton campaign officials said, however, that the Bush calculations are wrong and mischaracterize the Clinton plan. "It's the whopper of the year," said Clinton spokesman George Stephanopoulos. "They can't defend it."

He said Clinton plans to raise $83 billion through three separate taxes on high-income Americans, and less than half that by by raising the top rate to 36 percent for married couples earning $200,000 or more a year and single persons earning $150,000 or more. The rest of the $150 billion comes from sources such as a surtax on millionaires, and taxes on foreign firms that invest in the United States.

But the senior Bush official who briefed reporters said the top 2 percent of income really starts with single taxpayers with taxable income over $64,800, not $200,000 as Clinton says.

People with income that high, he said, are less than 1 percent of the population and too few to produce the revenue needed for the Clinton plan.

The Bush official said the president's calculations take into account the other tax increases in Clinton's plan. Bush made particular reference to one of them, the tax on foreign companies, in Marysville because Honda has a large auto plant employing 18,000 there and its Japanese owners would presumably get hit with that tax increase.

But Gene Sperling, a Clinton adviser, said Bush "wants to demagogue it both ways" on this tax, by claiming that the tax will raise

BODY:

President Bush was chugging through Republican regions of the Midwest aboard the "Spirit of America" when the White House announced that Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward J. Derwinski had, in effect, jumped obligingly from the train.

Booed this summer at an American Legion convention, unpopular with the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Derwinski had become a drag on Bush's re-election bid. His departure for a campaign job underscored Bush's eagerness - and need - to find a way to reverse Bill Clinton's advantage in the presidential race.

As in many trailing campaigns, Bush's aides point to polls that show voter support soft for each candidate, and say the overwhelming majority of Americans are only now beginning to pay attention to the election.

The voters are "just starting to listen," says Mary Matalin, the campaign's political director. And the opportunities to shake up the race are numerous: a re-entry by Ross Perot; debates and as-yet unaired television commercials, including any that try to exploit questions about Clinton's Vietnam-era draft record.

Even so, the economy, the dominant issue of this election, isn't likely to be of much help to the president, and Derwinski's departure on Saturday was only one of several manifestations of Bush's maneuvering during a weekend campaign trip that included a whistlestop tour through Ohio and Michigan.

Simultaneous to the Derwinski announcement, the White House disclosed that Bush would supply the Israelis with Apache and Blackhawk helicopters, a move likely to reassure Jewish voters worried about the president's decision to sell F-15 planes to Saudi Arabia.

And on Friday night, he announced he was sending legislation to Congress to cut his own pay and those of other top government officials by 10 percent "as a symbol of our understanding of the concerns" of so many.

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Veterans, Jews, victims of the recession. The White House seems nervous about all these voters - and more - as the polls chart a continuing advantage for Bill Clinton a little more than five weeks before the election.

Two polls released Saturday showed Clinton holding to a solid lead over Bush in a two-man race - 10 points in one, 12 in the other.

With Perot pondering his decision, a poll by Newsweek showed Perot taking just 9 percent of the vote in a three-way race - compared to 46 percent for Clinton and 37 percent for Bush.

From the bunting-draped rear platform of his train or sun-splashed autumn fairs along his route, Bush stuck to his script. He ripped into Clinton vigorously as a man who would raise taxes on the middle class, and blended in occasional jabs about the draft and Clinton's record as governor of Arkansas.

"Every time the guy opens his mouth he promises a new program," Bush said. "But he hasn't said how he'll pay for them. He'll need billions of dollars more, beyond the tax increases he's already proposed.

"Where's he going to get the money? Right out of your pockets," he said.

And he folded the Democratic Congress in on his indictment. "We'd have a rubber-check Congress and a rubber-stamp president" if Democrats win this fall, he said.

Added Torie Clarke, the campaign's press spokeswoman, "The debate of this election is shifting slowly but surely from a referendum on the economy and George Bush's role to a debate about what you do about it. And when you get into that, a compare and contrast area, we'll do better."

But even as Bush experimented with his rhetoric, the contrast between his standing in the race and Clinton's was reflected in their weekend schedules.

The president's train ride took him through solidly Republican parts of Ohio and Michigan as he tried to shore up a shaky base. Except for his final stop outside Flint, Mich., his train went only through congressional districts represented by Republicans.

"Solidifying our support," was how Michigan GOP Gov. John Engler described the political agenda of the whistlestop tour. But in contrast, Clinton spent much of the weekend in low-yield states that Democrats usually only dream of carrying.

New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine, South Dakota - only 14 electoral votes among them - have usually long since been written off as lost by most Democratic candidates by October.

The Republicans

Pushing Anti-Crime Issues, Bush Cites Arkansas Crime

By GWEN IFILL
(Copyright © The New York Times)

DALLAS, Sept. 28 — President Bush made a new bid for support today on an issue that had served him well in the past, saying he would reduce crime in a second term by compelling Congress to pass a stalled anti-crime bill.

Declaring that the nation must now "win the peace" having won the cold war, the President listed an array of increased penalties and crimes that he said he would bring under Federal jurisdiction. He contrasted these proposals, most of which he has offered before, to the record that Gov. Bill Clinton has compiled on crime in Arkansas.

On the stages where he spoke today, Mr. Bush pitched his appeal to a beleaguered working class. In Dallas, he spoke from a platform constructed on the front steps of a former crack house. In St. Louis, Mr. Bush told an invited audience of supporters in the basement of a Catholic Church, "Americans want to take crime out of their neighborhoods and put the neighbors back."

Hits Arkansas Crime Rate

He attacked Mr. Clinton as a leader who had failed to control a rising crime rate in Arkansas, and he suggested that the Democratic nominee would be unable to control it nationally.

Mr. Bush said that Arkansas had spent too little on police protection and prisons and that its rate of violent crime had climbed faster than the national rate.

"This kind of record is not right for Arkansas," he said, "and it is not right for America."

George Stephanopoulos, the communications director for the Clinton campaign, did not deny the accuracy of the statistics cited by Mr. Bush, but instead went on the offensive, charging that Arkansas's increasing crime rate was part of a national surge in violent crime during the Republican administrations of the last 12 years.

"George Bush going to St. Louis to talk about his record on crime is like Saddam Hussein going to Kuwait to talk about his record in fire fighting," Mr. Stephanopoulos told reporters in Little Rock, Ark.

> Words aimed at a working class weary of crime and criminals.

Trades Barbs With Heckler

While acknowledging that Mr. Clinton must bear some responsibility for the crime rate during his five terms as Governor, Mr. Stephanopoulos pointed to a 6.2 percent drop in the per capita crime rate in Arkansas during the first six months of 1992 as evidence that steps taken by the Clinton Administration were beginning to work.

Mr. Bush's attacks on Mr. Clinton have grown more strident in recent days and organizers at his events have gone to great lengths to block Clinton supporters from disrupting speeches.

Today, when a heckler called Mr. Bush "Chicken George" and asked why he would not debate Mr. Clinton, the President broke away from his prepared text to steer attention to questions about Mr. Clinton's draft record and the pollution in Arkansas rivers caused by poultry waste.

"May I say a word about the chicken question?" Mr. Bush asked. "You're talking about the draft record chicken? Or are you talking about the chicken in the Arkansas River? Which one are you talking about? Which one? Get out of here. Maybe it's the draft. Is that what's bothering you?"

No No-Tax Pledge

This morning Mr. Bush said in an appearance on the ABC News program "Good Morning America" that he did not intend to raise taxes but that he would not make a pledge to that effect.

"Pledge" has gotten to have a little political connotation of its own," Mr. Bush said. "I am going to hold the line on the taxes. I'm going to get them down." Asked if that meant there would be no new taxes, he said: "That's exactly what it means."

Mr. Clinton has had some success this year on the crime issue, and the National Police Officers' Association endorsed him last month. Although Mr. Bush's aides issued a list of endorsements from small police groups, no national law enforcement groups have yet endorsed Mr. Bush this year.

Assails Carjacking

The President reserved his toughest language today to condemn the crime of carjacking, recently much-publicized incidents in which motorists were injured or killed when their vehicles were comandeered. The President described the "animal behavior" of criminals in some such cases and said the act should be a Federal offense.

"These people have no place in a decent society," he said. "And as far as this President's concerned, they can go to jail, and they can stay in jail, and they can rot in jail for crimes like that."

Copies of a position paper distributed by the campaign today stated that carjacking should be punishable by death.

In his anti-crime speeches today, the President did not mention handgun control, nor did he address any of Mr. Clinton's anti-crime proposals, which include a waiting period for the purchase of handguns and hiring 100,000 police officers.

But he called for mandatory AIDS tests for people arrested for sex offenses, making failure to pay child support a Federal crime, minimum sentences of 15 to 20 years for gang leaders who commit crimes, and increased penalties for the criminal use of a firearm.

Much of what Mr. Bush proposed today is in the anti-crime legislation he has sent to Capitol Hill. But in repackaging it at a crucial time in the campaign, he is seeking to signal once again that he can be trusted to make the nation safe while Mr. Clinton cannot.

"In too many places, our grandparents and grandchildren lock themselves behind the bars on their windows, afraid to come out from a jail called home," he said. "This simply must end."

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle said today times are difficult but "not as bad as we're being told" and cautioned voters against putting Democrats back in control in both the White House and Congress.

Quayle attacked Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale as well as Bill Clinton in a speech to a young, enthusiastic crowd of about 4,000 at Clovis High School in this small town near the Texas border.

Quayle was starting a three-day trip that will take him later today to Colorado Springs, Colo., Rapid City, S.D., and Rockford, Ill.

New Mexico hasn't voted for a Democrat since 1964, but Clinton led Bush, 44-33, in a Sept. 8-11 statewide poll by the Albuquerque Journal.

"Yes, times are difficult, times are challenging, but it's not as bad as we're being told. America is still the greatest country in the world," Quayle said.

"On a per capita basis we are the richest country," he said. "We are 36 percent richer than everyone in Germany, 26 percent richer than everybody in Japan."

"We want to create jobs and hope and opportunities. We don't want to go back to malaise with Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale," he said.

Clovis is a town of 30,000, 225 miles east of Albuquerque, in farm country. Curry County voted 2-1 for Bush in 1988.

Quayle, before a private $ 100-a-head fund-raiser, stopped at Zeke's Restaurant to chat with several ranchers and farmers.

Paul Barnes, 49, a Curry County commissioner and a Democrat, said afterward he was undecided about his vote but added, "I think our problem in Washington is more with our Congress than our administration...That's where we'd like to see some changes."

Cody West, 18, a Portales High School senior who attended the rally at his rival school, said, "We're kind of between (Ross) Perot and (President) Bush. No Clinton. He just doesn't seem honest."

Bush Rhetoric Subdued On Arkansas Crime

Gore Slams President on Cable TV Bill

By Ann Devroy
Washington Post Staff Writer

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28—President Bush returned to what had been one of his most potent issues in 1988, crime. But Bush's rhetoric today was notably subdued for a Republican in an election year.

Unlike 1988, when Bush repeatedly attacked Democrat Michael S. Dukakis as soft on crime and a threat to the country, today the president mentioned Gov. Bill Clinton only to reel off crime statistics in Arkansas, saying that crime has been increasing there and that state inmates serve less than a fifth of their sentences, compared to federal inmates who serve on average 85 percent of their sentences.

"This kind of record is not right for Arkansas and it is not right for America," Bush said. He added that the Little Rock Fraternal Order of Police was supporting him, not Clinton. "They know Governor Clinton's record best and they are endorsing me," Bush said.

In terms of policy, the president's address offered little that was new beyond calling for increased penalties against carjackers. Using the Sept. 8 carjacking death of Savage, Md., woman Pam Basu, 34, as an example of "animal behavior" that must cease, Bush said, "These people have no place in a decent society. And as far as this president is concerned, they can go to jail, and they can stay in jail, and they can rot in jail."

The Bush administration backs a move in the Senate to make carjacking a federal crime punishable by up to life in prison if a death occurs. The White House fact sheet distributed here said he would go beyond that to support the death penalty for carjackers whose crime results in a death and life imprisonment if the carjacking involves serious injury to victims.

"I want thugs who take cars at gunpoint to stay in a cell so long that when they get out they're too old to drive," Bush said.

Outside the hall, protesters holding Clinton-Gore signs held one of their noisiest demonstrations, shouting, "No More Years" and playing on a loudspeaker over and over Bush's "read my lips" pledge, from the 1988 GOP convention, against tax increases.

In addition to the carjacking legislation, Bush called for increased penalties for fathers who fail to support their children, strengthening legal procedures to thwart domestic and sexual violence and laws to deal with gang violence. He also called for stronger efforts to stop crime against the elderly and repeated his call for overhaul of court procedures that protect defendants but which he said drag out the legal process.

Much of this is part of the anti-crime agenda Bush has pushed since taking office. As usual, he blamed Democrats in Congress for stalling on his program.

But Democratic vice presidential nominee Albert Gore Jr. said today that it is Bush who is the obstacle, not Congress, at least in the case of the cable television re-regulation bill.

The Tennessee senator traveled to Morganton, N.C., site of a bitter fight over a cable TV franchise, to depict Bush as anti-consumer because of his opposition to a cable re-regulation bill passed this month by Congress.

"It's up to President Bush whether he's going to side with the people or side with the wealthy and powerful monopoly that is trying to rip off the people of this country," Gore told 200 supporters jamming the 155-year-old Burke County Courthouse.

The House and Senate passed the cable bill, which would allow federal agencies to regulate price increases in many cable operations, by margins sufficient to override a veto, and Gore predicted that lawmakers would hand Bush his first override if the president carries out his veto threat. Even Republicans will resist siding with Bush against a bill that is popular with consumers, Gore said.

"The winds of change, blowing through this country, are blowing through that Capitol building also," he said. "They're not quite as worried about President Bush being upset with them as they are about the American people being upset with them."

Meanwhile, Vice President Quayle traveled to what have been GOP strongholds, criticizing Clinton's health care plan in Colorado Springs, saying it would lead to "rationing" and "macromanagement" by bureaucrats. And in Clovis, N.M., he told high school students that while times are "difficult," they are "not as bad as we're being told."

Surrounding Curry County voted 2 to 1 for Bush in 1988, but a recent statewide poll had Bush trailing Clinton, 44 percent to 33 percent.

Staff writers Charles Babington, traveling with Gore, and John F. Harris, traveling with Quayle, contributed to this report.

HEADLINE: Veep Blasts Clinton's Health Care Plan

BYLINE: By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL, Associated Press Writer

DATELINE: COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.

KEYWORD: Quayle

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle, campaigning across the Rocky Mountain states, said Monday the Republican and Democratic tickets are "worlds apart" in their approach to the nation's health care crisis.

"We are offering a plan, based on tried and true market principles, that will provide universal access for all Americans," Quayle said at a downtown rally before 750 people and a later speech at Penrose Hospital. "Our opponents are offering a government run system, with rationing of health care services, paid for with higher taxes."

Bill Clinton unveiled more details of his plan last Thursday in Rahway, N.J. He would impose a national ceiling on health care expenditures and provide universal coverage primarily by requiring employers to insure their workers.

Quayle said Clinton "wants government to be involved in health care and health insurance like it's never been involved before."

"We want affordable health insurance for all and to buy that in the private sector," said Quayle.

President Bush proposed last February that the poor and middle-class who lack insurance get federal tax credits and vouchers to buy private insurance. But he has never sent Congress legislation spelling out how to pay for it.

Quayle said the tax credits and vouchers would cost $ 100 billion over five years, and the funds could be reallocated from money that Medicare and Medicaid already are spending on care for the uninsured needy.

Clinton has said his plan would not require tax increases.

But Quayle said, "Even The New York Times - not usually a friend of our administration - can see that the Clinton plan is full of holes."

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

He quoted from a sharply critical editorial in Sunday's Times that said Clinton had produced "just a skimpy statement of principles" and raised "the nightmarish prospect that Mr. Clinton will try to run health care by dictating prices in ways doomed to fail."

Quayle embarked on a three-day campaign swing across the West and Midwest with stops in Republican strongholds in Clovis, N.M., and here, and was holding a rally in Rapid City, S.D., before heading to Rockford, Ill., for the night.

Earlier, before a a young, enthusiastic crowd of more than 2,000 at Clovis High School, Quayle said, "Yes, times are difficult, times are challenging, but it's not as bad as we're being told."

It was the first visit by a vice president to that farm town of 30,000 near the Texas border since Richard Nixon came through in October 1954. Surrounding Curry County voted 2-to-1 for Bush in 1988, but a recent statewide poll by the Albuquerque Journal had Bush trailing Clinton, 44-33.

HEADLINE: 'Don't Believe the Pundits and Polls,' Quayle Urges

BYLINE: By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL, Associated Press Writer

DATELINE: ROCKFORD, Ill.

KEYWORD: Quayle

BODY:

Vice President Dan Quayle said today that Ross Perot "certainly sounds like a candidate" but added it doesn't matter to the Bush campaign whether the Texas billionaire re-enters the presidential race.

Quayle was on a 200-mile bus tour through Illinois farm country from Rockford to Peoria and on to Decatur, seeking to overcome Bill Clinton's big lead in this key Midwest state. He flies tonight to Detroit.

He was greeted by a cheering crowd in the town of Oregon and afterward was paying a nostalgic visit to Ronald Reagan's boyhood home in Dixon. "Illinois is going to vote for George Bush again," Quayle told an audience of 300 in Oregon. "Don't believe the pundits, don't believe the polls, believe the people."

In Rockford, Quayle told reporters, "I don't know what Ross Perot is going to do ... If you listen to what Ross Perot said on Larry King last night, he certainly sounds like a candidate."

Asked if a reborn Perot candidacy would help the Republicans, Quayle said cryptically, "If Ross Perot runs, that's good for us, and if Ross Perot doesn't run, that's good for us."

When reporters asked for an explanation, Quayle initially said, "That's for you to figure out." He said later he meant that any attention to Perot would focus voters on the deficit issue and that would help Bush.

Quayle skipped from New Mexico to Colorado to South Dakota to Illinois in 17 hours of campaigning Monday while much of the political world's attention was focused on Dallas and Ross Perot's debate about re-entering the race.

"I don't think it's important whether we can convert Ross Perot to support us," Quayle said on KEVN-TV in Rapid City, S.D. "The question is, how are we going to get volunteers and people who are inclined to vote for Ross Perot to vote for the president?"

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

The Associated Press, September 29, 1992

He also discounted the polls that point to a double-digit lead for the Democrats with just five weeks to election day.

"The polls are just not a real good barometer of what's going on," Quayle told KOTA-TV of Rapid City. A new ABC News-Washington Post poll showed Clinton's lead narrowing to 9 points from 21 points in the same poll a week ago.

Quayle took pains to remind South Dakota farmers of the grain embargo imposed by the Carter administration 13 years ago.

Asked how important South Dakota's three electoral votes were in the race for the White House, he replied, "It's very important. ... We're arguing for the heart and soul of the farmers and ranchers."

"The whole Midwest is very important," he said, acknowledging polls that show middle America is up for grabs in the presidential race. "That's why I'm back again to make sure the farmers ... know exactly who brought up the grain embargo the last time: Jimmy Carter. This time Bill Clinton says he would be exceedingly reluctant to use a grain embargo."

He vowed that Bush would never resort to the tactic that Carter used to punish the Soviet Union for its invasion of Afghanistan.

Quayle also invoked memories of Carter administration "malaise" at rallies in Clovis, N.M., Colorado Springs, Colo., and in Rapid City's crowded civic center.

He called Carter "a president who said that it was the people's fault. Malaise was the word that he used."

HEADLINE: Bush Brands Clinton 'Chameleon,' Campaigns With Country Stars

BYLINE: AP Photos, By TERENCE HUNT, AP White House Correspondent

DATELINE: CLARKSVILLE, Tenn.

KEYWORD: Bush

BODY:

President Bush barnstormed across Al Gore's home state Tuesday, attacking Bill Clinton as a political chameleon who waffled on the Persian Gulf War and tries to "come down on both sides of every issue."

After missing two debates under a format proposed by a bipartisan commission, Bush offered a compromise for four Sunday night debates using two different setups. Two of the debates would be staged with questions from reporters and two with a single moderator.

"Let's get it on," Bush said in a speech at Austin Peay State University in Clarkesville. He said Ross Perot would be welcome at the debates if the Texas businessman decides to resume his candidacy.

On a day of travel across Tennesse, Bush tried to spread doubts about Clinton's leadership and trustworthiness.

"You have to take your lumps and you have to take a stand. And I don't think that we can take a risk on Gov. Bill Clinton to be president of the United States of America."

The president also suggested that Clinton, who avoided the draft during the Vietnam war, was too inexperienced to sit in the Oval Office.

"I am very proud that I served our country in the uniform of the United States of America," the president said. "And that helped me make a tough decision when Saddam Hussein moved out and tried to take over another country."

Firing back, Clinton's communications director, George Stephanopoulos, said, "The closer the election gets the more desperate he gets and the stranger his rhetoric gets. If flip flops were an Olympic sport, George Bush would get the gold medal year after year."

Five weeks before the election, Bush's staff expressed encouragement about a Washington Post-ABC News poll showing the president nine points behind

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS
Services of Mead Data Central, Inc.

Clinton, compared with 21 points a week earlier.

Bush visited five cities across Tennessee, the home state of Gore, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, as Clinton went to neighboring Kentucky to spotlight the president's absence at a proposed debate in Louisville.

Republicans and Democrats alike say Clinton holds the edge in Tennessee now, in part because of Gore's influence. Tennessee has 11 electoral votes.

"We've got a shot at winning Al Gore's home state," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said. "That would be significant."

County music favorites Naomi Judd and the Gatlin Brothers joined Bush as he began a day of airport rallies in Johnson City, Knoxville and Chattanooga before attending a rally at Austin Peay State University in Clarksville. The concluding event was a country music salute to Bush at Opryland, USA, in Nashville.

Bush got friendly crowds of perhaps a thousand or more people at the airport rallies and then a larger audience at the university. The president said that Clinton - who has been hammering Bush on the economy - was trying to make Americans forget that the war against Iraq "was a proud moment in the history of the United States."

A group began chanting, "Where was Bill?"

Bush said that on the Gulf War, "He was on both sides. He was for the people that opposed it but he was for those that supported me. That's a great thing but you can't do that as president of the United States of America. You've got to make the tough calls."

Expanding his attack, Bush said, "One day Gov. Clinton says, 'Well, I'll never run for president,' and the next year he announces he's running for president.

"And one day he says he for the North American Free Trade Agreement and then he says, 'Well, I haven't made up my mind yet.' And one day he's for raising fuel efficiency standards on cars, and the next day he says, 'Well, I'm flexible on that one.'

"And one day he says the middle class deserves a tax break and the next day he's plotting new ways to hit the middle class to pay for all of his programs." Bush said.

"And if he ever became president of the United States - and he won't - we'd have to replace the American eagle with a chameleon," the president said, drawing cheers from the crowd. "That is not the way it works in the Oval Office. You cannot come down on both sides of every issue," Bush said.

Stephanopoulos did not dispute that Clinton changed his mind on seeking the presidency. On the trade agreement, he said Clinton supports a treaty if it provides adequate protection for workers. He said Clinton had not backed away from his support of fuel efficiency standards of 40 miles a gallon. And he said Clinton had supported Bush on the war.

LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS LEXIS·NEXIS

"Anyone who says 'read-my-lips, no-new-taxes' and then signs the biggest tax increase in history has scant credibility on straight talk," Stephanopoulos said.

Other country music performers joining Bush on his tour included Ricky Skaggs, the Forrester Sisters, Crystal Gayle, the Oak Ridge Boys and Lee Greenwood.

Bush, in New Jersey, Says Clinton Misleads on Family-Living Issues

By MICHAEL WINES
Special to The New York Times

NEWARK, Sept. 30 — Seeking to maintain the offense in a week of pitched campaign warfare, President Bush used Gov. Bill Clinton's record on children's issues today for a new attack on his opponent's credibility.

Mr. Bush accused the Democratic Presidential nominee of misstating his record on family matters, ranging from welfare reform to infant formula. And in both Wisconsin and here in Newark, where he addressed several hundred cheering union members this evening, he referred to what his strategists say will soon become a campaign staple: Mr. Clinton's avoidance of the draft in the Vietnam War.

"I do not 'loathe' the military," he told workers gathered in a brick hall near downtown Newark, referring to a 1969 letter that Mr. Clinton wrote about his anguish over the draft. "When Governor Clinton wrote and said 'loathe the military,' I said, 'That's a shame.' These people served their country with distinction and honor. We ought to salute them, not loathe them."

Union Endorses Bush

The workers, members of Local 472 of the Heavy and General Construction Laborers Union, AFL-CIO, erupted in cheers. Later, the 7,000-member union announced its endorsement of Mr. Bush.

Aides say the Bush campaign is preparing television advertisements that center on the draft issue, questioning the honesty of Mr. Clinton's account more than his motivations when he briefly entered an R.O.T.C. program to escape a draft induction notice.

In contrast to many campaign appearances in recent weeks, in Fond du Lac, Wis., on his first stop today, Mr. Bush was met by a large and vigorous crowd that overflowed the town square where the event was held.

The centerpiece of Mr. Bush's Wisconsin stop was the unveiling of a new proposal, which the President called Project K.I.D.S., to increase Federal and state efforts to collect delinquent child-support payments.

The program focuses on removing Federal and state benefits to parents who skip payments, and on garnishing their wages. "The bottom line," Mr. Bush said, "is that if you haven't done anything for your kids, don't expect anything from Uncle Sam."

Mr. Clinton also traveled to New Jersey today to attend two fund-raising events and to speak at Drew University in Madison, whose president, former Gov. Thomas H. Kean, sent his apologies for not appearing. Mr. Kean, a Republican, said in a letter to Mr. Clinton that he was scheduled to appear with another candidate today — Mr. Bush.

RE: MUR 3664

Dear Ms. Weissenborn:

By this letter we formally request an extension of time of fifteen (15) days to file our formal response in the above cited MUR. The additional time is necessary to complete our investigation of the allegations raised by the Complaint. Since our response was originally due on December 3rd, granting of this request would require that the response be filed no later than December 18th.

I thank you for your attention in this matter.

Sincerely,

J. Stanley Huckaby

Re: MUR 3664--Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, Treasurer, Respondents

Dear Ms. Weissenborn:

This letter constitutes the Response of Bush - Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and its Treasurer, J. Stanley Huckaby (collectively "Respondents") to the above-captioned Complaint and supplement filed with the Federal Election Commission by the Democratic National Committee ("DNC"). Respondents were granted an extension of time through and including December 18, 1992, to file this response.

In short, the DNC alleges that Respondents violated certain provisions of the Federal Election Campaign Act and this Commission's regulations by failing to pay for campaign-related travel by President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle on Air Force I and Air Force II, respectively. Alternatively, the DNC alleges that Respondents violated a Commission regulation by failing to report on its periodic reports to the Commission the amount of its liability for such travel expenses, or at least an estimate of the unbilled amounts.

The answer to the first allegation is that, promptly upon receipt of invoices from the responsible government entities, Respondents have paid or will pay the appropriate cost of each of the trips, with one exception discussed later in this Response, challenged by the DNC. The answer to the second allegation is that the Commission has never required a presidential candidate who travelled on government conveyance to formulate and report an estimate of the expense for using that conveyance prior to receiving invoices from the government for that travel.

I. RESPONDENTS HAVE PAID OR WILL PAY ALL CAMPAIGN-RELATED TRAVEL EXPENSES UPON SUBMISSION OF PROPER INVOICES.

Pursuant to 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7, Respondents have paid or will pay all campaign-related travel expenses incurred by President Bush and Vice President Quayle for travel on Air Force I and II. Critically, all the trips cited by the DNC, with the aforementioned exception, have been or will be paid for by Respondents according to the strict letter of the Commission's regulations promptly upon receipt of appropriate invoices from the federal government. The Commission's audit staff can confirm these payments in the course of its audit.

The one exception is the Vice-President's trip to Cape Canaveral, FL, on September 12, 1992. This was an official trip for the launch of the space shuttle. The Vice-President's comments cited in the complaint were in direct response to a reporter's question, as the Complainant's own supporting exhibit indicates. The comments therefore qualify as mere "incidental (political) contacts" as permitted at 11 C.F.R. 9004.7 (b)(2).

Of course, payment is not due to the government or contemplated by the regulations until an invoice stating the amount owed is presented to Respondents. A candidate who uses government conveyance has never been required, and is not now required, to pay the government in advance. See 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5) ("the candidate's authorized committee shall pay the appropriate government entity . . . .") For reasons over which Respondents have no control, the White House and Office of the Vice President often take weeks or even months to issue invoices for campaign-related travel. Throughout the 1992 presidential campaign, Respondents have paid all such invoices promptly upon receipt.

In contrast, a candidate who uses an airplane owned by a corporation or a labor organization must pay in advance for using that airplane. See 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e) ("A candidate . . . who uses an airplane which is owned . . . by a corporation or labor organization . . .must, in advance, reimburse the corporation or labor organization . . . .") (emphasis added). If the Commission is inclined to change its regulations to require payment in advance for travel on government conveyance, such a change can be made only in the context of a rulemaking proceeding, not in response to a complaint.

Respondents obtained no financial or political advantage from the government's delay in issuing invoices. For each campaign-related trip on Air Force I or Air Force II, Respondents recognized that they would ultimately be responsible for paying all pertinent expenses, and reserved sufficient funds to pay them. During the delay, Respondents earned no interest on the funds held, and could not in any event exceed the spending limitation set forth in the federal election laws.

Accordingly, the DNC has come forward with no basis for believing that Respondents have violated the Commission's regulations governing campaign-related travel.

II. THE COMMISSION HAS NEVER REQUIRED PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES TO REPORT AN ESTIMATED LIABILITY TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT FOR USE OF GOVERNMENT CONVEYANCE.

The DNC next alleges that Respondents violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report estimates of amounts owing to the federal government for campaign travel on Air Force I and Air Force II. For three reasons, this argument also fails.

First, in each of the last four presidential elections -- 1976, 1980, 1984, and 1988 -- at least one of the candidates used government conveyance for campaign travel. In 1988, the undersigned served as Treasurer for then-Vice President Bush, who travelled on Air Force II. Neither the 1988 campaign nor to our knowledge any other campaign since passage of the Federal Election Campaign Act has reported estimates of unbilled costs incurred for Air Force I and Air Force II travel. The Commission has never objected.

Second, the regulation relied upon by the DNC is inapplicable to this situation. It states that

> "[a] debt of obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise or written agreement to make an expenditure, the amount of which is over $500 shall be reported as of the date on which the debt or obligation is incurred . . .. If the exact amount of a debt or obligation is not known, the report shall state that the amount reported is an estimate." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

When the Commission proposed the regulations that resulted in the current version of Section 104.11(b), its intent was to address debt settlements at less than stated value by insolvent or defunct campaign committees. The Commission explained that "[t]he proposed new regulations . . . would establish a new system whereby indebted political committees would be required to submit comprehensive debt settlement plans for commission review prior to termination." 53 Fed. Reg. 49193 (Dec. 6, 1988). The express purpose of the regulations was to "address, in a systematic way several interrelated concerns regarding the creation and disposition of election-related debts and obligations under the FECA." Id. at 49194.

When it announced the final rule, the Commission declared the purpose as "to ensure that the creation and settlement of such debts [owed by candidates and political committees] do not result in excessive or prohibited contributions to the debtor committees, and to promote the timely public disclosure of such transactions." 55 Fed. Reg. 26378 (June 27, 1990). The Commission re-examined > "several fundamental issues regarding debts owed by political committees, such as which types of committees should be permitted to seek debt settlement, whether debt settlements should be reviewed as agreements are reached or only after all creditors have ratified settlements, the scope of the commission's review of debt settlements, and the relationship between the commission's procedures and the procedures established by Congress in the Federal Bankruptcy Code." Id.

Throughout the extensive discussion of the rules as proposed and adopted, the Commission never expressed its intention to change the way travel on government conveyance in presidential campaigns is reported or paid. Rather, the revisions in Section 104.11(b) were made to conform the reporting requirements for such disputed debts to the extensive revisions in 11 C.F.R. part 116.

Finally, there is often more than one "first class air fare" between two cities. For this reason, the exact amount owed to the government will not be known until the appropriate government official determines the fare and issues an invoice for the trip to the campaign.

For these reasons, Respondents respectfully urge that the Commission find no reason to believe a violation has occurred, and promptly dismiss the Complaint.

Respectfully submitted,

J. Stanley Huckaby

I. GENERATION OF MATTER

This matter was generated by a complaint filed by the Democratic National Committee (DNC) against the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("Committee"). The DNC alleges that George Bush used Air Force One extensively for campaign travel on or around August 20, 1992, and that the Committee failed to report any reimbursement to the U.S. Treasury for the use of the aircraft or any debts or obligations owing to the U.S. Treasury in its 1992 August Monthly Report.[1] The DNC also makes the same allegation regarding Dan Quayle's use of Air Force Two for campaign-related travel during the same time period.

0 3 0 4 3 8 7 0 2 1 4

II. FACTUAL AND LEGAL ANALYSIS

The Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended, ("the Act") requires that during an election year, the principal campaign committee of a candidate for the office of President file reports on a prescribed schedule. 2 U.S.C. § 434(a). Each report must disclose the total amounts of receipts and disbursements for the reporting period and the calendar year and the amount and nature of outstanding debts and obligations owed by the reporting committee. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b).

A debt or obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure, the amount of which is equal to or less than $500, must be reported as of the time payment is made or not later than 60 days after such obligation is incurred, whichever comes first. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11. A debt or obligation which is greater than $500 must be reported as of the date on which the obligation is incurred, except that any obligation incurred for rent, salary or other regularly reoccurring administrative expenses must not be reported as a debt before the payment due date. Id. If the exact amount of a debt or obligation is not known, the report

1. This Office notes that the Commission refers to the report covering the period from August 1st through August 31st as the September Monthly Report. The DNC refers to the report in question as the August Monthly Report; however, the report attached to the complaint, which covers the period from August 1st through August 31st, is the September Monthly Report.

must state that the amount reported is an estimate. When the exact amount is determined, the committee must either amend the report containing the estimate or indicate the correct amount on the report for the reporting period in which the amount is determined. Id.

A qualified campaign expense means any expenditure, including a purchase, payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value incurred to further a candidate's campaign to election to the office of President or Vice President. 11 C.F.R. § 9002.11. All campaign-related travel of publicly funded candidates for the offices of President and Vice-President is a qualified campaign expense and must be reported by the candidates' authorized campaign committees as expenditures. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(a).

For a trip which is entirely campaign-related, the total cost of the trip is a qualified campaign expense and a reportable expenditure. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b). For a trip which includes campaign-related and non-campaign related stops, that portion of the cost of the trip allocable to campaign activity is a qualified campaign expense and a reportable expenditure. Id. If a candidate uses government conveyance paid for by a governmental entity for campaign-related travel, the candidate's authorized committee shall pay the appropriate governmental entity an amount equal to the first class commercial air fare plus the cost of other services, in the case of travel to a city served by regularly schedule commercial services or, in the case of travel to a city not served by a regularly scheduled commercial service, the commercial charter rate plus the cost of other services. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

In its complaint, the DNC states that during the month of August, George Bush and Dan Quayle made several campaign-related trips using Air Force One and Two, respectively. The DNC indicates, however, that the Committee's disclosure report for the month of August neither disclosed disbursements to the U.S. Treasury as reimbursement for the campaign-related travel on Air Force One and Two nor disclosed debts or obligations owed by the Committee to the U.S. Treasury for the travel.

The DNC states that it reviewed the use of Air Force One and Two for the time period in question and, based on news reports, identified several trips made by George Bush or Dan Quayle that were campaign-related. See Attachment 1, Pages 5-11. According to the DNC, in order to determine the approximate costs incurred for the identified trips, it obtained quotes from travel agencies for the lowest first class airfare between any two locations on the itinerary on the dates of travel. If no commercial air carrier offered first class service between the two locations on the date of travel, the DNC used the lowest first class airfare between the two locations closest to the actual stops of the candidates.[2] The DNC alleges that at a minimum, the travel expenses totaled $75,000. The DNC also states that it did not attempt to calculate other

2. The DNC states that it used this method to estimate costs. This Office notes that according to Commission regulations, the commercial charter rate plus the costs of other services should be used to calculate the amount owed to the U.S. Treasury.

9 9 0 4 2 8 3 7 0 2 1 7

campaign-related expenses such as use of helicopters, cargo aircraft, limousines, vans, and other government-owned transportation or for the expenses related to the personnel who were traveling with the president, except for an estimate of costs for seven individuals traveling with the president.

In its response to the complaint, the Committee states that promptly upon receipt of invoices from the respective governmental entities, it paid or will pay the appropriate cost of each of the trips.[3] The Committee indicates that the White House and Office of Vice President often take weeks or even months to issue invoices for campaign-related travel and that this delay is a situation over which the Committee has no control. The Committee states that during the 1992 presidential campaign, it paid all invoices for campaign-related travel promptly upon receipt.

The Committee argues that the Commission has never required a presidential candidate who traveled on government conveyance to formulate and report an estimate of the expense for using the conveyance prior to receiving invoices from the government for that travel. According to respondents, in each of the last four presidential elections, 1976, 1980, 1984, and 1988, one of the candidates used government conveyance for campaign travel and none of the campaigns estimated unbilled costs for travel on Air Force One and Two.

3. Respondents admit that with the exception of Dan Quayle's trip to Cape Canaveral on September 12, 1992, the trips identified by the DNC were campaign-related travel.

2 3 0 4 7 8 7 0 2 1 8

The Committee also argues that 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) is not applicable in the present matter. The Committee states that Section 104.11(b) applies only in a debt settlement context. According to respondents, when the Commission revised 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b), it never expressed its intention to change the way travel on government conveyance is reported by presidential campaigns.

This Office notes that the Commission did not object to the fact that earlier campaigns did not estimate costs for travel on Air Force One and Two because the regulations in effect during those years did not require such estimation. Only after the June 1990, revisions to Section 104.11, have political committees been required to estimate a debt or obligation greater than $500 at the time when the debt is incurred.

In the present matter, the Committee incurred debts or obligations at the time when the trips were made and therefore, was required to estimate the debts relating to the trips in its September Monthly Report. When the Committee later received invoices from the White House or the Office of the Vice President for the trips in question, it should then have either amended the reports in which it had disclosed the estimated amount or reported the exact amount of debt owed to the U.S. Treasury in the report covering the period in which the exact amount was determined.[4] 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

4. This Office notes that for each trip identified by the DNC, travel cost would total more than $500 for either George Bush or Dan Quayle and the staff who accompanied them.

This Office notes that Section 104.11(b) does not apply solely to debt settlements. Respondents' narrow interpretation of this regulation disregards its broad purpose of requiring political committees to disclose debts in a timely manner. Because public disclosure of debt is critical, Section 104.11(b) requires that for debts greater than $500, political committees estimate the debt owed in its reports until the exact amount is determined and can subsequently be disclosed. However, in the case of debt for rent, salary, or other reoccurring administrative expenses, the debt should not be reported prior to the payment due date. Because debt or obligations related to campaign travel do not fall within the above-noted exception, the Committee was required to estimate all debt or obligations over $500 which related to the August campaign travel in its September Monthly Report. The Committee failed to estimate such debts and obligations in its September Monthly Report.

Based on the foregoing, this Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b).

III. PROPOSED DISCOVERY

This Office needs to determine the amount of debt which the Committee incurred during the month of August for George Bush and Dan Quayle's campaign-related travel by government conveyance. Such campaign-related travel includes travel via Air Force One and Two, and government-owned helicopters, limousines, or vans and other costs for travel. This Office also needs to know whether the Committee reimbursed the U.S. Treasury for the debt related to travel costs and whether it has reported such reimbursements in its disclosure reports.[5] In order to determine the extent of the violation, this Office will need the above-noted information. Therefore, this Office has prepared the attached Order and Subpoena.

IV. RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Find reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b).

2. Approve the attached Factual and Legal Analysis and the appropriate letter.

3. Approve the attached Order and Subpoena.

7/9/93
Date

Lawrence M. Noble
General Counsel

9 8 0 4 3 8 7 0 2 2 1

5. Staff from this Office reviewed the September Monthly, October Monthly, Pre-General, Post-General, and Year-End Reports to determine whether the Committee disclosed payments made to the U.S. Treasury for campaign-related travel during August. This Office discovered that payments for campaign-related travel were made to the U.S. Treasury in October, November, and December; however, this Office was not able to determine that these payments were for travel by George Bush and Dan Quayle during August.

It appears that the disbursement date on Committee reports is a date subsequent to the date on which the Committee received invoices from the White House and Office of the Vice-President. As noted earlier, the Committee states that there is often up to a seven-month time delay between the actual travel and the receipt of invoices.

July 28, 1993

TO: The Commission

FROM: Lawrence M. Noble
General Counsel

SUBJECT: MUR 3664- Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer

On July 26, 1993, staff from this Office discovered that the Democratic National Committee ("DNC") had filed a supplement to the complaint on November 2, 1992.[1] Upon receipt, the supplement was provided to respondents and made a part of the permanent docket file. However, due to administrative error, a copy of the supplement was not made a part of the staff working file or circulated to the Commission.

The time period in question in the complaint is August, 1992. However, in the supplement, the DNC expands the time period in question through Election Day. Therefore, in light of this change, this Office recommends that the Commission revise the Order and Subpoena approved on July 20, 1993 solely to reflect the expansion of the time period in question. In all other respects, the documents approved by the Commission on July 20, 1993 would remain the same.

We recommend that each occurrence of "August, 1992" in the Order and Subpoena be replaced with the language "from August 1, 1992 through November 3, 1992." This Office also recommends that the same changes be made to the Factual and Legal Analysis.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Approve replacing the language "August, 1992" in the Order and Subpoena approved on July 20, 1993 with the language "from August 1, 1992 through November 3, 1992."

2. Approve making changes to the Factual and Legal Analysis to reflect the expanded time period.

RE: MUR 3664
Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer

Dear Mr. Huckaby:

On October 27, 1992, the Federal Election Commission notified the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("Committee") of the receipt of a complaint alleging violations of certain sections of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended ("the Act"). A copy of the complaint was enclosed with that notification. On November 5, 1992, the Federal Election Commission notified the Committee of the receipt of additional information from the complainant pertaining to the allegations in the complaint and a copy of the supplementary information was enclosed with such notification.

Upon further review of the allegations contained in the complaint, the supplement, and information supplied by the Committee, the Commission, on July 20, 1993, found that there is reason to believe the Committee and you, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b). The Factual and Legal Analysis, which formed a basis for the Commission's finding, is attached for your information.

Under the Act, you have an opportunity to demonstrate that no action should be taken against the Committee and you, as treasurer. You may submit any factual or legal materials that you believe are relevant to the Commission's consideration of this matter. Statements should be submitted under oath. All responses to the enclosed Order to Answer Questions and Subpoena to Produce Documents must be submitted to the General Counsel's Office within 30 days of your receipt of this letter. Any additional materials or statements you wish to submit should accompany the response to the Order and Subpoena.

You may consult with an attorney and have an attorney assist you in the preparation of your responses to this Order and Subpoena. If you intend to be represented by counsel, please advise the Commission by completing the enclosed form stating the name, address, and telephone number of such counsel, and authorizing such counsel to receive any notification or other communications from the Commission.

In the absence of any additional information which demonstrates that no further action should be taken against the Committee and you, as treasurer, the Commission may find probable cause to believe that a violation has occurred and proceed with conciliation.

If you are interested in pursuing pre-probable cause conciliation, you should so request in writing. See 11 C.F.R. § 111.18(d). Upon receipt of the request, the Office of the General Counsel will make recommendations to the Commission either proposing an agreement in settlement of the matter or recommending declining that pre-probable cause conciliation be pursued. The Office of the General Counsel may recommend that pre-probable cause conciliation not be entered into at this time so that it may complete its investigation of the matter. Further, the Commission will not entertain requests for pre-probable cause conciliation after briefs on probable cause have been mailed to the respondent.

Requests for extensions of time will not be routinely granted. Requests must be made in writing at least five days prior to the due date of the response and specific good cause must be demonstrated. In addition, the Office of the General Counsel ordinarily will not give extensions beyond 20 days.

This matter will remain confidential in accordance with 2 U.S.C. §§ 437g(a)(4)(B) and 437g(a)(12)(A), unless you notify the Commission in writing that you wish the investigation to be made public.

If you have any questions, please contact Mary Taksar, the attorney assigned to this matter, at (202) 219-3400.

INSTRUCTIONS

In answering these interrogatories and request for production of documents, furnish all documents and other information, however obtained, including hearsay, that is in possession of, known by or otherwise available to you, including documents and information appearing in your records.

Each answer is to be given separately and independently, and unless specifically stated in the particular discovery request, no answer shall be given solely by reference either to another answer or to an exhibit attached to your response.

The response to each interrogatory propounded herein shall set forth separately the identification of each person capable of furnishing testimony concerning the response given, denoting separately those individuals who provided informational, documentary or other input, and those who assisted in drafting the interrogatory response.

If you cannot answer the following interrogatories in full after exercising due diligence to secure the full information to do so, answer to the extent possible and indicate your inability to answer the remainder, stating whatever information or knowledge you have concerning the unanswered portion and detailing what you did in attempting to secure the unknown information.

Should you claim a privilege with respect to any documents, communications, or other items about which information is requested by any of the following interrogatories and requests for production of documents, describe such items in sufficient detail to provide justification for the claim. Each claim of privilege must specify in detail all the grounds on which it rests.

Unless otherwise indicated, the discovery request shall refer to the time period from August 1, 1992 to the present.

The following interrogatories and requests for production of documents are continuing in nature so as to require you to file supplementary responses or amendments during the course of this investigation if you obtain further or different information prior to or during the pendency of this matter. Include in any supplemental answers the date upon which and the manner in which such further or different information came to your attention.

3 3 0 4 3 8 7 0 2 2

DEFINITIONS

For the purpose of these discovery requests, including the instructions thereto, the terms listed below are defined as follows:

"You" shall mean the named respondent in this action to whom these discovery requests are addressed, including all officers, employees, agents or attorneys thereof.

"Persons" shall be deemed to include both singular and plural, and shall mean any natural person, partnership, committee, association, corporation, or any other type of organization or entity.

"Document" shall mean the original and all non-identical copies, including drafts, of all papers and records of every type in your possession, custody, or control, or known by you to exist. The term document includes, but is not limited to books, letters, contracts, notes, diaries, log sheets, records of telephone communications, transcripts, vouchers, accounting statements, ledgers, checks, money orders or other commercial paper, telegrams, telexes, pamphlets, circulars, leaflets, reports, memoranda, correspondence, surveys, tabulations, audio and video recordings, drawings, photographs, graphs, charts, diagrams, lists, computer print-outs, and all other writings and other data compilations from which information can be obtained.

"Identify" with respect to a document shall mean state the nature or type of document (e.g., letter, memorandum), the date, if any, appearing thereon, the date on which the document was prepared, the title of the document, the general subject matter of the document, the location of the document, the number of pages comprising the document.

"Identify" with respect to a person shall mean state the full name, the most recent business and residence addresses and the telephone numbers, the present occupation or position of such person, the nature of the connection or association that person has to any party in this proceeding. If the person to be identified is not a natural person, provide the legal and trade names, the address and telephone number, and the full names of both the chief executive officer and the agent designated to receive service of process for such person.

"And" as well as "or" shall be construed disjunctively or conjunctively as necessary to bring within the scope of these interrogatories and request for the production of documents any documents and materials which may otherwise be construed to be out of their scope.

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION
FACTUAL AND LEGAL ANALYSIS

RESPONDENTS: Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer

MUR: 3664

This matter was generated by a complaint filed by the Democratic National Committee (DNC) against the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("Committee"). In the complaint, the DNC alleged that George Bush used Air Force One extensively for campaign travel on or around August 20, 1992, and that the Committee failed to report any reimbursement to the U.S. Treasury for the use of the aircraft or any debts or obligations owing to the U.S. Treasury in its disclosure report which covered the month of August. The DNC made the same allegations regarding Dan Quayle's use of Air Force Two during the same time period. On November 2, 1992, the DNC filed a supplement to the complaint. In the supplement, the DNC expanded the time period in question from August, 1992 to August 1, 1992 through November 3, 1992.

The Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended, ("the Act") requires that during an election year, the principal campaign committee of a candidate for the office of President file reports on a prescribed schedule. 2 U.S.C. § 434(a). Each report must disclose the total amounts of receipts and disbursements for the reporting period and the calendar year and the amount and nature of outstanding debts and obligations owed by the reporting committee. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b).

A debt or obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure, the amount of which is equal to or less than $500, must be reported as of the time payment is made or not later than 60 days after such obligation is incurred, whichever comes first. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11. A debt or obligation which is greater than $500 must be reported as of the date on which the obligation is incurred, except that any obligation incurred for rent, salary or other regularly reoccurring administrative expenses must not be reported as a debt before the payment due date. Id. If the exact amount of a debt or obligation is not known, the report must state that the amount reported is an estimate. When the exact amount is determined, the committee must either amend the report containing the estimate or indicate the correct amount on the report for the reporting period in which the amount is determined. Id.

A qualified campaign expense means any expenditure, including a purchase, payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value incurred to further a candidate's campaign to election to the office of President or Vice President. 11 C.F.R. § 9002.11. All campaign-related travel of publicly funded candidates for the offices of President and Vice-President is a qualified campaign expense and must be reported by the candidates' authorized campaign committees as expenditures. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(a).

For a trip which is entirely campaign-related, the total cost of the trip is a qualified campaign expense and a reportable expenditure. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b). For a trip which includes campaign-related and non-campaign related stops, that portion of the cost of the trip allocable to campaign activity is a qualified campaign expense and a reportable expenditure. Id. If a candidate uses government conveyance paid for by a governmental entity for campaign-related travel, the candidate's authorized committee shall pay the appropriate governmental entity an amount equal to the first class commercial air fare plus the cost of other services, in the case of travel to a city served by regularly schedule commercial services or, in the case of travel to a city not served by a regularly scheduled commercial service, the commercial charter rate plus the cost of other services. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

The Committee incurred debts or obligations to the U.S. Treasury for campaign-related trips and related costs for trips made from August 1, 1992 through November 3, 1992, at the time when George Bush and Dan Quayle made the trips in question. In the case of debts or obligations which were greater than $500, the Committee was required to estimate debts and obligations relating to the campaign travel in the disclosure report covering the date when each trip was made. When the Committee later received invoices from the White House or the Office of the Vice President for the trips in question, it should then have either amended the reports in which it had disclosed the estimated amount or reported the exact amount of debt owed to the U.S. Treasury in the report covering the period in which the exact amount was determined, the time at which it received the invoices. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). The Committee failed to estimate these debts and obligations in disclosure reports covering the period from August 1, 1992 through November 3, 1992.

Therefore, there is reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b).

Dear Ms. Tasker:

The Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., received the letter dated August 4, 1993 from Commission Chairman Scott Thomas regarding MUR 3664 on August 25, 1993.

The Interrogatories and Request for Production of Documents requires the Committee to conduct a thorough review of the pertinent files in order to provide the Commission with the necessary documentation. As we have discussed over the telephone, the Commission's auditors have been reviewing many of these same files in the normal course of their audit work.

Accordingly, we respectfully request an extension of thirty days to respond to Chairman Thomas' letter, which would set a new response deadline of October 25, 1993.

Thank you for your consideration of this request.

RE: MUR 3664
Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee,
Inc. and Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer

Dear Mr. Huckaby:

This letter is a follow-up to your telephone conversation with Mary Taksar, the staff attorney assigned to this matter, on September 10, 1993. During the telephone conversation, you indicated that because the Committee's records are currently being utilized by the Commission's auditors, it would be difficult for the Committee to respond to the Order and Subpoena at this time.

In response to your concern, we will review the copies of Committee records and documents which the Audit Division brings back to the Commission to determine if any are relevant to the Subpoena and Order. The Subpoena and Order will remain in full force and effect during the review period. After obtaining and reviewing the copies of Committee records and documents in the possession of the Audit Division, the Office of General Counsel will contact you regarding any information or document necessary to satisfy the Subpoena and Order which was not available in the copies of Committee records and documents already in our possession. The Committee will then be required to submit the information or document to the Commission.

On September 20, 1993, we received your request for an extension until October 25, 1993 to respond to the Commission's reason to believe findings. After considering the circumstances presented in your letter, the Office of General Counsel has granted the requested extension. Accordingly, your response is due by close of business on October 25, 1993.

If you have any questions, please contact Mary Taksar or myself at (202) 219-3400. Thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

Dear Lawrence:

Confirming our telephone conversation of yesterday, the Federal Election Commission auditors have materials available to them as a result of their post-election audit that will be responsive in whole or in part to the subpoena issued in MUR 3664. Accordingly, you advised me that Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. can await further word from your office before responding to the interrogatories and subpoena for documents. As indicated, Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. will submit a legal memorandum setting forth its position in this matter on October 25, as indicated in the letter from Abigail Shane, Esq. to J. Stanley Huckaby dated September 22, 1993. In the event a supplemental legal memorandum is necessary after responses to the interrogatories or production of documents, we can discuss the matter at that time.

Please let me know if you would like to discuss any of the matters set forth above. Thank you very much for your attention to this matter.

Re: MUR 3664 -- Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby

Dear Mr. Noble:

This letter constitutes the Response of Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and its Treasurer J. Stanley Huckaby (collectively "Respondents") to the August 4, 1993 letter from Scott E. Thomas, Chairman of the Federal Election Commission, to the undersigned concerning the above-captioned matter under review ("MUR"). By letter dated September 22, 1993, Respondents were granted an extension of time through and including October 25, 1993, to file this response.[1]

Chairman Thomas' letter and the enclosed Factual and Legal Analysis allege that there is "reason to believe" that Respondents violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b). The basis for the allegation is a complaint filed by the Democratic National Committee ("DNC") on October 20, 1992, and a supplement to that complaint filed on November 2, 1992. That complaint alleged that Respondents violated certain provisions of the Federal Election Campaign Act and this Commission's regulations by failing to pay for campaign-related travel by President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle on Air Force I and Air Force II, respectively. Alternatively, the Complaint alleged that Respondents violated a Commission regulation by failing to report on its periodic reports to the Commission the amount of its liability for such travel expenses, or at least an estimate of the unbilled amounts.

[1] The September 22, 1993 letter also deferred compliance with the subpoena and interrogatories pending consultation between the Office of General Counsel and the Audit Division.

Notably, the Factual and Legal Analysis implicitly rejects the allegation that Respondents failed to pay for campaign-related travel by President Bush and Vice President Quayle. Indeed, the Commission's post-election audit of Respondents' records has by now confirmed Respondents' position set forth in the letter dated December 18, 1992 from J. Stanley Huckaby to Anne Weissenborn, Esq., that Respondents either paid promptly or reported all invoices for campaign-related travel by President Bush and Vice President Quayle. All such invoices have now been paid. (A copy of the December 18, 1992 letter is attached hereto as Exhibit A.)

The only remaining dispute is whether Respondents were required by 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) to report estimates of those expenditures on their periodic reports before receiving invoices from the Government. As shown below, since the Federal Election Campaign Act was passed, no presidential campaign has ever reported such estimated expenditures for use of government conveyance, the Commission has never before challenged that consistent practice, and the Commission's expressly stated intention when it amended 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) in 1990 was to "follow[] current policy." See 55 Fed. Reg. 26385 (June 27, 1990). Moreover, the history behind the amendment of the regulation shows that the amendment was intended to conform the regulation to Part 116 of the regulations, which addresses settlement of campaign debts for less than full value, and had nothing to do with travel on government conveyances. Finally, such a reading of the regulation would impose serious administrative difficulties on incumbent presidential campaigns, with little if any public benefit.

I. THE COMMISSION'S AMENDMENT OF 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) WAS NOT INTENDED TO CHANGE EXISTING PRACTICE, UNDER WHICH THE COMMISSION HAD NEVER REQUIRED PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES TO REPORT AN ESTIMATED LIABILITY TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT FOR USE OF GOVERNMENT CONVEYANCE.

In each of the last four presidential elections -- 1976, 1980, 1984, and 1988 -- at least one of the candidates used government conveyance for campaign travel. In 1988, the undersigned served as Treasurer for then-Vice President Bush, who travelled on Air Force II. Neither the 1988 campaign nor to our knowledge any other campaign since passage of the Federal Election Campaign Act has reported estimates of unbilled costs incurred for Air Force I and Air Force II travel. The Commission has never objected, and, until issuance of the "reason to believe" letter in this matter, has never suggested that this well-established practice was inconsistent with the regulations.

When it amended 11 C.F.R. § 104(b), the Commission stated no intention to change the way incumbent presidential candidates report their travel on government conveyances. Indeed, the explanation of the changes to the regulation indicated an intent to "follow[] the current policy. . . ." 55 Fed. Reg. 26385 (June 27, 1990).

Nothing in the text of the amended regulation would have alerted a campaign that the Commission intended to change its practice concerning the timing for reporting travel expenses. Indeed, several aspects of the amended regulations strongly imply that no such change was intended.

First, the prior regulation required a campaign to report debts over $500 "as of the time of the transaction." The language in the amended regulation refers to essentially the same time, the "date on which the debt or obligation was incurred." If a campaign was not required to report travel by government conveyance until receiving an invoice from the government under the old language, no more restrictive practice is suggested by the new.

Second, unlike the old regulation, the amended new regulation defines debt or obligation subject to the reporting requirements as "a loan, written contract, written promise or written agreement to make an expenditure." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (emphasis added). Under settled rules of construing statutes and regulations, the examples provided serve to limit the scope of the regulation to similar situations. See, e.g., Hawkeye Chemical Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 510 F.2d 322, 327 (7th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 965 (1975). Travel on government conveyance without a "written" agreement does not fall into any of the stated categories, and is dissimilar because the precise amount owed is subject to less precise determination than "a loan, written contract, written promise or written agreement."

Finally, the repeated reference to "written" agreements demonstrates the Commission's recognition that substantial administrative difficulties would arise if the reporting requirement were applied to debts, such as campaign travel on Air Force I and II, that arise without contemporaneous documentation available to the campaign. (See Part III below.)

II. THE COMMISSION AMENDED 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) TO CONFORM IT TO NEW REGULATIONS ADDRESSING DEBT SETTLEMENTS AT LESS THAN FAIR VALUE, NOT TO CHANGE THE PROCEDURES FOR TRAVEL ON GOVERNMENT CONVEYANCE.

When the Commission proposed the regulations that resulted in the current version of Section 104.11(b), its intent was to address debt settlements at less than stated value by insolvent or defunct campaign committees. The Commission explained that "[t]he proposed new regulations . . . would establish a new system whereby indebted political committees would be required to submit comprehensive debt settlement plans for commission review prior to termination." 53 Fed. Reg. 49193 (Dec. 6, 1988). The express purpose of the regulations was to "address, in a systematic way several interrelated concerns regarding the creation and disposition of election-related debts and obligations under the FECA." Id. at 49194.

When it announced the final rule, the Commission declared the purpose as "to ensure that the creation and settlement of such debts [owed by candidates and political committees] do not result in excessive or prohibited contributions to the debtor committees, and to promote the timely public disclosure of such transactions." 55 Fed. Reg. 26378 (June 27, 1990). The Commission re-examined

> "several fundamental issues regarding debts owed by political committees, such as which types of committees should be permitted to seek debt settlement, whether debt settlements should be reviewed as agreements are reached or only after all creditors have ratified settlements, the scope of the commission's review of debt settlements, and the relationship between the commission's procedures and the procedures established by Congress in the Federal Bankruptcy Code." Id.

The revision to 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) was put forth as a "conforming amendment[]" to "make [it] consistent with the language of new part 116." Id. at 26385. Travel by government conveyance, of course, has nothing to do with the debt settlement issues addressed by the amendment to Part 116. Thus, throughout the extensive discussion of the rules as proposed and adopted, the Commission never expressed its intention to change the way travel on government conveyance in presidential campaigns is reported or paid. Accordingly, when read in view of its purpose of conforming the reporting requirements for such disputed debts to the extensive revisions in Part 116, Section 104.11(b) is inapplicable here.

III. APPLICATION OF SECTION 104.11(b) TO TRAVEL ON GOVERNMENT CONVEYANCE WOULD PRODUCE ADMINISTRATIVE DIFFICULTIES AND UNFAIRNESS.

Finally, unlike "loan[s], written contract[s], written promises[s], or written agreement[s] to make expenditures," which state the amount owed with specificity, there is often more than one "first class air fare" between two cities; in some situations, there is no first class airfare between cities. Moreover, while an incumbent President's campaign has some control over which campaign personnel can travel on Air Force I and II, it does not always control which government personnel accompany the President, or whether those government personnel take part in campaign activity. For these reasons, the exact amount owed to the government will not be known until the appropriate government official determines which individuals are campaign travelers, ascertains the appropriate fare, and issues an invoice to the campaign for the trip. If the campaign estimates the fare incorrectly for its interim report of expenditures, it may be subject to second guessing concerning whether its original estimate was reasonable, and possibly findings of violations with imposition of fines.[2/]

For these reasons, Respondents respectfully urge that the Commission withdraw its "reason to believe" finding, cease its investigation, and promptly dismiss the Complaint.

Re: MUR 3664--Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, Treasurer, Respondents

Dear Ms. Weissenborn:

This letter constitutes the Response of Bush - Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and its Treasurer, J. Stanley Huckaby (collectively "Respondents") to the above-captioned Complaint and supplement filed with the Federal Election Commission by the Democratic National Committee ("DNC"). Respondents were granted an extension of time through and including December 18, 1992, to file this response.

In short, the DNC alleges that Respondents violated certain provisions of the Federal Election Campaign Act and this Commission's regulations by failing to pay for campaign-related travel by President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle on Air Force I and Air Force II, respectively. Alternatively, the DNC alleges that Respondents violated a Commission regulation by failing to report on its periodic reports to the Commission the amount of its liability for such travel expenses, or at least an estimate of the unbilled amounts.

The answer to the first allegation is that, promptly upon receipt of invoices from the responsible government entities, Respondents have paid or will pay the appropriate cost of each of the trips, with one exception discussed later in this Response, challenged by the DNC. The answer to the second allegation is that the Commission has never required a presidential candidate who travelled on government conveyance to formulate and report an estimate of the expense for using that conveyance prior to receiving invoices from the government for that travel.

I. RESPONDENTS HAVE PAID OR WILL PAY ALL CAMPAIGN-RELATED TRAVEL EXPENSES UPON SUBMISSION OF PROPER INVOICES.

Pursuant to 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7, Respondents have paid or will pay all campaign-related travel expenses incurred by President Bush and Vice President Quayle for travel on Air Force I and II. Critically, all the trips cited by the DNC, with the aforementioned exception, have been or will be paid for by Respondents according to the strict letter of the Commission's regulations promptly upon receipt of appropriate invoices from the federal government. The Commission's audit staff can confirm these payments in the course of its audit.

The one exception is the Vice-President's trip to Cape Canaveral, FL, on September 12, 1992. This was an official trip for the launch of the space shuttle. The Vice-President's comments cited in the complaint were in direct response to a reporter's question, as the Complainant's own supporting exhibit indicates. The comments therefore qualify as mere "incidental (political) contacts" as permitted at 11 C.F.R. 9004.7 (b)(2).

Of course, payment is not due to the government or contemplated by the regulations until an invoice stating the amount owed is presented to Respondents. A candidate who uses government conveyance has never been required, and is not now required, to pay the government in advance. See 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5) ("the candidate's authorized committee shall pay the appropriate government entity . . . .") For reasons over which Respondents have no control, the White House and Office of the Vice President often take weeks or even months to issue invoices for campaign-related travel. Throughout the 1992 presidential campaign, Respondents have paid all such invoices promptly upon receipt.

In contrast, a candidate who uses an airplane owned by a corporation or a labor organization must pay in advance for using that airplane. See 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e) ("A candidate . . . who uses an airplane which is owned . . . by a corporation or labor organization . . .must, in advance, reimburse the corporation or labor organization . . . .") (emphasis added). If the Commission is inclined to change its regulations to require payment in advance for travel on government conveyance, such a change can be made only in the context of a rulemaking proceeding, not in response to a complaint.

Respondents obtained no financial or political advantage from the government's delay in issuing invoices. For each campaign-related trip on Air Force I or Air Force II, Respondents recognized that they would ultimately be responsible for paying all pertinent expenses, and reserved sufficient funds to pay them. During the delay, Respondents earned no interest on the funds held, and could not in any event exceed the spending limitation set forth in the federal election laws.

Accordingly, the DNC has come forward with no basis for believing that Respondents have violated the Commission's regulations governing campaign-related travel.

II. THE COMMISSION HAS NEVER REQUIRED PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES TO REPORT AN ESTIMATED LIABILITY TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT FOR USE OF GOVERNMENT CONVEYANCE.

The DNC next alleges that Respondents violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report estimates of amounts owing to the federal government for campaign travel on Air Force I and Air Force II. For three reasons, this argument also fails.

First, in each of the last four presidential elections -- 1976, 1980, 1984, and 1988 -- at least one of the candidates used government conveyance for campaign travel. In 1988, the undersigned served as Treasurer for then-Vice President Bush, who travelled on Air Force II. Neither the 1988 campaign nor to our knowledge any other campaign since passage of the Federal Election Campaign Act has reported estimates of unbilled costs incurred for Air Force I and Air Force II travel. The Commission has never objected.

Second, the regulation relied upon by the DNC is inapplicable to this situation. It states that > "[a] debt of obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise or written agreement to make an expenditure, the amount of which is over $500 shall be reported as of the date on which the debt or obligation is incurred . . .. If the exact amount of a debt or obligation is not known, the report shall state that the amount reported is an estimate." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

When the Commission proposed the regulations that resulted in the current version of Section 104.11(b), its intent was to address debt settlements at less than stated value by insolvent or defunct campaign committees. The Commission explained that "[t]he proposed new regulations . . . would establish a new system whereby indebted political committees would be required to submit comprehensive debt settlement plans for commission review prior to termination." 53 Fed. Reg. 49193 (Dec. 6, 1988). The express purpose of the regulations was to "address, in a systematic way several interrelated concerns regarding the creation and disposition of election-related debts and obligations under the FECA." Id. at 49194.

When it announced the final rule, the Commission declared the purpose as "to ensure that the creation and settlement of such debts [owed by candidates and political committees] do not result in excessive or prohibited contributions to the debtor committees, and to promote the timely public disclosure of such transactions." 55 Fed. Reg. 26378 (June 27, 1990). The Commission re-examined

> "several fundamental issues regarding debts owed by political committees, such as which types of committees should be permitted to seek debt settlement, whether debt settlements should be reviewed as agreements are reached or only after all creditors have ratified settlements, the scope of the commission's review of debt settlements, and the relationship between the commission's procedures and the procedures established by Congress in the Federal Bankruptcy Code." Id.

Throughout the extensive discussion of the rules as proposed and adopted, the Commission never expressed its intention to change the way travel on government conveyance in presidential campaigns is reported or paid. Rather, the revisions in Section 104.11(b) were made to conform the reporting requirements for such disputed debts to the extensive revisions in 11 C.F.R. part 116.

Finally, there is often more than one "first class air fare" between two cities. For this reason, the exact amount owed to the government will not be known until the appropriate government official determines the fare and issues an invoice for the trip to the campaign.

For these reasons, Respondents respectfully urge that the Commission find no reason to believe a violation has occurred, and promptly dismiss the Complaint.

Respectfully submitted,

J. Stanley Huckaby

RE: MUR 3664
Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer

This memorandum is to request the Audit Division's assistance in this Office's investigation of MUR 3664. It has come to our attention that much of the information relevant to this matter may be in the Audit Division's possession. As discussed below, we request no calculations by Audit Division staff at this time. However, we do ask that the Audit Division share with this Office certain information it may have obtained or calculated in connection with its audit of the respondent pursuant to 26 U.S.C. § 9007(a).

I. BACKGROUND

MUR 3664 was generated by a complaint filed October 20, 1992 by the Democratic National Committee (DNC) against the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer ("Committee"). The complaint, along with a supplement filed by the DNC on November 2, 1992, alleged that between August, 1992 and the 1992 general election the Committee failed to disclose on its reports to the Commission any reimbursement made to, or debts and obligations owed to, the U. S. Treasury for campaign-related use of Air Force One and Air Force Two.

Section 434(b) of Title 2, United States Code, requires that political committees disclose on their reports the amount and nature of expenditures they make and outstanding debts and obligations they owe. A political committee owing a debt or obligation which is greater than $500 must report the debt or obligation as of the date on which the obligation is incurred, except that any obligation incurred for rent, salary or other regularly recurring administrative expenses must not be reported as a debt before the payment due date. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11. If the exact amount of the debt or obligation is not known, the report must state that the amount reported is an estimate. When the exact amount is determined, the committee must either amend the report containing the estimate or indicate the correct amount on the report for the reporting period in which the correct amount is determined. Id. Moreover, all campaign-related travel of publicly funded candidates for the offices of President and Vice President is a qualified campaign expense and must be reported by the candidates' authorized campaign committees as expenditures. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(a).

These provisions required the Committee to report estimated debts and obligations in excess of $500 which it had incurred to the U. S. Treasury for campaign-related travel but for which the Committee had not yet been billed. However, it appeared that the Committee did not do so. Consequently, on July 20, 1993, the Commission found reason to believe that the Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b).[1] It also approved an Order and Subpoena requiring the Committee to produce documents relating to the campaign-related travel of former President Bush and former Vice President Quayle.[2]

The Committee's treasurer indicated to staff of this Office that compliance with the subpoena would be difficult because many of the requested documents were in the possession of the Audit Division. This Office responded that it would review the information in the Audit Division's possession and then determine what further information it required from the Committee.

1. This Office is currently preparing a report to the Commission recommending that the Commission revote its reason to believe findings in this matter in light of FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, No. 91-5360 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 22, 1993).

2. In light of the supplement to the complaint, the Commission, on August 2, 1993, approved changes to the Order and Subpoena reflecting expansion of the time period at issue through November 3, 1992.

II. REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE

It is this Office's understanding that in the course of auditing the Committee pursuant to 26 U.S.C. § 9007(a), the Audit Division developed a computer spreadsheet that summarizes much of the information relevant to MUR 3664. We understand that the spreadsheet contains an itemization of campaign-related trips by President Bush and Vice President Quayle aboard Air Force One and Air Force Two during the period in question, and, for each air leg of such trips, indicates:

*the total number of passengers on board the aircraft, including breakouts by categories of official passengers, campaign passengers, press passengers, and other passengers;

*the amount and date of the corresponding invoice from the Air Force to the White House;

*the amount and date of the corresponding invoice from the White House to the Committee for the Committee's allocable share of the cost;

*the amounts paid and dates of payment by the Committee to the U. S. Treasury, through the White House Military Office, for the Committee's allocable share of the cost; and *the airfare per person per leg used to compute these amounts, as provided by the Committee.

This Office would appreciate it if the Audit Division could provide a hard copy of the spreadsheet. Additionally, this Office would appreciate knowing if the Audit Division has drawn any conclusions as to whether the airfare per person per leg as provided by the Committee was consistent with applicable first-class airfare or charter rates in accordance with 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

Finally, if there are similar spreadsheets regarding the Committee's campaign-related use of other government-owned air transportation (especially including the helicopters Marine One and Marine Two) and of government-owned ground transportation, we would appreciate receiving copies of those, as well. If there are not such similar spreadsheets but the Audit Division is in possession of Committee records containing this information, we would appreciate it if staff from this Office could have access to those records under a mutually agreeable arrangement.

Thank you in advance for your attention to this matter. Please contact Lawrence L. Calvert Jr. at 219-3690 if you or your staff have any questions regarding this memorandum.

Subject: MUR 3664
Recommended Actions in Light of FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, No. 91-5360, (D.C. Cir. Oct. 22, 1993)

I. BACKGROUND

On November 5, 1993, the Office of the General Counsel forwarded to the Commission a memorandum regarding the recent appellate decision in FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, et al. No. 91-5360 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 22, 1993) and advised the Commission on the effects and implications of that decision on the pending enforcement caseload. This Office has reviewed the Commission's pending enforcement docket and in this memorandum makes recommendations with respect to MUR in which the Commission found reason to believe prior to the court's decision in NRA. The recommendations put forth as to each of the matters are consistent with the Commission's November 9, 1993, decisions concerning compliance with the NRA opinion.

II. RECOMMENDED ACTIONS IN LIGHT OF FEC v. NRA

MUR 3664

This Office recommends that the Commission, consistent with its November 9, 1993, decisions concerning compliance with the NRA opinion, and based on the information contained in the complaint filed in this matter and the responses thereto, revote to find reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b). This Office also recommends that the Commission revote to approve the Factual and Legal Analysis for these respondents with the changes approved by the Commission on August 2, 1993. Copies of the certifications reflecting the Commission's previous votes are attached.

III. RECOMMENDATIONS

RE: MUR 3664
Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer

Dear Mr. Burchfield:

On July 20, 1993, the Federal Election Commission found that there is reason to believe your clients, Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer ("Committee") violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b).

As you may be aware, on October 22, 1993, the D.C. Circuit declared the Commission unconstitutional on separation of powers grounds due to the presence of the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate or their designees as members of the Commission. FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, 6 F.3d 821 (D.C. Cir. 1993). Since the decision was handed down, the Commission has taken several actions to comply with the court's decision. While the Commission petitions the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari, the Commission, consistent with that opinion, has remedied any possible constitutional defect identified by the Court of Appeals by reconstituting itself as a six member body without the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate or their designees. In addition, the Commission has adopted specific procedures for revoting or ratifying decisions pertaining to open enforcement matters.

In this matter, on January 25, 1994, the Commission revoted to find reason to believe that Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b), and to approve the Factual and Legal Analysis previously mailed to your clients. Please refer to that document for the basis of the Commission's decision. If you need an additional copy, one will be provided upon request.

If you have any questions, please contact Lawrence L. Calvert Jr., the attorney assigned to this matter, at (202) 219-3690.

Re: MUR 3664 -- Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby

Dear Mr. Potter:

This letter is submitted on behalf of Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and its Treasurer J. Stanley Huckaby (collectively "Respondents") in response to the letter dated January 28, 1994, from Trevor Potter, Chairman of the Federal Election Commission, to Bobby R. Burchfield concerning above-captioned matter under review ("MUR").

We understand that, pursuant to the decision of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, 6 F.3d 821 (D.C. Cir. 1993), the Commission has withdrawn its previous finding in this matter that there is reason to believe Respondents violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 9004.7 and 104.11(b). In an attempt to cure the constitutional taint created by the presence of the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate (or their designees) as non-voting members, however, the Commission readopted its "reason-to-believe" finding, incorporating by reference the same Factual and Legal Analysis.

Respondents submitted a response to the earlier reason-to-believe finding on October 25, 1993. Since the Commission's reason-to-believe finding was originally entered prior to receipt of that response, Respondents continue to stand by the arguments presented therein. For the convenience of the Commission, a copy of that October 25, 1993, response is attached.

In addition, while the Commission should dismiss the MUR because no violation has occurred, the Commission should also dismiss this enforcement action as impermissibly tainted by the influence of the ex officio House and Senate members during the deliberation process. The offending aspect of the House and Senate members' participation did not involve voting. Rather, it was solely through their presence -- whether or not they spoke -- at the Commission's deliberations. This presence created the "potential to influence the other commissioners" and rendered the Commission's action unconstitutional. 6 F.3d at 826-27.

Having participated in the earlier deliberation process with the ex officio members, the current Commissioners cannot simply erase that "potential to influence" through the expedient of a second vote. Whether or not the Commissioners engaged in additional deliberation, they remain aware of the prior discussions and this knowledge tainted both the first and the second vote. Moreover, the Commission's actions in this instance -- reaching the same result without even bothering to issue a new or different Legal and Factual Analysis -- underscores the fact that the Commission has simply readopted a tainted decision.

In analogous contexts relied upon by the D.C. Circuit, the introduction of an improper influence during the deliberation process invalidates the resulting decision:

> For example, Fed. R. Crim. P. Rule 24(c) states: 'An alternate juror shall be discharged after the jury retires to consider its verdict.' An alternate juror, of course, does not have a right to vote. The rationale animating this rule is that '[w]hen alternate jurors are present during the deliberations, the possible prejudice is that defendants are being tried not by a jury of 12, as is their right, but by a larger group.'

821 F.2d at 827 (citations omitted).

Similarly, in Remmer v. United States, 347 U.S. 227, 229 (1954), the Supreme Court vacated and remanded a conviction in which a juror had been exposed to an extraneous communication during the trial. The Court emphasized that "[t]he integrity of jury proceedings must not be jeopardized by unauthorized invasions." As a result, "any private communication, contact, or tampering, directly or indirectly, with a juror during a trial about the matter pending before the jury is, for obvious reasons, deemed presumptively prejudicial." Id. After the remand, the Court reversed a district court finding that the unauthorized communication to the juror had constituted harmless error. According to the Court:

> [The juror] had been subjected to extraneous influences to which no juror should be subjected, for it is the law's objective to guard jealously the sanctity of the jury's right to operate as freely as possible from outside unauthorized intrusions purposefully made.

350 U.S. 377, 382 (1956).

The principle upon which these decisions rely applies with equal force to the Commission as well as a jury. The fair and proper adjudication of issues before the Commission requires that the Commissioners remain free of improper influences. In situations like this one in which the Commissioners have been exposed to improper communication with the ex officio members of the House and Senate with respect to a given issue, their decisionmaking power with regard to that same issue is tainted. As with a jury exposed to "unauthorized invasions," the Commission cannot now simply ignore that taint.

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above and those set forth in our response dated October 25, 1993, Respondents respectfully request the Commission to dismiss the MUR.

Respectfully submitted,

Bobby R. Burchfield

I. INTRODUCTION

This General Counsel's Report addresses four Matters Under Review ("MURs") involving the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. ("Primary Committee"), the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("GEC"), and the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc. ("Compliance Committee") that originated from the 1992 presidential general election campaign of President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle.[1]

MUR 4171 was generated by an audit of the Primary Committee undertaken in accordance with 26 U.S.C. § 9007(a). The Primary Committee was the principal authorized campaign committee for President George Bush's campaign for the 1992 Republican presidential nomination. The Audit Division referred five matters to this Office. Based on the facts and considerations of prosecutorial discretion, the Office of General Counsel recommends that the Commission find reason to believe but take no further action concerning matters involving excessive contributions, use of corporate aircraft, and disclosure of occupation and name of employer. This Office further recommends that the Commission find reason to believe and engage in conciliation with the Primary Committee prior to a finding of probable cause to believe concerning the remaining matters involving reporting of debts and obligations and staff advances. This Office recommends the Commission find reason to believe, but take no further action against Robert Holt, an individual who made staff advances.

MUR 3664 was generated by a complaint filed on November 2, 1992 by the Democratic National Committee against the GEC and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer. MUR 3664 involves the GEC's failure to properly report debts and obligations for campaign-related travel.

[1] President Bush and Vice President Quayle were renominated by the Republican Party on August 20, 1992. The 1992 General Election was on November 3, 1992.

Specifically, the complaint alleged that between August 1992 and the 1992 general election, the GEC failed to report to the Commission any reimbursement made to, or debts and obligations owed to, the United States Treasury for campaign-related use of Air Force One and Air Force Two. On January 25, 1994, the Commission found reason to believe that the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7 by failing to report estimated debts and obligations incurred for campaign-related travel and authorized further investigation to determine the amount of the apparent violation.[2] The GEC has made two requests that this matter be dismissed. This Office recommends the Commission deny both requests for dismissal and engage in conciliation with the GEC prior to a finding of probable cause to believe.

MUR 4289 was generated by referrals from the joint audit of the GEC and Compliance Committee undertaken in accordance with 26 U.S.C. § 9007(a). The Audit Division referred two matters to this Office concerning the reporting of debts and obligations by the GEC and Compliance Committee. This Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe and engage in conciliation with the GEC and Compliance Committee prior to a finding of probable cause to believe.

MUR 4170 was generated by a referral from the joint audit of the GEC and Compliance Committee undertaken in accordance with 26 U.S.C. § 9007(a). The Audit Division referred one

[2] The Commission originally made the reason to believe findings on July 20, 1993. The subsequent findings were made pursuant to the Commission's November 9, 1993 determinations regarding procedures to be followed in light of FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, 6 F.3d 821 (D.C. Cir. 1993) ("NRA"), petition for cert. dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, 115 S.Ct. 537 (1994).

On July 20, 1993, the Commission also approved a Subpoena to Produce Documents and Order to Submit Written Answers directed to the GEC. The Commission did not revote the Subpoena and Order based on the GEC's representation that most of the subpoenaed documents were in the possession of the Audit Division, which was conducting an audit of the GEC pursuant to 26 U.S.C. § 9007(a). matter to this Office concerning disclosure of occupation and name of employer. This Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe, but take no further action.

II. MUR 4171

MUR 4171 was generated by an audit of the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. The Audit Division referred matters to this Office involving excessive contributions, use of corporate aircraft, staff advances, disclosure of occupation and name of employer, and reporting of debts and obligations. This Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe and engage in conciliation with the Primary Committee prior to a finding of probable cause to believe concerning matters which involve reporting of debts and obligations and staff advances.

A. EXCESSIVE CONTRIBUTIONS

The Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended ("the Act"), limits the amount that an individual may contribute to any candidate to $1,000 with respect to any election. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A). No candidate or political committee shall knowingly accept any contribution which exceeds the contribution limitations. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f).

The Primary Committee directly received excessive contributions totaling $135,751 during the campaign. The Primary Committee issued timely refund checks for 156 of the contributions totaling $132,751, which were never negotiated.[3] The Primary Committee did not issue timely refund checks for three contributions, with excessive portions totaling $3,000. One of these contributions was received on April 17, 1992, but not refunded until January 14, 1993. Although the refund check was cashed, the refund was not made timely in accordance with

[3] The Commission notified the Primary Committee by letter dated June 2, 1992 that the Commission will no longer recognize untimely refunds made more than 60 days following the candidate's date of ineligibility or the receipt of the letter, whichever was later. Thus, the Commission did not recognize untimely refunds made by the Primary Committee after October 19, 1992, 60 days after the candidate's date of ineligibility.

Commission policy. The other two contributions were incorrectly attributed. The Primary Committee made a payment to the United States Treasury in the amount of $119,501 on October 21, 1993 and paid the remaining $16,250 for these excessive contributions in response to the Interim Audit Report.

The Primary Committee also received seven excessive contributions totaling $6,050 through joint fundraising events with the Ohio Republican Party State and Federal Accounts. Six of the seven contributors had previously made direct contributions to the Primary Committee. The Primary Committee received these contributions on August 14, 1992 but did not refund them until December 4, 1992. Since the refunds were untimely, the Primary Committee made a payment of $6,050 to the United States Treasury in response to the Interim Audit Report.

The excessive contributions received by the Primary Committee totaled $141,801. While the transactions described here apparently were in violation of 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f), this Office believes that the Commission should take no further action concerning this violation. The Primary Committee attempted to make timely refunds of most of the excessive contributions, but the refund checks were not negotiated by the contributors. Thus, despite its efforts to comply, the Primary Committee was unable to make timely refunds because the checks were stale-dated.

Finally, the Primary Committee did not contest the findings of the Audit Division and promptly made payments for the excessive contributions to the United States Treasury during the audit process, thereby saving Commission resources. Therefore, the Office of General Counsel recommends that the Commission find reason to believe that the Bush-

Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f), but take no further action.

B. PROHIBITED CONTRIBUTIONS - USE OF CORPORATE AIRCRAFT

It is unlawful for any corporation to make a contribution in connection with a federal election, or for any candidate or political committee to accept such a contribution. 2 U.S.C. § 441b(a). The Commission's regulations provide that a candidate, candidate's agent or person traveling on behalf of a candidate who uses an airplane which is owned or leased by a corporation that is not licensed to offer commercial services for travel in connection with a federal election must reimburse the corporation in advance. 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e). The regulations further provide that the amount of the reimbursement shall be the first class airfare for travel to a city served by regularly scheduled commercial service, or the usual charter rate for travel to a city not served by a regularly scheduled commercial service. 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e).

The Primary Committee paid two corporations for use of company aircraft: $1,434 to the Irvine Company and $9,384 to the Mosbacher Energy Company.[4] While the flights occurred between January 28 and 30, 1992, the Primary Committee did not reimburse the corporations until February 18, 1992, approximately three weeks later.

Because the Primary Committee did not reimburse the corporations in advance for the air travel as required by the regulations, the Primary Committee received a prohibited corporate contribution in violation of 2 U.S.C. § 441b(a) and 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e). See MUR 3309 (Commission found reason to believe that the Dole for President Committee violated 2 U.S.C.

[4] The amounts billed and paid approximated the first class airfare and satisfied the billing provisions of the regulations. 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e).

§ 441b(a) by failing to pay for the use of corporate aircraft in advance). Nevertheless, this Office recommends that the Commission take no further action concerning this matter. The corporations were fully reimbursed within three weeks of the travel, and the Primary Committee contends that it paid the reimbursements immediately upon learning of the flights.[5] See Attachment 2 at 3. Moreover, the Primary Committee contends that the incidents were isolated and unintentional. Id. In general, the Primary Committee did not allow its staff to use corporate aircraft. Id. Following these incidents, the Primary Committee reaffirmed its policy with a written policy statement prohibiting the use of corporate aircraft and requiring staff to clear any exceptions with the Primary Committee's counsel in advance of the date of travel. Id. It appears that the Primary Committee's actions prevented any subsequent problems of this kind. Considering the amount of money involved, the relatively short time between the travel and the reimbursement, and the Primary Committee's attempts to comply with the law and to prevent additional violations, this office believes that no further action is appropriate.

Therefore, the Office of General Counsel recommends that the Commission find reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 441b(a) and 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e), but take no further action.

C. STAFF ADVANCES

Individuals are prohibited from making contributions to any candidate in excess of $1,000 with respect to any election. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A). No candidate or political committee, or officer or employee of a political committee shall knowingly accept any contribution which exceeds the contribution limitations. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f).

Expenditures made on behalf of a political committee by an individual from his or her personal funds, or advances, are contributions. 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b). The Commission adopted section 116.5 out of a concern that during critical periods in a campaign when an authorized committee is experiencing financial difficulties, individuals may attempt to circumvent the contribution limitations by paying committee expenses and not expecting reimbursement for substantial periods of time. See Explanation and Justification for 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b), 55 Fed. Reg. 26,382-83 (June 27, 1989).

There are several limited exemptions from this general rule. If an individual has expended funds for transportation expenses on behalf of a candidate, any unreimbursed amount not in excess of $1,000 with respect to a single election will not be considered a contribution. 11 C.F.R. § 100.7(b)(8); see also 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b). Any unreimbursed payment from a volunteer's personal funds for usual and normal subsistence expenses incidental to volunteer activity is also not a contribution. Id. Moreover, advances will not be considered contributions if they are for an individual's personal transportation or for usual and normal subsistence expenses related to travel on behalf of the campaign by an individual who is not a volunteer. 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b); see Explanation and Justification for 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b)(1), 55 Fed. Reg. 26,382-83 (June 27, 1989). This exemption only applies where the individual is reimbursed within 30 days if a credit card was not used, or within 60 days following the closing date of the billing statement on which the charges first appeared for amounts paid by credit card. 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b)(2).

An individual, Robert B. Holt, volunteered fundraising services to the Primary Committee and made advances of $12,598 in excess of his $1,000 individual contribution limitation in payments for travel, subsistence, and campaign-related goods and services.[6] The Primary Committee eventually reimbursed all of these expenses.[7]

During the audit, the Primary Committee made a number of arguments to support its position that the advances were not excessive contributions. See Attachment 2 at 3-6. Chiefly, the Primary Committee contends that Mr. Holt was a commercial vendor who provided his fundraising activities on a volunteer basis but sought payment for associated travel and telephone expenses. Id. Thus, the Primary Committee argues, Mr. Holt's advances should be treated as extensions of credit by a commercial vendor under 11 C.F.R. § 116.3, despite the fact that Mr. Holt was volunteering his services.[8] Id. The Primary Committee has not provided sufficient evidence to demonstrate that Mr. Holt was a commercial vendor whose usual and normal business was to provide fundraising services. See 11 C.F.R. § 116.1(c). Indeed, based on the evidence provided from the Primary Committee and Mr. Holt, it appears that Mr. Holt is in the oil business. See Attachment 1 at 7-10. Moreover, Mr. Holt's advances do not meet the regulatory exemptions to 11 C.F.R. § 116.5 because the expenses were not solely for Mr. Holt's travel and subsistence.

[6] Mr. Holt made a $1,000 contribution by check on October 8, 1991 and made advances of $12,598 in excess of his contribution limitation. This amount reflects the highest outstanding excessive contribution resulting from over 100 advances Mr. Holt made during a period of ten months.

[7] The $12,598 advanced by Mr. Holt was outstanding for approximately 33 days. Some advances were reimbursed in 13 days, while others remained outstanding for up to 47 days.

[8] The Primary Committee presented this argument in response to the Interim Audit Report. The Commission, however, approved the Final Audit Report which expressly reaches the contrary conclusion.

Therefore, the Office of the General Counsel recommends the Commission find reason to believe that the advances were in-kind contributions from Mr. Holt to the Primary Committee which exceeded his individual contribution limitation by $12,598 in violation of 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A). This Office also recommends the Commission find there is reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by knowingly accepting these excessive in-kind contributions. This Office recommends, however, that the Commission exercise its prosecutorial discretion and take no further action against Mr. Holt.[9]

D. DISCLOSURE OF OCCUPATION AND NAME OF EMPLOYER

Committees must file reports with the Commission for each reporting period, disclosing the identification of each person (other than a political committee) who makes a contribution during the reporting period which alone or combined with other contributions within the calendar year has an aggregate value in excess of $200, along with the date and amount of any such contribution. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A). The term "identification" means, in the case of each individual, the name, the mailing address, and the occupation of the individual, as well as the name of his or her employer. 2 U.S.C. § 431(13)(A).

If the treasurer of a political committee shows that best efforts have been used to obtain, maintain, and submit the information required by the Act for the political committee, any report or records of the committee shall be considered to be in compliance with the Act. 2 U.S.C.

[9] This recommendation is consistent with the Commission's decisions in several enforcement matters involving similar instances of staff advances to publicly-financed presidential committees. See, e.g., MUR 4172 (Clinton for President Committee) and MUR 3991 (Brown for President). In those matters, the Commission found reason to believe that individuals who made staff advances violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A) but took no further action against those individuals. However, the Commission found reason to believe that the committees in those matters violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) and pursued those violations.

§ 432(i). The Commission's regulations provide that a treasurer of a political committee will not be deemed to have exercised best efforts unless he or she has made at least one effort per contribution solicitation, either by a written request or by an oral request which is documented in writing, to obtain the information from the contributor. 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b) (1994).[10] Such efforts shall consist of a clear request for the information which informs the contributor that the reporting of such information is required by law. Id.

The Audit staff conducted a sample of individual contributions received by the Primary Committee and concluded that 56% of the itemized contributions lacked the requisite disclosure of occupation and name of employer information.[11] Therefore, the Primary Committee's compliance rate was only 44%. The request for information in the Primary Committee's solicitations stated: "The Federal Election Commission requires us to ask the following information." After receiving a July 1, 1992 memorandum issued by the Commission on the "best efforts" regulation, the Primary Committee altered the language in subsequent solicitations to state: "The Federal Election Commission requires us to report the following information." See Attachment 8. The alteration of the language had no effect on the Primary Committee's low compliance rate. Furthermore, neither the Primary Committee's original language nor the revised language stated that the reporting of such information is required by law. 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b); see 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A).

[10] Effective March 3, 1994, the Commission revised the "best efforts" regulations. 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b)(1995). However, all solicitations at issue occurred before the effective date of the revised regulation. The Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit recently invalidated the provision of the revised regulation that required the use of specific language in solicitation requests, but upheld a separate provision requiring committees to make a stand-alone follow-up request for the information. Republican National Committee v. F.E.C., 76 F.3d 400 (D.C. Cir. 1996) ("RNC").

[11] Based on the sample, the Audit staff concluded that there is a 95% statistical likelihood that the total amount of contributions which lacked the disclosure of occupation and name of employer is at least $11,660,942.15, and may be as much as $14,477,603.85.

The Interim Audit Report recommended that the Primary Committee contact all contributors who had not provided the information to request the information and file amended disclosure reports to complete the public record. The Interim Audit Report concluded that the Primary Committee had not met the "best efforts" standard because its request language did not notify contributors that the reporting of such information is required by law. See 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b). The Primary Committee did not contact the contributors or amend its reports to correct the omissions.

Instead of making an effort to contact the contributors and filing amended reports to complete the public record, the Primary Committee contended that it satisfied the "best efforts" provision and, therefore, the contributions omitting disclosure information are in compliance with the Act. Attachment 2 at 6-8. The Primary Committee contended that its request language was consistent with the "best efforts" regulation and that the difference between "the law" and the "Federal Election Commission" is insignificant. Id. Moreover, the Primary Committee asserted that it would cost more than $40,000 to contact the contributors. Id.

The Primary Committee's assertion that it exercised "best efforts" is erroneous. Neither the request language used before or after the July 1992 alteration indicated that the reporting of such information was required by law.[12] 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b); see 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A). Furthermore, the Primary Committee's reports had a compliance rate of only 44% which, in itself, demonstrated the information request language was poorly crafted. While the Primary

Committee experienced an extremely low rate of compliance over several months of solicitations, it nonetheless made no additional efforts to increase the response rate or otherwise obtain the information. Thus, the Primary Committee's actions concerning the contributions which omitted disclosure information do not amount to "best efforts."

Therefore, the Office of the General Counsel recommends the Commission find reason to believe the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A). However, in light of recent revisions of the "best efforts" regulations and the amount of time that has passed since the Primary Committee submitted the disclosure reports at issue, this Office recommends the Commission take no further action on this matter. The previous "best efforts" regulation, the applicable regulation in this matter, did not specify particular language that would satisfy "best efforts." The Commission recognized that the language of committees' solicitation requests was one reason for low compliance rates in the disclosure of occupation and name of employer information and revised the regulation to include specific language for contributor information requests. See 58 Fed. Reg. 57,725, 57,726 (Oct. 27, 1993); 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b)(1) (1995). The D.C. Circuit subsequently held that the Commission could not require use of the specific request language. Republican National Committee v. F.E.C., 76 F.3d 400, 406 (D.C. Cir. 1996) ("RNC").[13] At the same time, however, the court did not hold that any request language is sufficient to satisfy "best efforts." Thus, the Commission is not precluded from reviewing the Committee's request language. While this Office concludes the Primary Committee did not report information required by the Act and did not use its "best efforts" to obtain the information, we nonetheless recommend the Commission exercise its prosecutorial discretion and take no further action.

[13] The Commission also revised the regulations to require a stand alone follow-up request. This provision was upheld in RNC, 76 F.3d at 406. The Committee's failure to make a follow-up request is not dispositive, however, because the violations in the present matter fall under the previous "best efforts" regulations.

E. REPORTING OF DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS

Committees are required to disclose on periodic reports to the Commission all outstanding debts and obligations owed by or to the committees. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8). The Commission's regulations provide that outstanding debts must be continuously reported until extinguished. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(a). Debts in excess of $500 (other than periodic payments for rent or salary) shall be reported as of the date on which they were incurred, and debts below $500 shall be reported as of the time payment is made or not later than 60 days after the debt is incurred, whichever comes first. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). If the exact amount of a debt or obligation is not known, the reporting committee shall report an estimated amount and state that the amount reported is an estimate. Id. When the exact amount is determined, the committee must either amend the report containing the estimate or indicate the correct amount for the reporting period in which the correct amount is determined. Id.

The Audit Division identified 76 obligations totaling $1,767,548 for a variety of campaign expenditures that the Primary Committee failed to report in accordance with the Act and the Commission's regulations. Attachment 1 at 13. The first reporting of the Primary Committee's debts did not occur until the Committee reported the payments of the debts in question. The amount identified by the Audit Division includes only those debts where payments were not reported until reporting periods after the ones in which the Primary Committee received invoices.[14] The Primary Committee filed amended reports which materially disclosed the debts and obligations on August 12, 1994, one month after it responded to the Interim Audit Report and 21 months after the general election.

The Primary Committee contends its procedure of reporting debts once the invoice was received and approved for payment was sufficient to comply with the Commission's regulations. However, 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) requires committees to report debts as of the time of incurrence (i.e., the date an item was purchased or service was rendered to a committee), not the date of the invoice, and to estimate the amount of the debt or obligation if they are unable to determine the exact amount. The Primary Committee's procedure does not release it and its treasurer from the reporting requirements of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). Since the Primary Committee did not report the debts as they were incurred, the goal of immediate and complete disclosure was not met and the Primary Committee's disclosure reports did not accurately reflect the Primary Committee's actual debts at any specific date. See MUR 4173 (Clinton/Gore '92 Committee).

The Primary Committee also argued during the audit that section 104.11(b) is limited to loans and written contracts and does not apply to debts incurred without a written agreement. This conclusion is not supported by the language of the regulation ("a debt or obligation, including a loan, a written contract, written promise or written agreement to make an expenditure . . ."). Rather, this language reveals that "a debt or obligation" includes but is not limited to the enumerated sources.

[14] See infra footnote 18 (detailing the Audit Division's method of identifying violations of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b)).

Therefore, this Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to properly disclose its debts and obligations.

III. MUR 3664

On January 25, 1994, the Commission found reason to believe the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7. The GEC has made two separate requests that this matter be dismissed. Prior to the Commission's revote of the reason to believe findings, the GEC argued that it was not required to report debts or obligations until it had been billed for them. See generally Attachment 3. After the revote of the reason to believe findings, the GEC reasserted this argument and also argued that the revote failed to cure the defect in the Commission's composition identified by the D.C. Circuit in FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, 6 F.3d 821 (D.C. Cir. 1993) ("NRA"), petition for cert. dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 115 S.Ct. 537 (1994). See generally Attachment 4. This Office recommends that both requests for dismissal be denied.

A. FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF THIS MATTER IS CONSTITUTIONAL

Following the NRA decision, the Commission voted to reconstitute itself, excluding the ex officio members from all closed proceedings. On November 9, 1993, the reconstituted Commission considered the General Counsel's legal analysis of the effect of the NRA decision on Commission actions and adopted specific policies regarding how to proceed in NRA-affected matters. In MUR 3664, the Commission, pursuant to those procedures, revoted on the finding of reason to believe.

In its NRA-based request for dismissal, the GEC argues that the presence of the former ex officio members of the Commission during deliberations on the original reason to believe finding impermissibly tainted the proceedings, creating a constitutional defect that cannot be cured through reconstitution and ratification. The recent decision of the Court of Appeals in F.E.C. v. Legi-Tech, Inc. conclusively rejected such a defense, finding that "the better course is to take the FEC's post-reconstruction ratification of its prior decisions at face value and treat it as an adequate remedy for the NRA constitutional violation." F.E.C. v. Legi-Tech, Inc., 75 F.3d 704, 709 (D.C. Cir. 1996).

Therefore, this Office recommends that the Commission deny the request to dismiss this matter on NRA-related grounds.

B. REPORTING OF DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS

1. Applicable Law

Committees are required to disclose on periodic reports to the Commission all outstanding debts and obligations owed by or to the committees. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8). A political committee owing a debt or obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure under $500 must report the debt as of the time the payment is made, or no later than 60 days after such an obligation is incurred, whichever is first. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). Any debt or obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure over $500 must be reported as of the date on which the obligation is incurred, except that any obligation incurred for rent, salary, or other regularly recurring administrative expense must not be reported as a debt before the payment due date. Id. If the exact amount of the debt or obligation is not known, the report shall state that the amount reported is an estimate. Id. When the exact amount is determined, the committee must either amend the report containing the estimate or indicate the correct amount on the report for the reporting period in which the correct amount is determined. Id.

All campaign-related travel of publicly-funded candidates for the offices of President and Vice President of the United States is a qualified campaign expense, and costs of such travel must be reported by the candidates' authorized campaign committees as expenditures. 26 U.S.C. § 9004(b) and 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(a). If a candidate for President or Vice President uses a government conveyance paid for by a governmental entity for campaign-related travel, the candidate's authorized committee must pay the appropriate governmental entity an amount equal to the first class commercial airfare plus the cost of other services in the case of travel to a city served by regularly scheduled commercial air service or, in the case of travel to a city not served by regularly scheduled commercial service, the commercial charter rate plus the cost of other services. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

2. Facts

The GFC's use of military airplanes for campaign-related travel was identified and billed separately depending on the aircraft used and the identity of the primary passenger on the plane. Attachment 5. As noted in the Final Audit Report:

> In most cases, trips by the President were identified and billed as Air Force I, whereas, trips made by the Vice President were identified and billed as Air Force II. Further, there were several instances when the First Lady (Barbara Bush), staff and advance personnel made campaign-related trips on aircraft provided by the United States Air Force. These trips were usually identified and billed as "Airlift Operations".[sic]

Id. at 5-6. Billings originated with the United States Air Force and were routed through the White House Military Office to the GFC. Id. In most cases, bills included a passenger manifest for each flight and a summary memorandum listing campaign-related passengers billable to the GEC. Id.

The GEC paid a total of $459,992 for political passenger travel on Air Force One occurring between August 17, 1992 and the day before the general election, November 2, 1992. Attachment 6 at 10-14. The GEC did not contemporaneously report any actual or estimated debt with respect to the amounts it eventually paid for campaign-related use of Air Force One.

The GEC paid a total of $396,455 for political passenger travel on Air Force Two occurring between August 21, 1992 and election day, November 3, 1992. Id. at 15-19. The GEC did not contemporaneously report any actual or estimated debt with respect to the amounts it eventually paid for campaign-related use of Air Force Two.

The GEC paid a total of $52,752 for political passenger travel on other Air Force aircraft between September 2, 1992 and November 2, 1992. Id. at 20-22. In addition, the Committee's Schedule B-P reports show a payment of $13,519.36 to "U.S. Treasurer/Airlift Operations" that does not correspond to any payments detailed on the Airlift Operations spreadsheet attached to the Interim Audit Report.[15] See id. The GEC did not contemporaneously report any actual or estimated debt with respect to the amounts it eventually paid to "U.S. Treasurer/Airlift Operations."

The GEC's Schedule B-P reports show seven payments totaling $110,902.13 to "Treasurer of United States/DOD Helicopters" or "U.S. Treasurer/Marine I" for campaign-related use of government-owned helicopters. The first of these payments, in the amount of $31,564.38, was made November 2, 1992, the day before the general election. The remaining payments were made between November 6, 1992 and July 20, 1993. The GEC did not contemporaneously report any actual or estimated debt with respect to the amounts it eventually paid for use of government helicopters.

The GEC's Schedule B-P reports show four payments totaling $14,570 to "U.S. Treasurer/Limousines" or "U.S. Treasurer Limousines/Vice President" for campaign-related ground transportation in government-owned vehicles.[16] One of these payments, in the amount of $6,820, was made October 14, 1992. The others were made after the general election, on December 2, 1992 and January 14 and May 11, 1993. The GEC did not contemporaneously report any actual or estimated debt with respect to the amounts it eventually paid for use of government-owned ground transportation.

In response to the original reason to believe finding in this matter, the GEC argued that it had "either paid promptly or reported all invoices for campaign-related travel by President Bush and Vice President Quayle." Attachment 3 at 2. However, the GEC's treasurer explained during the audit exit conference that the Committee "did not consider any obligations as debts for reporting purposes until the invoice had been received by the [GEC's] Accounting Department and approved for payment by the appropriate personnel." Attachment 5 at 9.

The GEC failed to report travel-related debts totaling $1,048,190 as required by the Act and the Commission's regulations. Attachment 9. The first reporting of the travel-related debts did not occur until the GEC reported the payments of the debts. Thus, although the GEC properly disclosed the payments, it had never reported the corresponding debt in the reports. Included in the total unreported travel-related debt identified by this Office was $314,190 for campaign-related travel on Air Force One and Air Force Two that had also been identified by the Audit Division in its audit of the GEC.[17] The amounts identified by the Audit Division include only those debts where payments were not reported until reporting periods after the ones in which the GEC received the invoice.[18] See Attachment 6 at 23-26. In addition to the $314,190 identified by the Audit Division, there was $734,000 in campaign-related travel debt that the GEC failed to estimate and report as required under 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). Consequently, the total amount of campaign-related travel debts and obligations not properly reported was $1,048,190.

The Interim Audit Report recommended that the GEC file amendments to correct the public record with respect to these and other debts itemized in the Interim Audit Report. Attachment 6 at 7. On September 7, 1994, the GEC filed amended reports that materially corrected the disclosure errors identified in the Interim Audit Report. Attachment 5 at 10.

3. Analysis

The GEC asserts that the reporting of its debts did not violate the debt reporting or estimation requirements of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). The GEC argues, first, that the regulation

[17] The GEC's non-travel related debts identified by the Audit Division are addressed in detail at Part IV of this Report.

[18] In the 1992 presidential election cycle, the Audit Division limited its measuring of compliance with 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by the use of an "invoice plus ten" test. Under this test, an apparent violation of the debts and obligations reporting requirements was identified where the auditors determined that the payment or first reporting of a debt came in a reporting period later than the period in which the date that was ten days after the invoice date. Where a debt was not timely reported under the "invoice plus ten" test, the committee also apparently failed to comply with the estimation requirement of section 104.11(b), unless the invoice date fell within the same reporting period as the actual date of incurrence, thereby making estimation unnecessary. The "invoice plus ten" test was used in the calculation of untimely reported debt that was referred by the Audit Division with respect to the Bush/Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. and the Clinton/Gore '92 Committee.

does not require reporting or estimation of debt prior to the receipt of an invoice; second, that 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) applies only to debts incurred in writing; third, that 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) applies only to debts in the process of settlement by terminating committees; and finally, that application of the regulation to the GEC and similarly situated committees would "produce administrative difficulties and unfairness." Attachment 3 at 2-5.

The Commission previously considered and rejected the GEC's argument that 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) does not require reporting or estimation of debt prior to the receipt of an invoice. MUR 3664 (First General Counsel's Report, approved July 9, 1993, at 6-7).[19] The reporting requirements of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) have consistently required committees to report debts that exceed $500 at the time they incur such debts (i.e., the date travel was taken), and if a committee is unable to determine the exact amount of debt, it is required to provide an estimate of the debt incurred. Prior to 1990, 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) required committees to report debts "as of the time of the transaction." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (1989). In 1990, the Commission changed this language to require that committees report debts "as of the date on which the obligation was incurred." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (1995). The new language was intended to clarify the existing regulation; the Commission viewed "as of the time of the transaction" and "as of the date on which the obligation was incurred" as interchangeable terms. See Advisory Opinion ("AO") 1980-38. The Explanation and Justification for the 1990 amendment to 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) makes clear reference to such situations where reporting and estimation for debts not yet billed is required, stating that "new language is also included which follows the current policy that if the exact amount is not known, the committee should report an estimated amount." Explanation and Justification of Regulations for 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b), 55 Fed. Reg. 26,378, 26,385 (June 27, 1990) (clarifying Commission policy set forth in AO 1980-38). Furthermore, the Commission has rejected past arguments that debts over $500 must be reported from a date other than "the date on which the debt was incurred."[20]

In support of its argument that 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) applies only to debts incurred in writing, the GEC focuses on the phrases "loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement" in the language of the regulation. Attachment 3 at 3 (quoting 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b)) (emphasis is the GEC's). The GEC then attempts to support its position by referring to "settled rules of construing statutes and regulations" and citing Hawkeye Chemical Co. v. St. Paul Fire and Marine Ins. Co., 510 F.2d 322, 327 (7th Cir. 1975). In Hawkeye, the Seventh Circuit applied the maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius," or, the expression of one excludes the other. Id.

"Expressio unius" does not apply in this situation because it would contradict the express language of the regulation. Had the GEC quoted all of the pertinent part of the regulation in its argument, it would have read "a debt or obligation, including a loan, a written contract, written promise or written agreement to make an expenditure . . ." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (emphasis added). A reading of the language in context indicates that the terms "debts" or "obligations" include but are not limited to the enumerated sources. That conclusion is consistent with previous interpretations of the word "includes" in the Act. See, e.g., FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life, 769 F.2d 13, 17 (1st Cir. 1985). In Massachusetts Citizens for Life, the court stated "[i]t has been said 'the word 'includes' is usually a term of enlargement, and not of limitation . . . It, therefore, conveys the conclusion that there are other items includable, though not specifically enumerated . . . .'" Id. (quoting 2A N. Singer, Sutherland Statutes and Statutory Construction 133 (4th ed. 1984)).

[20] For example, in MUR 2304, the Cranston for President Committee ("the Cranston Committee") failed to report properly $225,733 in debts that it had incurred. The Cranston Committee argued that it was not required to report debts without first receiving an invoice for such obligations. The Commission rejected this argument and found that debts over $500 were required to be reported at the time such debts were incurred or "at the time of the transaction." See also MUR 2706 (committee was required to report debt of telephone survey from date of the survey, not from date of payment for such survey); MUR 3494 (committee was required to report debt stemming from computer rental from date of rental agreement, not from any other date).

Finally, the GEC's argument that application of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) to travel on government conveyances would work a hardship is overstated. First, the debt at issue here, travel on government-owned conveyances by publicly-funded presidential candidates, is perhaps the easiest of all debts to estimate because of the recordkeeping requirements of 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7. While this Office is mindful that the information necessary to estimate accurately debts for the use of Air Force aircraft was not provided to the GEC until the bill itself was provided, the GEC could presumably have arranged for the Air Force and the White House, which were not typical business vendors, to have provided this information or estimates of this information more rapidly, even if the bills themselves were not yet ready. Second, the regulation requires only that a committee report a reasonable estimate. Thus, the estimation requirement would create only minimal additional work for a committee, an inconvenience greatly outweighed by the value of immediate and complete public disclosure.

Therefore, the Office of General Counsel recommends the Commission deny the GEC's request to dismiss MUR 3664. This Office further recommends the Commission engage in conciliation with the GEC prior to a finding of probable cause to believe.

IV. MUR 4289

MUR 4289 was generated by the joint audit of the GEC and Compliance Committee ("the Committees"). The Audit Division referred matters to this Office involving reporting of debts and obligations by both the GEC and Compliance Committee. This Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe that the GEC and Compliance Committee failed to disclose properly its debts and obligations and engage in conciliation with the Committees prior to a finding of probable cause to believe.

Political committees are required to disclose on periodic reports to the Commission all outstanding debts and obligations owed by or to the committees. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8). A political committee owing a debt or obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure under $500 must report the debt as of the time the payment is made, or no later than 60 days after such an obligation is incurred, whichever is first. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). Any debt or obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure over $500 must be reported as of the date on which the obligation is incurred, except that any obligation incurred for rent, salary or other regularly recurring administrative expenses need not be reported as a debt before the payment due date. Id. If the exact amount of the debt or obligation is not known, the report shall state that the amount reported is an estimate. Id. When the exact amount is determined, the committee must either amend the report containing the estimate or indicate the correct amount on the report for the reporting period in which the correct amount is determined. Id.

In the Interim Audit Report, the Audit Division identified $1,052,098 in GEC debts and $235,587 in Compliance Committee debts that were not reported in accordance the Act and the Commission's regulations. Attachment 6 at 6, 9. The $1,052,098 in GEC debts includes $737,908 at issue in this matter; the additional $314,190 in debts concern campaign-related travel which are covered in MUR 3664. The first reporting of the Committees' debts did not occur until the GEC and Compliance Committee reported the payments of the debts. The amounts identified by the Audit Division include only those debts where payments were not reported until reporting periods after the ones in which the Committees received invoices.[21] See id. at 23-26. The Interim Audit Report recommended that the Committees file amendments to correct the public record. Id. at 6, 9. On September 7, 1994, 22 months after the general election, the GEC and Compliance Committee filed amended reports that materially disclosed the Committees' actual debts and obligations. Attachment 5 at 10, 14.

9 3 0 4 7 8 7 0 2 8

In response to the Interim Audit Report, the GEC and Compliance Committee explained that their procedure for reporting debts and obligations was to report the debts once an invoice was received and approved for payment. Attachment 7 at 4-5. At the exit conference, the Committees stated that the invoices were paid in a timely manner. However, 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) requires committees to report debts at the time of incurrence (i.e., the date an item was purchased or service rendered), not the date of the invoice; if committees are unable to determine the exact amount of debt, they are required to provide an estimate of the debt incurred. Thus, the Committees' procedures do not release the Committees and their treasurer from the reporting requirements of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). By failing to disclose the debts as they were incurred, the goal of immediate and complete disclosure was not met because the disclosure reports did not include the Committees' actual debt position as of any specific date. See MUR 4173 (Clinton/Gore '92 Committee).

The GEC and Compliance Committee also argued during the audit that section 104.11(b) is limited to loans and written contracts and does not apply to debts incurred without a written agreement. This conclusion is not supported by the language of the regulation ("a debt or obligation, including a loan, a written contract, written promise or written agreement to make an expenditure . . ."). Rather, this language reveals that a "debt or obligation" includes but is not limited to the enumerated sources.

Thus, this Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, and the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) relating to $737,908 of non-travel related debts and obligations and enter into conciliation prior to a finding of reason to believe.[22]

V. MUR 4170

MUR 4170 was generated by the joint audit of the GEC and Compliance Committee. The Audit Division referred one matter to this Office involving disclosure of occupation and name of employer by the Compliance Committee. This Office recommends that the Commission find reason to believe that the Compliance Committee failed to report occupation and name of employer information, but take no further action.

[22] The Commission previously found reason to believe the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) relating to travel-related debts and obligations in MUR 3664. See supra Part III of this Report.

Committees are required to submit periodic reports to the Commission, disclosing the identification of each person (other than a political committee) making aggregate contributions in excess of $200 per calendar year, along with the date and amount of any such contribution. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A). Identification of each individual includes the name, mailing address, occupation of the contributor, and name of his or her employer. 2 U.S.C. § 431(13)(A).

If the treasurer of a political committee shows that "best efforts" have been used to obtain, maintain, and submit the information required by 2 U.S.C. § 431(13), any report or records of the committee shall be considered to be in compliance with the Act. 2 U.S.C. § 432(i). The treasurer of a political committee will be deemed to have exercised "best efforts" in obtaining the required information only if he or she has satisfied the requirements of 11 C.F.R. § 104.7. The Commission's regulations provide that a treasurer of a political committee will not be deemed to have exercised best efforts unless he or she has made at least one effort per contribution solicitation, either by a written request or by an oral request which is documented in writing, to obtain the required identification information from the contributor. 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b)(1994).[23] Such efforts shall consist of a clear request for the information which informs the contributor that the reporting of such information is required by law. Id.

The Audit staff conducted a sample of individual contributions received by the Compliance Committee and concluded that 68% of the itemized contributions lacked the requisite disclosure of occupation and name of employer information.[24] Therefore, the Compliance Committee's compliance rate was only 32%. The request for information in the Compliance Committee's solicitations stated: "The Federal Election Commission requires us to ask the following information." After receiving a July 1, 1992 memorandum issued by the Commission on the "best efforts" regulation, the Compliance Committee altered the language in subsequent solicitations to state: "The Federal Election Commission requires us to report the following information." See Attachment 8. The alteration of the language had no effect on the Compliance Committee's low compliance rate. Furthermore, neither the Compliance Committee's original language nor the revised language stated that the reporting of such information is required by law. 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b); see 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A).

[23] Effective March 3, 1994, the Commission revised the "best efforts" regulations. 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b)(1995). However, all solicitations at issue occurred before the effective date of the revised regulation. See supra footnote 10 (detailing the Commission's revised the "best efforts" regulations, 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b), and subsequent litigation).

The Interim Audit Report recommended that the Compliance Committee contact all contributors who had not provided the information to request the information and file amended disclosure reports to complete the public record. The Interim Audit Report concluded that the Compliance Committee had not met the "best efforts" standard because its request language did not notify contributors that the reporting of such information is required by law. See 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b). The Compliance Committee did not contact the contributors or amend its reports to correct the omissions.

Instead of making an effort to contact the contributors and filing amended reports to complete the public record, the Compliance Committee contended that it satisfied the "best efforts" provision and, therefore, the contributions omitting disclosure information are in compliance with the Act. Attachment 2 at 6-8. The Compliance Committee contended that its request language was consistent with the "best efforts" regulation and that the difference between "the law" and the "Federal Election Commission" is insignificant. Id.

The Compliance Committee's assertion that it exercised "best efforts" is erroneous. Neither the request language used before or after the July 1992 alteration indicated that the reporting of such information was required by law.[25] 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b); see 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A). Furthermore, the Compliance Committee's reports had a compliance rate of only 32% which, in itself, demonstrated the information request language was poorly crafted. While the Compliance Committee experienced an extremely low rate of compliance over several months of solicitations, it nonetheless made no additional efforts to increase the response rate or otherwise obtain the information. Thus, the Compliance Committee's actions concerning the contributions which omitted disclosure information do not amount to "best efforts."

Therefore, the Office of the General Counsel recommends the Commission find reason to believe the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A). However, in light of recent revisions of the "best efforts" regulations and the amount of time that has passed since the Compliance Committee submitted the disclosure reports at issue, this Office recommends the Commission take no further action on this matter. The previous "best efforts" regulation, the applicable regulation in this matter, did not specify particular language that would satisfy "best efforts." The Commission recognized that the language of committees' solicitation requests was one reason for low compliance rates in the disclosure of occupation and name of employer information and revised the regulation to include specific language for contributor information requests. See 58 Fed. Reg. 57,725, 57,726 (Oct. 27, 1993); 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b)(1) (1995). The D.C. Circuit subsequently held that the Commission could not require use of the specific request language. Republican National Committee v. F.E.C., 76 F.3d 400, 406 (D.C. Cir. 1996) ("RNC").[26] At the same time, however, the court did not hold that any request language is sufficient to satisfy "best efforts." Thus, the Commission is not precluded from reviewing the Committee's request language. While this Office concludes the Compliance Committee did not report information required by the Act and did not use its "best efforts" to obtain the information, we nonetheless recommend the Commission exercise its prosecutorial discretion and take no further action.

VI. CONCILIATION AND CIVIL PENALTIES

[26] The Commission also revised the regulations to require a stand alone follow-up request. This provision was upheld in RNC, 76 F.3d at 406. The Committee's failure to make a follow-up request is not dispositive, however, because the violations in the present matter fall under the previous "best efforts" regulations.

MEMORANDUM

TO: The Commission

FROM: Lawrence M. Noble
General Counsel

BY: Kim Bright-Coleman
Associate General Counsel

SUBJECT: Errata - First General Counsel's Report, dated August 13, 1996
MURs 3664, 4170, 4171, 4289

This memorandum is being submitted on a 24 hour tally vote because it addresses two non-substantive issues related to the First General Counsel's Report in MURs 3664, 4170, 4171 and 4289, approved by the Commission on September 10, 1996: 1) an error in a recommendation in MUR 4171; and 2) the omission of a recommendation to close the file in MUR 4170.

On page 33 of the Report, at recommendation #7 of MUR 4171, this Office inadvertently substituted the word "General" in place of the word "Primary." The recommendation should read: "Enter into conciliation with the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, prior to a finding of probable cause to believe." This revised recommendation is consistent with language found at page 2 of the Report. Furthermore, MUR 4171 exclusively concerned the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc.

In addition, this Office inadvertently omitted a recommendation to close the file in MUR 4170. The Commission made a finding of reason to believe but determined to take no further action on the only outstanding issue in that matter.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Rescind the Commission's September 10, 1996 vote on recommendation #7 of MUR 4171 in the First General Counsel's Report on MURs 3664, 4170, 4171, and 4289, dated August 13, 1996.

RE: MURs 3664, 4170, 4171, and 4289

Dear Mr. Burchfield:

On September 10, 1996, the Federal Election Commission found that there is reason to believe that your clients the Bush Quayle Primary Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer (the "Primary Committee"), the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer ("the GEC") and the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer ("the Compliance Committee") violated provisions of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended ("the Act"). The Factual and Legal Analyses, which formed the bases for the Commission's findings are attached for your information. The Commission's findings related to three matters: MUR 4170, involving the Compliance Committee, MUR 4171, involving the Primary Committee, and MUR 4289, involving the GEC and Compliance Committee. The Commission also made determinations concerning an open matter, MUR 3664, involving the GEC.

Specifically, in MUR 4170, the Commission found reason to believe that the Compliance Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A) by failing to report occupation and name of employer information. However, after considering the circumstances of that matter, the Commission determined to take no further action on the violation and closed the file in MUR 4170.

In addition, in MUR 4171, the Commission found reason to believe that the Primary Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by receiving excessive contribution checks, 2 U.S.C. § 441b(a) and 11 C.F.R. § 114.9(e) by failing to reimburse corporations in advance for air travel, and 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(3)(A) by failing to report occupation and name of employer information. However, after considering the circumstances of this matter, the Commission also determined to take no further action on those violations.

Also in MUR 4171, the Commission found reason to believe that the Primary Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by accepting excessive contributions in the form of staff advances from an individual, and 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report debts and obligations. Moreover, in MUR 4289, the Commission found reason to believe that the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b), and that the Compliance Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report non-travel related debts and obligations. Finally, the Commission considered the GEC's request to dismiss MUR 3664 and determined to deny the request.

You may submit any factual or legal materials that you believe are relevant to the Commission's consideration of these matters. Please submit such materials to the General Counsel's Office within 15 days of your receipt of this letter. Where appropriate, statements should be submitted under oath. In the absence of additional information, the Commission may find probable cause to believe that violations have occurred and proceed with conciliation.

In order to expedite the resolution of these matters, the Commission has also decided to offer to enter into negotiations directed toward reaching a conciliation agreement in settlement of these matters prior to findings of probable cause to believe. Enclosed is a global conciliation agreement in settlement of MURs 4171, 4289 and 3664 for the Primary Committee, GEC and Compliance Committee that the Commission has approved.

If you are interested in expediting the resolution of this matter by pursuing preprobable cause conciliation and if you agree with the provisions of the enclosed agreement, please sign and return the agreement, along with the civil penalty, to the Commission. In light of the fact that conciliation negotiations, prior to a finding of probable cause to believe, are limited to a maximum of 30 days, you should respond to this notification as soon as possible.

Requests for extensions of time will not be routinely granted. Requests must be made in writing at least five days prior to the due date of the response and specific good cause must be demonstrated. In addition, the Office of the General Counsel ordinarily will not give extensions beyond 20 days.

This matter will remain confidential in accordance with 2 U.S.C. §§ 437g(a)(4)(B) and 437(a)(12)(A), unless you notify the Commission in writing that you wish the investigation to be made public.

For your information, we have enclosed a brief description of the Commission's procedures for handling possible violations of the Act. If you have any questions, please contact Delanie DeWitt Painter, the attorney assigned to this matter, at (202) 219-3690.

Sincerely,

Lee Ann Elliott

Re: MURs 3664, 4170, 4171 and 4289

Dear Mss. Vosdingh and Painter:

Our clients, Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer of each (collectively, "Respondents"), received the notice of the "reason to believe" findings and proposal for conciliation from Commission Chairman Lee Ann Elliott in the above-captioned matters under review on September 27, 1996. Accordingly, the fifteen-day period for responding will end on Saturday, October 12, 1996 (which, with the Columbus Day holiday, means the responses currently are due on October 15th).

We have begun reviewing the materials and considering with our clients the appropriate responses. As Tom Barnett discussed with Ms. Vosdingh by telephone yesterday, however, the Commission has issued simultaneously four "reason to believe" findings and proposed a global conciliation agreement that requires the Respondents to consider and respond to an unusually large number of issues. Further, counsel to the Respondents have been occupied with completion of the briefing for the appeal of the Commission's repayment determination and will be preparing for oral argument scheduled for the end of this month. Under these circumstances, Respondents request a 30-day extension of time until November 12, 1996, to submit pertinent factual and legal materials. Although we recognize that this requested extension is longer than usual, we respectfully submit that it is appropriate in these circumstances.

We appreciate your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Bobby R. Burchfield

RE: MURs 3664, 4170, 4171, 4289

Dear Messrs. Burchfield and Barnett:

This is in response to your letter dated October 4, 1996, requesting an extension of 30 days until November 12, 1996 to respond to the notice of the Commission's reason to believe findings against your clients, Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer of each, and the proposed conciliation agreement.

Considering the Federal Election Commission's responsibilities to act expeditiously in the conduct of investigations, the Office of General Counsel cannot grant your full request, but can only agree to a 20-day extension. Accordingly, the response to the reason to believe findings is due by close of business on November 4, 1996. If you are interested in pursuing pre-probable cause to believe conciliation, we will also extend the period for pre-probable cause conciliation until November 18, 1996. Given the limited period of time allowed for pre-probable cause to believe conciliation, it would be most productive and beneficial for you to submit any counter-offer to our proposed conciliation agreement with your response on November 4, 1996.

If you have any questions, please contact Delanie Painter, the attorney assigned to this matter, at (202)219-3690.

Re: MURs 4289 and 3664 -- Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as Treasurer

Dear Chairman Elliott:

This letter constitutes the response of Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as Treasurer (collectively, the "General Committee") and President Bush in the above-captioned matters under review ("MURs") to your letter dated September 24, 1996, and the Factual and Legal Analysis ("Analysis") attached to that letter.

The Analysis concludes that the General Committee should have reported, but did not report, $1,052,098 as outstanding debts and obligations based on invoices that were received by the General Committee prior to the end of a reporting period but not paid until a later reporting period. (Analysis at 2.) According to the Analysis, $737,908 of the total relates to MUR 4289 and $314,190 of the total relates to MUR 3664. (Id.) All of these invoices were paid and reported as expenditures by the General Committee. (Id.) Although the Analysis does not identify the specific invoices included by the Commission in its calculation or the method by which the Commission determined when the General Committee had received an invoice, the General Committee is assuming that the MUR includes the invoices listed on Attachment 2 to the Interim Audit Report of the General Committee (April 1, 1994).[1]

The issue raised by MURS 4289 and 3664 is related to that raised in MUR 4171 with respect to the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. and J. Stanley Huckaby, as Treasurer, and the General Committee incorporates by reference the response to MUR 4171.

As set forth in more detail in that response, the Commission should take no further action on MURs 4289 and 3664 for several reasons.

[1] Neither the Analysis nor the Interim Audit Report explains the method that the Commission used to identify debts and obligations that should have been reported. It appears that the Commission has made the incorrect assumption that every invoice dated during the first three weeks or so of the month (or earlier) was received by the General Committee during the month and should have been included in the disclosure report to the Commission for that month. It is less clear what approach the Commission adopted for invoices dated during October and November.

The General Committee requests that the Commission provide a schedule setting forth each debt and obligation that the Commission believes should have been reported along with an explanation of why the debt or obligation was included. In addition, the General Committee requests an opportunity to supplement its response in light of the information from the Commission.

A. The General Committee Used Its Best Efforts to Report Expenditures and Debts and Obligations.

The General Committee took extensive measures, and spent substantial resources, to ensure prompt payment and reporting of campaign expenditures and, where prompt payment was not made, to report outstanding debts and obligations. For example, the General Committee assigned field personnel to travel with the candidates and pay vendors during or immediately after each event. (See Decl. of Keith Davis at ¶ 2, Exhibit A). These expenditures were reported by facsimile to the Committee's headquarters and included on the next expenditure disclosure report to the Commission. (Id.)

Where expenses could not be paid immediately, the General Committee's standard practice for processing and paying invoices was as follows: (i) vendors were instructed to submit all invoices to a special mailing address, which was checked daily by the national headquarters, or risk forfeiting the right to payment; (ii) if, however, the vendor did not use the special mailing address, General Committee personnel were instructed immediately to forward invoices to the national headquarters; (iii) upon receipt, General Committee personnel would prepare check authorization forms and, if approved, submit the invoices to the Accounting Department; and (iv) upon receipt, the Accounting Department would date stamp the invoice and process a payment check within a few days, and often within 24 hours. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 3.)[2]

The General Committee established this procedure not only to ensure prompt payment and reporting of expenditures, but also to ensure that fraudulent or otherwise invalid invoices were not paid and/or reported. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 4.) A presidential campaign typically receives hundreds of thousands of dollars in invoices for expenses that either were never incurred or are not attributable to the presidential campaign. (Id.) The General Committee, for example, received numerous invalid invoices from state party events for which the General Committee was not responsible. (Id.)

The General Committee consistently adhered to its procedure for paying invoices. Indeed, of the invoices that the Commission identified as not reported as a debt or obligation during the post-election audit process, over 95 percent (or $996,445) were paid within the same reporting period in which the Accounting Department received the invoice. (Davis Decl. at ¶ 6.) These expenditures were then promptly reported on the next expenditure disclosure report.[1] Significantly, the Commission has not questioned that the General Committee promptly reported all of its disbursements.

[2] This procedure is identical in material respects to the procedure used by the Clinton/Gore '92 campaign committee. (See Report of the Audit Division on Cling/Gore '92 Committee and Clinton/Gore '92 General Election Compliance Fund at 27 (December 27, 1994).)

The system was extremely successful. Most expenditures were paid at the time they were incurred and reported on the next disclosure report. The Commission also does not question that, once invoices were received by the Accounting Department, they were paid and reported on a timely basis. Nor does the Commission question that most invoices were promptly reviewed and forwarded to the Accounting Department for payment. Overall, the General Committee made over $55 million in expenditures, and the disclosure of over 99 percent of those expenditures either was not questioned by the Commission or was made in the same reporting period as the date first indicating the General Committee's receipt of the invoice (i.e. the date on the check authorization form). (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 7-8.)

The Commission should find, we respectfully submit, that the General Committee has exercised "best efforts" within the meaning of 2 U.S.C. § 432(i) to pay and report expenditures and debts and obligations as required by law.

[1] In the relatively few instances in which the Accounting Department was unable promptly to process an invoice, it reported the debt on the next disclosure report. (Id. at ¶ 6.)

B. The Invoices Did Not Become "Debts and Obligations" Under Section 104.11(b) Until After Being Reviewed and Approved by the General Committee.

As explained in more detail in the response to MUR 4171, Section 104.11(b) of the Commission's regulations applies only to written promises or written agreements by the General Committee to make expenditures. Accordingly, the invoices at issue did not become "debts and obligations" until the invoices were reviewed and approved by the General Committee, which is indicated by the date stamp of the Accounting Department on the check authorization form.[4] The General Committee substantially complied with this standard: 95 percent of the challenged invoice amounts were paid during the same reporting period in which the Accounting Department received the invoice. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 6.)

C. The Commission Has Misapplied the Standard Set Forth in the Analysis.

Even assuming that the standard set forth in the Analysis is correct, the Commission nevertheless has improperly included substantial amounts that were properly paid or reported under that standard.

[4] This interpretation is consistent with the actions of the Clinton/Gore campaign, which did not report outstanding invoices until received by the accounting personnel that prepare disclosure reports. (See Final Audit Report on Clinton/Gore '92 Committee and Clinton/Gore '92 General Election Compliance Fund at 27 (December 27, 1994).)

1. The Commission Has Not Properly Determined the Date on Which the General Committee Received Invoices.

The Commission states that it found reason to believe that a violation had occurred "where payments were not reported until reporting periods after the ones in which the GEC received invoices." (Analysis at 2.) Even assuming, as the Commission apparently has done, that the mere issuance of an invoice by a third party triggers a reporting requirement for the General Committee, the Analysis does not indicate how the Commission purports to have determined when the General Committee received invoices.

During the post-election audit process, the Commission staff indicated that it was assuming that the General Committee received each invoice within several days of the date on the invoice. The date the invoice was prepared, however, is not a reliable indication of when it was received by the General Committee. For example, vendors frequently prepare invoices days in advance of posting them in the mail. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 11.) Delivery, especially from vendors outside the Washington, D.C. area, can take a week or more after posting. (Id.) Further, notwithstanding the General Committee's explicit instructions to use a special mailing address, sometimes an invoice was sent to the wrong address or simply not delivered. (Id.) In other instances, again contrary to instructions, the invoice was forwarded through a third party. (Id.) Moreover, also contrary to instructions, the invoice might have been sent to a field office and then forwarded to the Accounting Department. (Id.)

As an example, the General Committee experienced particular difficulties in obtaining invoices for expenses related to travel on Air Force I and II. Despite repeated requests from the General Committee, employees of the United States government took substantial time in generating invoices, and often invoices were delivered to the General Committee weeks or even months after the date on the invoice. (Id. at ¶ 12.)

It would be unfair and unreasonable for the Commission to ignore these practical realities and to require the General Committee to report debts of which its Accounting Department personnel were not yet aware.

A far better measure of the date of receipt is the date on the check authorization form that was completed at the outset of the approval process. A review of the records reveals that 80 percent (or $848,639) of the invoices at issue were paid within the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 8.)

2. The Commission Should Not Include Debts and Obligations for Less than $500 That Were Paid and Reported in a Timely Manner.

The Analysis finds reason to believe that a violation occurred because "11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) requires committees to report debts at the time of incurrence. . . ." (Analysis at 5.) The regulation, however, does not require a debt or obligation for less than $500 to be reported until "the time payment is made or no later than 60 days after such obligation is incurred, whichever comes first." (11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).) Although the Commission excluded many invoice amounts of less than $500 in calculating the unreported debts and obligations of Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., it did not exclude such amounts from the calculation for the General Committee. As a result, the Commission has included $27,556 in invoices for single debts of less than $500 that were paid in a timely manner. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 13.)

After eliminating invoices paid in the same reporting period that the check authorization form was created and those for less than $500 paid in a timely manner, only $175,903 in invoices remains at issue. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 15.) The General Committee respectfully submits that, at a minimum, the Commission should limit its consideration of any further action to these invoices.

D. Even If the Commission Finds the General Committee To Be in Violation of the Reporting Requirements, No Civil Penalty Is Warranted.

As a final consideration, in assessing whether a civil sanction is appropriate, a district court -- and the Commission -- should evaluate the following factors:

> "(1) the good or bad faith of the defendants; (2) the injury to the public; (3) the defendant's ability to pay; (4) the necessity of vindicating the authority of the responsible federal agency." Federal Election Commission v. Furgatch, 869 F.2d 1256, 1258 (9th Cir. 1989).

Applying these factors to the present case indicates that, even if the Commission concludes that a violation occurred, no civil sanction is warranted.

First, the General Committee undertook substantial efforts to collect and report the information at issue. Indeed, there is no suggestion that the General Committee acted in anything less than utmost good faith. The General Committee's practice gave it no financial benefit or advantage over the opposition; all bills were paid and the expenditures were reported. Further, in the interest of cooperation, but without conceding error, the General Committee filed "amended reports which materially disclosed the debts and obligations" identified by the Commission during the post-election audit process. (Analysis at 9.)

Second, the issue concerns only the timing of disclosure, not the failure to disclose, much less the acceptance of illegal contributions or exceeding of expenditure limits. The vast majority of the invoices at issue -- $848,639 -- were paid and reported during the same period as the date first indicating that the General Committee had received the invoice. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 8.)[5] Overall, 99 percent of the General Committee's total expenditures either were not questioned during the post-election audit process or were paid within the reporting period following the invoice date. (Id. at ¶ 7-8.) Clearly, there was no intent or effect of depriving voters of information pertinent to their votes.

Third, imposition of a civil fine would require the General Committee to engage in expensive and burdensome fundraising activities that could cost as much as the net amount raised. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 17.) Failure of such efforts would require the General Committee to seek funds from President Bush.

Fourth, where, as here, the political committee has filed amended reports and responded to the requests of the Commission during the post-election audit, there is no further need to vindicate the authority of the Commission. Nor, given

[5] And of the remaining $203,459 in invoices, over 60 percent -- $128,099 -- are dated after October 14, 1992 and would not have been disclosed prior to the general election even under the Commission's standard. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 16.) Indeed, half of all of the invoices at issue -- $507,387 -- are dated after the last reporting period prior to the general election. (Id.)

the four years that have passed and the withdrawal of President Bush and the General Committee from the political process, is there any need for prospective relief.

This case is similar in important respects to that in Federal Election Commission v. National Education Association, 457 F. Supp. 1102 (D.D.C. 1978). In NEA, the organization had adopted a "reverse check-off" system for collecting political contributions from its members. Although the court held "that reverse check-off is a per se violation of [the federal election laws]," it nonetheless ordered the NEA only to return money to members that wanted a refund and declined the Commission's request to assess a civil penalty. The court explained that:

> "[the] violation is not in the nature of intentional disregard of the rights of its dissenting members through coercion, threats, and reprisals. Rather, it is indirect infringement of those rights through excessive zeal in trying to have a more efficient collection system." (Id. at 1112.)

Similarly, the General Committee did not intentionally disregard its obligations. To the contrary, it established an efficient accounting system that, it believed, would meet the requirements of the federal election laws without imposing an undue burden on the campaign.

For the reasons set forth therein, the Commission should find that no violations have occurred and/or promptly close the investigation.

Respectfully submitted,

EXHIBIT A

DECLARATION OF KEITH A. DAVIS

In accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I, Keith A. Davis, hereby declare as follows:

1. During the 1992 Presidential election campaign, I served as Assistant Treasurer to the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("the General Committee"). As part of my responsibilities, I was involved with virtually every aspect of the finances of the General Committee. This declaration is based upon my personal knowledge.

2. The General Committee took extensive measures, and spent substantial resources, to ensure prompt payment and reporting of campaign expenditures and, where prompt payment was not made, to report outstanding debts and obligations. For example, the General Committee assigned field personnel to travel with the candidates and pay vendors during or immediately after each event. These expenditures were reported by facsimile to the General Committee's national headquarters and included on the next expenditure disclosure report to the Commission.

3. Where expenses could not be paid immediately, the General Committee's standard practice for processing and paying invoices was as follows: (i) vendors were instructed to submit all invoices to a special mailing address, which was checked daily by the national headquarters, or risk forfeiting the right to payment; (ii) if, however, the vendor did not use the special mailing address, General Committee personnel were instructed immediately to forward invoices to the national headquarters; (iii) upon receipt, General Committee personnel would complete a check authorization form and submit the invoices, if approved, to the Accounting Department; and (iv) upon receipt, the Accounting Department would date stamp the check authorization form and process a payment check within a few days, and often within 24 hours.

4. The General Committee established this procedure not only to ensure prompt payment and reporting of expenditures, but also to ensure that fraudulent or otherwise invalid invoices were not paid and/or reported. A presidential campaign typically receives hundreds of thousands of dollars in invoices for expenses that either were never incurred or are not attributable to the presidential campaign. The General Committee, for example, received numerous invalid invoices from state party events for which the General Committee was not responsible.

5. The intent of the General Committee throughout the process was to report in good faith all expenditures and debts and obligations in the manner and time required by the statute and regulations.

6. The General Committee consistently adhered to its procedure for paying invoices. Of the $1,052,098 in invoices that the Commission identified as not reported as a debt or obligation during the post-election audit process for the General Committee, $996,445 (or 95 percent) was paid within the same reporting period in which the Accounting Department received the invoice and was reported on the next expenditure disclosure report. In the relatively few instances in which the Accounting Department was unable promptly to process an invoice, it reported the debt on the next disclosure report.

7. More generally, the system was extremely successful. Most expenditures were paid at the time they were incurred and reported immediately to the Accounting Department. Of the $55,239,000 in total expenditures by the General Committee, the Commission has raised a question of the timing of the disclosures of only 2 percent.

8. With respect to the invoices at issue, the General Committee was successful in quickly processing, paying, and reporting the expenditures. There are three dates that track the progress of the invoices: (i) the date of the invoice, which generally indicates when it was prepared by the vendor, (ii) the date on which the check authorization form was first filled out, which is the best indicator of the date on which it was received by the national headquarters, and (iii) the date stamp of the Accounting Department, which indicates when the invoice was approved by the General Committee. As discussed above, 95 percent of the invoices at issue were paid during and reported for the same reporting period as the Accounting Department date stamp. The large majority -- $848,639 -- was paid during and reported for the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form. Moreover, $623,299 of the invoices at issue were paid during and reported for the reporting period immediately after the period covered by the date of the invoice.

9. The General Committee did not understand the 1990 amendment to the regulations to change this longstanding practice. Rather, the rules appeared to apply to "written" agreements that set forth a predetermined amount to be paid on a definite date, and to be applicable to committees settling debts for less than full value. Virtually all of the debts and obligations at issue here were incurred without the benefit of such a written contract. Even to attempt to keep track of the expenses of the hundreds of campaign personnel working across the country at any given time would create an administrative nightmare that would cripple a campaign. The General Committee made over $50 million in expenditures in less than three months. It would be virtually impossible for the Treasurer to monitor expenses as they are incurred by each individual. Further, the General Committee would have had no basis for estimating debts and obligations at the time they were incurred. To attempt to provide speculative estimates without any basis would not provide the Commission or the public with meaningful information and, if anything, would be highly misleading.

10. Based on my 17 years of experience in working with political committees and their efforts to comply with the federal election laws, no political committee has ever been required to estimate outstanding debts at the time of their incurrence. Rather, political committees routinely establish procedures for collecting, processing, paying, and reporting expenditures and outstanding debts similar to the procedures adopted by the General Committee. Consistent with this general practice, the General Committee did not treat invoices as outstanding debts and obligations within the meaning of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) until they were reviewed and approved. Nevertheless, and without conceding error, the General Committee submitted amended reports as requested by the Commission.

11. The Commission audit staff indicated during the post-election audits that it used the date of the invoices to infer the date on which they were received by the General Committee. However, the date an invoice was prepared is not always a proper indication of when it was received by the General Committee. For example, vendors frequently prepare invoices days in advance of posting them in the mail. Delivery, especially from vendors outside the Washington, D.C. area, can take a week or more after posting. Further, sometimes an invoice was sent to the wrong address or simply not delivered. In other instances, the invoice was forwarded through a third party. Moreover, the invoice might have been sent to a field office and then forwarded to the Accounting Department.

12. The General Committee experienced particular difficulties in obtaining invoices for expenses related to travel on Air Force I and II. Despite repeated requests from the General Committee, employees of the United States government took substantial time in generating invoices, and often invoices were delivered to the General Committee weeks or even months after the date on the invoice.

13. The Commission appears to have adopted inconsistent approaches between the Primary Committee and the General Committee with respect to the reporting of outstanding debts and obligations of less than $500. With respect to the Primary Committee, the Commission typically appears to have excluded single debts for less than $500 from the calculation of the invoices at issue. With respect to the General Committee, the Commission appears not to have excluded single debts for less than $500 in its calculation of the amount at issue. As a result, the total for the General Committee includes $27,556 in single debts for less than $500 that were paid within 60 days as required by Section 104.11(b).

14. Some national vendors, such as AT&T, provided services to numerous General Committee field offices and issued separate invoices from the vendor's own regional offices.

15. After subtracting the invoices paid during the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form as well as the expenses for less than $500 paid in a timely manner, the remaining invoices at issue amount to only $175,903.

16. Of the $203,459 in invoices that were not paid during the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form, over 60 percent -- $128,099 -- are dated after October 14, 1992 and would not have been required to be disclosed prior to the general election even under the standard applied by the Commission. Indeed, half of all of the invoices at issue -- $507,387 -- are dated after the last period for which reports were due to the Commission prior to the general election.

17. The General Committee does not have funds available to pay any significant civil penalty. In order to raise such funds, the General Committee would have to engage in time consuming and burdensome fundraising activities that could easily cost as much as the net funds raised.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed in Alexandria, Virginia on November 4, 1996.

RE: MURs 3664, 4170, 4171, and 4289

Dear Mr. Burchfield:

On January 25, 1994, the Commission found reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. (the "GEC") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7 by failing to report estimated debts and obligations incurred for campaign-related travel (MUR 3664). On September 10, 1996 the Commission found reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle Primary Committee, Inc. (the "Primary Committee") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by accepting excessive contributions in the form of staff advances from an individual, and 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report debts and obligations (MUR 4171). On the same date, in MUR 4289, the Commission found reason to believe that the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b), and that the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc. (the "Compliance Committee") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report non-travel related debts and obligations.

After considering all the evidence available to the Commission, the Office of the General Counsel is prepared to recommend that the Commission find probable cause to believe that violations have occurred in these matters.

The Commission may or may not approve the General Counsel's recommendations. Submitted for your review is a brief stating the position of the General Counsel on the legal and factual issues of these matters. Within 15 days of your receipt of this notice, you may file with the Secretary of the Commission a brief (ten copies if possible) stating your position on the issues and replying to the brief of the General Counsel. (Three copies of such brief should also be forwarded to the Office of the General Counsel, if possible.) The General Counsel's brief and any brief which you may submit will be considered by the Commission before proceeding to a vote of whether there is probable cause to believe a violation has occurred.

If you are unable to file a responsive brief within 15 days, you may submit a written request for an extension of time. All requests for extensions of time must be submitted in writing five days prior to the due date, and good cause must be demonstrated. In addition, the Office of the General Counsel ordinarily will not give extensions beyond 20 days.

A finding of probable cause to believe requires that the Office of the General Counsel attempt for a period of not less than 30, but not more than 90 days, to settle this matter through a conciliation agreement.

Should you have any questions, please contact Delanie DeWitt Painter, the attorney assigned to this matter, at (202) 219-3690.

Sincerely,

Lawrence M. Noble

GENERAL COUNSEL'S BRIEF

I. STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On January 25, 1994, the Commission found reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. (the "GEC") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7 by failing to report estimated debts and obligations incurred for campaign-related travel (MUR 3664).[1] The GEC responded to the reason to believe findings on October 25, 1993 and February 23, 1994, and requested that the matter be dismissed. The Commission denied the GEC's request on September 10, 1996.

On September 10, 1996 the Commission found reason to believe that the Bush-Quayle Primary Committee, Inc. (the "Primary Committee") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by accepting excessive contributions in the form of staff advances from an individual, and 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report debts and obligations (MUR 4171). On the same date, in MUR 4289, the Commission found reason to believe that the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b), and that the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc. (the "Compliance Committee") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report non-travel related debts and obligations. On November 4, 1996 the Committees responded to the Commission's reason to believe findings in MURs 4171 and 4289, and the GEC reiterated its arguments to the Commission's findings in MUR 3664.[2]

[1] The Commission originally made the reason to believe findings in MUR 3664 on July 20, 1993. The subsequent findings were made following FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, 6 F.3d 821 (D.C. Cir. 1993), petition for cert. dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, 115 S.Ct. 537 (1994).

The Primary Committee accepted excessive in-kind contributions in the form of staff advances from Robert Holt, an individual who volunteered fundraising services. The staff advances were not solely for Mr. Holt's travel and subsistence expenses and thus did not meet the regulatory exemptions to 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b). The advances exceeded the individual contribution limitation by $12,598. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A). Therefore, there is probable cause to believe that the Primary Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by knowingly accepting excessive in-kind contributions in the form of staff advances.

Moreover, the Primary Committee did not properly report $1,767,548 in debts and obligations as required by the FECA and Commission regulations.[3] 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8); 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). The Primary Committee did not report the amounts of its debts or estimates of the debts as of the date that the debts were incurred. Instead, the Primary Committee reported debts only after an invoice was received and the Primary Committee approved payment of the invoice. This procedure does not satisfy the reporting requirements of the Act and regulations. Moreover, the Primary Committee made no attempt to estimate its debts. Therefore, there is probable cause to believe that the Primary Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report properly $1,767,548 in debts and obligations.

The GEC and the Compliance Committee followed the same incorrect reporting procedure as the Primary Committee. The GEC did not properly report $1,048,190 in debts related to travel on government aircraft, helicopters and ground transportation as required by law. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8); 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7. In addition, the GEC did not properly report $737,908 in debts and obligations that were not related to travel. The GEC did not report the amounts of its debts or estimates of the debts as of the date that the debts were incurred, but waited until after an invoice was received and the GEC approved payment of the invoice to report each debt. Moreover, the GEC made no effort to estimate any of the debts before payment was approved. Therefore, there is probable cause to believe that the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7 by failing to report properly $1,048,190 in travel-related debts and obligations and violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report properly $737,908 in non-travel related debts and obligations.

Finally, the Compliance Committee did not properly report $235,587 in debts and obligations as required by the Act and regulations. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8); 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). Like the Primary Committee and the GEC, the Compliance Committee did not report the amounts of its debts or estimates of the debts as of the date that the debts were incurred. The Compliance Committee reported its debts only after it had received an invoice and approved payment of the debt and did not estimate any of its debts. Therefore, there is probable cause to believe that the Compliance Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report properly $235,587 in debts and obligations.

II. ANALYSIS

A. STAFF ADVANCES

Individuals are prohibited from making contributions to any candidate in excess of $1,000 with respect to any election. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A). A contribution includes a gift, loan, advance, deposit of money, or anything of value. 2 U.S.C. § 431(8)(A)(i). No candidate or political committee, or officer or employee of a political committee shall knowingly accept any contribution which exceeds the contribution limitations. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f).

Expenditures made on behalf of a political committee by an individual from his or her personal funds, or advances, are in-kind contributions and are, consequently, subject to the contribution limitations of 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A). 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b). There are several limited exemptions from this general rule. If an individual has expended funds for transportation expenses on behalf of a candidate, any unreimbursed amount not in excess of $1,000 with respect to a single election will not be considered a contribution. 11 C.F.R. § 100.7(b)(8); see also 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b). Any unreimbursed payment from a volunteer's personal funds for usual and normal subsistence expenses incidental to his or her volunteer activity is also not a contribution. Id. Moreover, advances will not be considered contributions if they are for an individual's personal transportation, or for the usual and normal subsistence expenses related to travel on behalf of the campaign by an individual who is not a volunteer. 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b); see Explanation and Justification for 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b)(1), 55 Fed. Reg. 26,382-83 (June 27, 1989). This exemption only applies where the individual is reimbursed within 30 days if a credit card was not used, or within 60 days following the closing date of the billing statement on which the charges first appeared for amounts paid by credit card. 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b)(2).

Thus, even if an advance is for an individual's own travel expenses, it is still an in-kind contribution if the expenses are not reimbursed timely pursuant to 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b). A staff advance in excess of the contribution limitations, which is not for exempt travel and subsistence reimbursed in a timely manner under 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b), is an excessive in-kind contribution on the date that it is incurred. 11 C.F.R. § 116.5.

An individual, Robert B. Holt, provided fundraising services to the Primary Committee on a volunteer basis. Mr. Holt made advances of at least $12,598 in excess of the $1,000 individual contribution limitation in payments for travel, subsistence and campaign-related goods and services.[4] The Primary Committee eventually reimbursed all of these expenses.[5]

The Primary Committee argues that the staff advances by Mr. Holt were not excessive contributions because he was a commercial vendor who provided volunteer fundraising services but sought payment for associated travel and telephone expenses. Thus, the Primary Committee argues, Mr. Holt's advances should be treated as extensions of credit by a commercial vendor under 11 C.F.R. § 116.3, despite the fact that Mr. Holt was volunteering his services. Moreover, the Primary Committee claims that most of Mr. Holt's expenditures were for transportation costs that were timely reimbursed, that the amount involved is overstated, and that the maximum outstanding balance was $5,500.

The Primary Committee has not provided sufficient evidence to demonstrate that Mr. Holt was a commercial vendor whose usual and normal business was to provide fundraising

[4] Mr. Holt made a $1,000 contribution by check on October 8, 1991 and made advances of $12,598 in excess of the contribution limitation. This amount reflects the highest outstanding excessive contribution resulting from over 100 advances Mr. Holt made during a period of ten months.

[5] The $12,598 advanced by Mr. Holt was outstanding for approximately 33 days. Some advances were reimbursed in 13 days, while others remained outstanding for up to 47 days.

9 3 0 4 3 8 7 0 3 5 1

services. See 11 C.F.R. §§ 116.1(c); 116.5(b). Based on the limited evidence provided by the Primary Committee, it appears that Mr. Holt is in the oil business, rather than a commercial vendor of fundraising services. Moreover, Mr. Holt's advances do not meet the regulatory exemptions to 11 C.F.R. § 116.5 because the expenses were not solely for his travel and subsistence expenses and reimbursed in a timely manner. Thus, the advances were in-kind contributions from Mr. Holt to the Primary Committee which exceeded the individual contribution limitation by $12,598. 2 U.S.C. § 441a(a)(1)(A). Further, the Primary Committee has not provided any additional documentation to support its figures, while the Commission's Audit staff's calculations were based on all of the available documentation provided to the Commission during the audit of the Primary Committee.

Therefore, the Office of General Counsel recommends that the Commission find there is probable cause to believe that the Primary Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by knowingly accepting excessive in-kind contributions from Robert Holt.

B. REPORTING OF DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS

Political committees are required to disclose on periodic reports to the Commission all outstanding debts and obligations owed by or to the committees. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8). Outstanding debts must be continuously reported until extinguished. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(a). A debt or obligation includes a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). A debt or obligation under $500 must be reported as of the time the payment is made, or no later than 60 days after it is incurred, whichever comes first. Id. Any debt or obligation over $500 must be reported as of the date on which the obligation is incurred, except that any obligation incurred for rent, salary, or other regularly recurring administrative expense must not be reported as a debt before the payment due date. Id.

If the exact amount of a debt or obligation is not known, the reporting committee shall report an estimated amount and state that the amount reported is an estimate. Id. When the exact amount is determined, the committee must either amend the report containing the estimate or indicate the correct amount for the reporting period in which the correct amount is determined. Id.

All campaign-related travel of publicly-funded candidates for the offices of President and Vice President of the United States is a qualified campaign expense, and costs of such travel must be reported by the candidates' authorized campaign committees as expenditures. 26 U.S.C. § 9004(b); 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(a). If a candidate for President or Vice President uses a government conveyance paid for by a governmental entity for campaign-related travel, the candidate's authorized committee must pay the appropriate governmental entity an amount equal to the first class commercial airfare plus the cost of other services in the case of travel to a city served by regularly scheduled commercial air service or, in the case of travel to a city not served by regularly scheduled commercial service, the commercial charter rate plus the cost of other services. 11 C.F.R. § 9004.7(b)(5).

The Primary Committee failed to report properly 76 obligations totaling $1,767,548 for a variety of campaign expenditures, including telephone charges, media, direct mail, travel, lodging, and computer consulting. The Primary Committee did not report these debts until it reported payment of the debts. The Primary Committee filed amended reports which materially disclosed the debts and obligations on August 12, 1994, 21 months after the general election.

The GEC failed to report properly travel-related debts totaling $1,048,190 as required by the Act and the Commission's regulations.[6] The GEC did not report the travel-related debts when they were incurred, but first reported them only when it paid the debts.

The GEC paid a total of $459,992 for political passenger travel on Air Force I that occurred between August 17, 1992 and the day before the general election, November 2, 1992. The GEC paid a total of $396,455 for political passenger travel on Air Force II that occurred between August 21, 1992 and election day, November 3, 1992. Moreover, the GEC paid $52,752 for political passenger travel on other Air Force aircraft between September 2, 1992 and November 2, 1992. In addition, the GEC's Schedule B-P reports show a payment of $13,519.36 to "U.S. Treasurer/Airlift Operations" that does not correspond to any payments detailed on the Airlift Operations spreadsheet attached to the Interim Audit Report. The GEC's Schedule B-P reports also show seven payments totaling $110,902.13 to "Treasurer of United States/DOD Helicopters" or "U.S. Treasurer/Marine I" for campaign-related use of government-owned helicopters. The first of these payments, in the amount of $31,564.38, was made November 2, 1992, the day before the general election. The remaining payments were made between November 6, 1992 and July 20, 1993. Further, the GEC's Schedule B-P reports show four payments totaling $14,570 to "U.S. Treasurer/Limousines" or "U.S. Treasurer/Limousines/Vice

[6] The GEC's use of military airplanes for campaign-related travel was identified and billed separately depending on the aircraft used and the identity of the primary passenger on the plane. Generally, trips by the President were identified and billed as Air Force I and trips made by the Vice President were identified and billed as Air Force II. Campaign-related trips by the First Lady, staff and advance personnel on aircraft provided by the United States Air Force were identified and billed as "Airlift Operations." Billings originated with the United States Air Force and were routed through the White House Military Office to the GEC. In most cases, bills included a passenger manifest for each flight and a summary memorandum listing passengers billable to the GEC.

President" for campaign-related ground transportation in government-owned vehicles.[7] One of these payments, in the amount of $6,820, was made October 14, 1992. The others were made after the general election, on December 2, 1992 and January 14 and May 11, 1993. Thus, the GEC did not contemporaneously report any actual or estimated amounts for the debts it incurred for campaign-related use of Air Force I and Air Force II, other government airplanes, helicopters and ground transportation.

In addition to travel-related debts, the GEC failed to report properly other debts and obligations totaling $737,908 as of the time they were incurred. These debts were related to telephone charges, telemarketing, media, events, research, travel reimbursements, direct mail, and other campaign expenditures. Like the travel-related debts, the GEC only reported these debts at the time of payment.

Similarly, the Compliance Committee failed to report properly debts totaling $235,587 in accordance with the Act and the Commission's regulations. These obligations related to campaign expenditures such as long distance telephone, direct mail, printing of fundraising solicitations, and computer consulting. The Compliance Committee reported the debts only at the time of payment, not as of the date of incurrence. On September 7, 1994, 22 months after the general election, the GEC and Compliance Committee filed amended reports that materially disclosed their actual debts and obligations.

All of the Committees followed similar procedures in processing their debts and obligations. Under their procedures, a debt was not reported until the invoice had been received and payment of the invoice was approved. Thus, the Committees' procedures created a significant delay between the date that a debt was incurred and the public disclosure of that debt.

[7] These amounts do not include Airlift Operations and ground transportation debts incurred for less than $500 dollars. See 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

The Committees contend that they used best efforts to process debts and obligations systematically, and that their system prevented payment of invalid and fraudulent expenditures. They reiterate the argument they made during the audit that the debts and obligations did not have to be reported under 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) until the invoices were received and payment of the invoices was approved by the Committees.

However, the Committees are wrong. The Commission's regulations explicitly require committees to report debts as of the time of incurrence, not the date of the invoice or check authorization form, and to estimate the amount of the debt or obligation if they are unable to verify the correct amount. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). The Committees' procedures do not comport with the regulations and do not release them from the reporting requirements of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) or satisfy best efforts. Far from making best efforts to report their debts and obligations, the Committees did not even attempt to estimate any of their debts and obligations on their disclosure reports or to report any debts where the amount incurred was known before the invoice was received. Since the Committees did not report the correct amount or an estimate of debts when they were incurred, their disclosure reports did not accurately reflect the Committees' actual debts, and the goal of immediate and complete disclosure was undermined.

The Committees' concern that campaigns may receive invalid or even fraudulent invoices from vendors is legitimate, and is of particular concern to publicly-financed presidential campaigns where payment of invalid debts would result in non-qualified campaign expenses. Nevertheless, the regulations require reporting, not immediate payment, of debts and obligations. If a committee properly reports the exact amount or a reasonable estimate of a debt when it is incurred, the committee may revise the report later if any portion of the debt proves to be incorrect. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).

The Committees contend that 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) only applies to debts and obligations related to written agreements, based on the language of the regulation: ". . . loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement. . . ." The Committees assert that this interpretation is supported by settled rules of statutory construction and cite Hawkeye Chemical Co. v. St. Paul Fire and Marine Ins. Co., 510 F.2d 322, 327 (7th Cir. 1975). In Hawkeye, the Seventh Circuit applied the maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius," or, the expression of one excludes the other.

The Committees' contention is not supported by the language of the regulation, which states: "[a] debt or obligation, including a loan . . . ." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (emphasis added). "Expressio unius" does not apply in this situation because it would contradict the express language of the regulation. Reading the language in context reveals that the terms "debts" and "obligations" include but are not limited to the specifically enumerated sources. That conclusion is consistent with previous interpretations of the word "includes" in the FECA. See, e.g., FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life, 769 F.2d 13, 17 (1st Cir. 1985). In Massachusetts Citizens for Life, the court stated, "It has been said 'the word 'includes' is usually a term of enlargement, and not of limitation . . . . It, therefore, conveys the conclusion that there are other items includable, though not specifically enumerated . . . .'" Id. (quoting 2A N. Singer, Sutherland Statutes and Statutory Construction 133 (4th ed. 1984)).

The Committees further argue that the 1990 revision of the regulations that led to the current language in 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) was not intended to create a new burdensome reporting requirement for committees. Further, they contend that reporting debts as of the date of incurrence is pragmatically impossible and would lead to speculative and misleading reporting.

The regulation does not create an unduly burdensome reporting requirement because it permits committees to make a reasonable estimate of debts and obligations until the correct amount can be verified. Moreover, the requirement to report as of the date that a debt is incurred is not a new requirement. Prior to 1990, 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) required committees to report debts "as of the time of the transaction." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (1989). Since 1990, the regulation has stated that committees must report debts "as of the date on which the obligation was incurred." 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (1995). Although the language of the regulation changed, the meaning of the regulation did not. The Commission viewed "as of the time of the transaction" and "as of the date on which the obligation was incurred" as interchangeable terms. The Explanation and Justification for 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (1990) discusses situations where reporting and estimation for debts not yet billed is required and states that "new language is also included which follows the current policy that if the exact amount is not known, the committee should report an estimated amount." Explanation and Justification of Regulations for 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b), 55 Fed. Reg. 26,378, 26,385 (June 27, 1990) (affirming Commission policy set forth in Advisory Opinion ("AO") 1980-38). In addition, the Commission has previously rejected arguments that debts over $500 must be reported from a date other than "the date on which the debt was incurred."[8] [8] For example, in MUR 2304, the Cranston for President Committee (the "Cranston Committee") failed to report properly $225,733 in debts that it had incurred. The Cranston Committee argued that it was not required to report debts before it received an invoice for the obligations. The Commission rejected this argument and found that debts over $500 were required to be reported at the time such debts were incurred or "at the time of the transaction." See also MUR 2706 (committee was required to report debt of telephone survey from date of the survey, not from date of payment for such survey); MUR 3494 (committee was required to report debt stemming from computer rental from date of rental agreement, not from any other date).

The argument that the regulation is not practicable and could lead to misleading reports is also not persuasive. Campaigns, particularly publicly-financed campaigns that must adhere to an expenditure limit, should be aware of the amount of their debts and obligations when they are incurred. Campaign officials must keep track of obligations simply to know how much money is available for future expenditures. Moreover, it is important that publicly-financed campaigns fully and accurately disclose the amounts of their debts and obligations to the public as of the date of incurrence so that the public may evaluate how the campaign is using public funds and whether the campaign is adhering to the expenditure limitations. If it is impossible to ascertain the exact amount of a debt, the regulation permits a committee to report a reasonable estimate of the debt. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). Generally, it should not be difficult for a committee to determine a reasonable estimate. Moreover, it would be more misleading for a committee to fail to disclose a debt than for it to report the available information or a reasonable estimate.

The Committees claim that the Commission has not properly calculated the amount of the debts and obligations. They assert that the Commission's Audit staff incorrectly included single debts of the GEC under $500 totaling $27,556 and aggregated debts under $500 that the Primary Committee owed to vendors totaling $56,615. The Committees contend that these debts were properly reported within 60 days after the date of incurrence. Moreover, the Committees contend that the total amount should not include invoices that were paid in the same reporting period as the Committees received the invoices.

Again, the date of incurrence, not the date that the Committees received the invoice or issued a check authorization form, is the controlling date for reporting of the debt. 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b). With respect to their argument concerning single debts and aggregated debts under $500, the Committees have provided no documentation to support their assertions that the Commission's Audit staff incorrectly calculated these figures. Nor have they provided documentation to support their own calculations. In any event, the amount of debts under $500 that the Committees argue is involved is approximately $84,000, which is a small fraction of the total amount in violation, approximately $3,700,000.

Therefore, the Office of General Counsel recommends that the Commission find probable cause to believe that the Primary Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to disclose properly its debts and obligations totaling $1,767,548. Moreover there is probable cause to believe that the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7 by failing to report properly $1,048,190 in travel-related debts and obligations. There is further probable cause to believe that the GEC violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report properly non-travel related debts and obligations totaling $737,908. Finally there is probable cause to believe that the Compliance Committee violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to disclose properly $235,587 in debts and obligations.

III. GENERAL COUNSEL'S RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Find probable cause to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 441a(f) by accepting excessive contributions from Robert B. Holt;

2. Find probable cause to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report properly debts and obligations;

3. Find probable cause to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report properly travel-related debts and obligations;

4. Find probable cause to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8), 11 C.F.R.

§§ 104.11(b) and 9004.7 by failing to report properly travel-related debts and obligations; and

5. Find probable cause to believe that the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, violated 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) by failing to report properly debts and obligations.

Re: MURs 3664, 4170, 4171, and 4289

Dear Ms. Painter:

We received on March 18, 1997, the General Counsel's brief in the above-referenced matters under review ("MURs") concerning the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc., Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc., and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer of each (collectively, the "Committees"). As we discussed by telephone today, the Committees request a 30-day extension of time until May 2, 1997, to respond to the General Counsel's brief.

The General Counsel's brief addresses five sets of issues raised in four separate MURs that, according to the General Counsel, involve substantial sums of money and large numbers of transactions. These issues require significant time and effort to address in a responsive brief. It also appears from an initial review of the brief that the General Counsel raises new factual issues that require investigation by the Committees.

Further, Bobby Burchfield, the principal counsel to the Committees in the MURs, has previous commitments -- including an arbitration hearing beginning next week that will continue past the current response date -- that will make it extraordinarily difficult for him to devote substantial attention to this matter until mid-April.

While we are sensitive to the concern you expressed in our telephone conversation that the Commission does not grant extensions of time as a matter of course, the Committees have promptly responded to the Commission at each stage of the process and we do not make the request without due consideration. We respectfully submit that the circumstances warrant a full 30-day extension of time to respond (or, at the barest minimum, a 20-day extension) so that the Committees will have adequate time to prepare a fair response to the issues raised by the General Counsel's brief.

We appreciate your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Thomas O. Barnett

Dear Mr. Barnett:

This is in response to your letter dated March 19, 1997, requesting an additional 30 days to submit your clients' response to the General Counsel's Brief.

Considering the Federal Election Commission's responsibilities to act expeditiously in the conduct of investigations, the Office of General Counsel cannot grant your full request, but can only agree to a 20-day extension. Accordingly, the response is due by close of business on April 22, 1997.

SENSITIVE

TO: The Commission

FROM: Lawrence M. Noble
General Counsel

BY: Kim Bright-Coleman KBC
Associate General Counsel

SUBJECT: Bush-Quayle '92 Committees Request for Extension of Time - MURs 3664, 4171 and 4289

On March 13, 1997, the Office of General Counsel sent a General Counsel's Brief in Matters Under Review ("MUR") 3664, 4171 and 4289 to the Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. (the "GEC") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, the Bush-Quayle Primary Committee, Inc. (the "Primary Committee") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer, and the Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc. (the "Compliance Committee") and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer (collectively, the "Committees"). The Committees received the Brief on March 18, 1997, and their response was due in 15 days, on April 2, 1997.

On March 19, 1997, the Committees requested an extension of time of 30 days, until May 2, 1997, to respond to the General Counsel's Brief. Attachment. The reasons given for the extension request included counsel's conflicting work commitments including an arbitration hearing that would make it difficult for him to complete a response by the due date. The Committees contend that the circumstances warrant a 30-day extension of time, or "at barest minimum," a 20-day extension of time.

By letter dated March 27, 1997, this Office granted respondents a 20-day extension of time to respond to the General Counsel's Brief. The Committees provided detailed reasons that substantiate their need for an extension of time, and do not appear to be attempting to delay the enforcement process. However, given the age of these cases and the statute of limitations concerns, this Office concluded that the full 30-day extension of time requested by the Committees was not appropriate. Therefore, this Office has granted a 20-day extension of time to the Committees. The responsive brief is now due on April 22, 1997.

RESPONDENTS' OPPOSITION TO GENERAL COUNSEL'S BRIEF

On March 18, 1997, the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. (the "Primary Committee"), Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. (the "General Committee"), Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc. (the "Compliance Committee"), and J. Stanley Huckaby, as treasurer of each (collectively, the "Committees"), received the General Counsel's Brief recommending that the Commission find probable cause to believe that the Committees violated the Federal Election Campaign Act in the above-referenced MURs. By letter dated March 27, 1997, the Commission granted the Committees an extension of time until April 22, 1997, to submit a responsive brief.

The General Counsel's arguments can be grouped into two sets of issues. First, the General Counsel takes the position that the Primary Committee did not prepay the expenses of a campaign fundraiser, Mr. Robert Holt, and that, as a result, the Primary Committee received a transitory in-kind campaign contribution during the reimbursement period. Second, the General Counsel believes that the Committees did not properly report outstanding debts and obligations. In both instances, the timing of the action is the sole issue. The General Counsel confirms that the Committees fully reimbursed Mr. Holt for his expenses and that the Committees fully reported their expenditures. There has been no allegation, and of course there is no evidence, that any of the Committees intentionally violated the law.[1]

I. THE COMMISSION SHOULD TAKE NO FURTHER ACTION CONCERNING THE EXPENSE REIMBURSEMENT PROCEDURE FOR A CAMPAIGN FUNDRAISER.

The General Counsel recommends finding probable cause to believe that the Primary Committee temporarily received an in-kind contribution from Mr. Robert Holt, a campaign fundraiser, because his expenses were not paid in advance. (G.C. Br. at 5.)[2] The Primary Committee

[1] The Committees responded on November 4, 1996, to the Commission's reason-to-believe findings for these MURs and incorporate by reference those responses.

[2] The General Counsel does not identify the expenses of Mr. Holt that are the subject of the recommended probable cause finding. The Primary Committee requests that the Commission provide a statement listing each expenditure at issue and that the Primary Committee be allowed an opportunity to address the specific expenditures after receiving respectfully submits that the Commission should take no further action for two reasons.

A. Mr. Holt Was a Commercial Vendor

Commission regulations provide that:

> "[a] commercial vendor that is not a corporation may extend credit to a . . . political committee . . .[which] will not be considered a contribution . . . provided that the credit is extended in the ordinary course of the commercial vendor's business and the terms are substantially similar to the extensions of credit to nonpolitical debtors that are of similar risk and size of obligation." (11 C.F.R. § 116.3.)

The Primary Committee's reimbursement of Mr. Holt's expenses complied with this regulation.

Mr. Holt provided the Primary Committee with fundraising services similar to those he provides to a variety of political campaigns as well as charitable and other organizations. (See Holt Decl. at ¶¶ 1-4, included as Ex. A.) These services were of a kind commonly purchased by campaigns from commercial vendors.[4] Pursuant to his standard business clarification from the Commission. In the meantime, the Primary Committee is responding on the assumption that the expenses include those identified in Attachment 4 to the Interim Audit Report of the Primary Committee dated April 1, 1994.

[4] The Commission has reviewed and approved numerous instances in which political committees have obtained similar help from fundraising organizations. (See, e.g., Adv. Op. 1991-32, Fed. Election Camp. Fin. Guide (CCH) ¶ 6048 at 11,787 (1992) (creating donor list and speaking with potential practice when travelling on behalf of clients, Mr. Holt submitted an invoice for any expenses incurred in providing his services to the campaign. (Holt Decl. at ¶ 4.) The Committee promptly paid each invoice upon receipt. The Commission staff has confirmed that Mr. Holt received full reimbursement for his expenses and that the longest "advance" remained outstanding for only 47 days (G.C. Br. at 5), and was promptly paid upon submission of an invoice. This practice was no more favorable than Mr. Holt's treatment of other campaigns and non-political organizations using his fundraising and other business services.

The General Counsel does not dispute that Mr. Holt's expenses were properly reimbursed if he was a commercial vendor. Rather, the General Counsel takes the position that Mr. Holt was not a commercial vendor because he "was volunteering his services" and because he "is in the oil business, rather than a commercial vendor of fundraising services." (G.C. Br. at 5-6.) We respectfully submit that neither fact disqualifies Mr. Holt from rendering services as a commercial vendor.

First, "commercial vendors" are defined as "any persons providing goods or services to a candidate or political committee whose usual and normal business involves

9 3 0 4 3 8 7 0 3 7 2

the sale, rental, lease or provision of those goods or services." (11 C.F.R. § 116.1(c).) The regulations do not prohibit Mr. Holt, or any other individual commercial vendor, from donating his or her personal time. Indeed, the Commission has addressed numerous instances in which a "commercial" service is provided by an individual without charge. (See, e.g., Adv. Op. 1980-42, Fed. Election Camp. Fin. Guide (CCH) ¶ 5507 at 10,583 (1980) (entertainer providing free service at a concert with reimbursement for expenses); Adv. Op. 1982-4, Fed. Election Camp. Fin. Guide (CCH) ¶ 5671 at 10,880 (1982) (donation of labor for office renovation).)

The Commission has advised in an analogous context that an accounting firm providing services as an in-kind contribution may extend credit for expenses to a political committee on the same terms provided to other clients. (See Adv. Op. 1991-37, Fed. Election Camp. Fin. Guide (CCH) ¶ 6040 at 11,763, 11,766 (1991) (allowing donee campaign to be charged for expenses while receiving accounting and other consultation services as an in-kind contribution). It makes no difference in terms of benefit to the campaign whether Mr. Holt incurred the expenses as a paid consultant or as a volunteer.[4]

[4] An interpretation of the commercial vendor regulation as inapplicable to volunteers would raise serious First Amendment concerns. It would, with no adequate justification, treat an individual commercial vendor that desired to volunteer for a (continued...)

Second, the fact that Mr. Holt also is in the oil business does disqualify him from commercial vendor status. We dare say that virtually all vendors of services to political campaigns engage in businesses other than those relating to political campaigns, and nothing in the regulation defining commercial vendor requires that the "usual and normal business" be the "exclusive" business. (See 11 C.F.R. § 116.1(c).) Mr. Holt's uncontradicted declaration establishes that he regularly provides fundraising services to a variety of political and charitable organizations on the same terms provided to the Primary Committee. (See Holt Decl. at ¶ 4.)[4]

Because Mr. Holt was acting as a commercial vendor, the Primary Committee's reimbursement of his expenses conformed to Commission regulations.

campaign differently than such a vendor who was being paid. Moreover, the regulation as interpreted by the General Counsel would impose an unjustifiable burden on a campaign that accepted the service of a volunteer commercial vendor, thus restricting the campaign's First Amendment rights of speech and association.

[4] Nor does it matter whether Mr. Holt earns money through his fundraising activities. The regulation defining a commercial vendor explicitly includes individuals who "provide", but do not sell, rent, or lease, the goods or services at issue.

B. The Practice for Reimbursing Mr. Holt Provided No Significant Financial Benefit to the Primary Committee.

The Commission adopted the regulations concerning the extension of credit to campaigns:

> "out of a concern that during critical periods in a campaign when an authorized committee is experiencing financial difficulties, individuals may attempt to circumvent the contribution limitations by paying committee expenses and not expecting reimbursement for substantial periods of time." (Analysis at 4, citing Explanation and Justification for 11 C.F.R. § 116.5(b), 55 Fed Reg. 26,382-83 (June 27, 1989).)

The Primary Committee received no significant financial benefit from the process for reimbursing Mr. Holt. All of Mr. Holt's campaign-related expenses were paid by the Primary Committee promptly upon receipt of the invoice. As observed above, no expense was outstanding for more than 47 days, and most for far less. At all times until Mr. Holt resigned from the Primary Committee in July 1992, the Primary Committee had a cash balance of millions of dollars. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 5, Ex. B.) Because of the minimal average outstanding balance for Mr. Holt's expenses, the Primary Committee clearly intended to obtain no benefit from the timing of the reimbursement, and certainly obtained no such benefit.[1] Further, Mr. Holt's expenses were duly included in the

[1] The Primary Committee has recalculated the outstanding balance and concurs that the maximum outstanding balance was $12,598. This amount, however, is misleading. The typical outstanding balance was substantially less, usually less than half that amount. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 5.)

9 8 0 4 1 8 7 0 3 7 5 expenditure reports filed with the Commission. It is not plausible that the Primary Committee was seeking to "circumvent the contribution limitations" through its reimbursement procedures.

The Primary Committee respectfully submits that no violation occurred and that, even if the Commission were to conclude otherwise, the circumstances do not warrant any further action by the Commission.

II. THE COMMISSION SHOULD TAKE NO FURTHER ACTION CONCERNING THE REPORTING OF DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS.

The Committees are required to report the amount and nature of outstanding debts and obligations on a periodic basis. (See 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(8); 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(a).) Debts and obligations in the amount of $500 or less must be reported at the time payment is made or within 60 days after the obligation is incurred, whichever comes first. "A debt or obligation, including a loan, written contract, written promise, or written agreement to make an expenditure, the amount of which is over $500, shall be reported as of the date on which the debt or obligation is incurred, except [for certain recurring payments.]" (11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).)

The General Counsel recommends finding probable cause to believe that each of the Committees violated these provisions by failing to report debts and obligations "as of the date on which the debt or obligation [was] incurred." (G.C. Br. at 6 and 10.) The amounts questioned by the General Counsel are as follows:

9 8 0 4 3 8 7 0 3 7 6

Primary Committee	$1,767,548
General Committee	$1,786,098-/
Compliance Committee	$ 235,587

(G.C. Br. at 7-9.)

Although the General Counsel does not identify the specific debts and obligations included in its recommended finding, the Committees proceed on the assumption that the amounts at issue are those invoices listed on Attachment 6 to the Interim Audit Report of the Primary Committee (April 1, 1994), Attachment 2 to the Interim Audit Report of the General

1/ Of this amount, the audit staff identified only $1,052,098 in invoices that were not reported within the same period in which the audit staff inferred, albeit incorrectly, that the underlying invoices were received by the Committees. Although less than clear, it appears that the General Counsel has added approximately $734,000 in General Committee expenditures for travel on government conveyances that the General Counsel believes should have been reported regardless of whether the General Committee had received an invoice. (See G.C. Br. at 8 and Factual and Legal Analysis for MUR 4289 at 2 (September 1996).) The calculations performed by Keith Davis with respect to the General Committee address the debts and obligations identified by the audit staff and attached to the Interim Audit Report. The audit staff reviewed, but did not question, the reporting of the travel invoices that the General Counsel has added to the total.

Committee (April 1, 1994), and Attachment 3 to the Interim Audit Report of the Compliance Committee (April 1, 1994).[8]

Neither the General Counsel's Brief nor the Interim Audit Reports explain the method used to identify debts and obligations that should have been reported. The audit staff, from whose work the figures appear to be drawn, made the incorrect assumption that every invoice dated during the first three weeks or so of the month was received by the Committees during the month and should have been included in the disclosure report to the Commission for that month. The General Counsel, however, takes a different approach under which the Committees should have reported "debts as of the time of incurrence, not the date of the invoice or check authorization form, and to estimate the amount of the debt or obligation if they are unable to verify the correct amount." (G.C. Br. at 10.)[9]

[8] The Committees renew their request (made in response to the Commission's reason-to-believe finding) that the Commission provide a schedule setting forth each debt and obligation that the Commission believes should have been reported along with an explanation of why the debt or obligation was included. In addition, the Committees request an opportunity to supplement their response in light of any information provided by the Commission.

[9] As discussed in Section II.B below, the General Counsel interprets Section 104.11(b) in a manner inconsistent with past applications to other presidential campaigns, including the 1988 Bush campaign, without providing an adequate explanation for the change. (Cf. Federal Election Commission v. Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., 104 F.3d 448, 453-55 (D.C. Cir. 1997) (vacating Commission repayment determination for failure to explain a similar deviation from prior application of regulations).)

The Committees respectfully submit that the Commission should take no further action on this issue for several reasons: (i) the Committees used their best efforts to collect and process invoices and report expenditures and debts and obligations in a timely fashion; (ii) the standard proposed by the General Counsel is arbitrary and capricious; (iii) the invoices did not become "debts and obligations" within the meaning of Section 104.11(b) until after they were received and approved by the Committees, (iv) even if Section 104.11(b) does apply, the Commission has not properly calculated the debts and obligations that should have been disclosed, and (v) no civil penalty is warranted.

A. The Committees Used Their Best Efforts to Report Expenditures and Debts and Obligations.

Both Congress and the Commission have recognized that providing all information required by the statute and regulations may, at times, be impossible. Accordingly, Congress provided (and Commission regulations reiterate):

> "When the treasurer of a political committee shows that best efforts have been used to obtain, maintain, and submit the information required by this Act for the political committee, any report or any record of such committee shall be considered in compliance with this Act . . ." (2 U.S.C. §432(i).)

The Committees exercised their best efforts promptly to comply with the reporting requirements for expenditures and debts and obligations.

The Committees took extensive measures, and spent substantial resources, to address these concerns while simultaneously seeking to ensure prompt payment and reporting of campaign expenditures and, where prompt payment was not made, to report outstanding debts and obligations. For example, the Primary and General Committees assigned field personnel to travel with the candidates and pay vendors during or immediately after each event. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 6, Ex. B.) These expenditures were reported by facsimile to the Committees' headquarters and included on the next expenditure disclosure report to the Commission. (Id.)

When expenses could not be paid immediately, the Primary and General Committees' standard practice for processing and paying invoices was as follows: (i) vendors were instructed to submit all invoices to a special mailing address, which was checked daily by the national headquarters, or risk forfeiting the right to payment; (ii) if, however, the vendor did not use the special mailing address, Committee personnel were instructed immediately to forward invoices to the national headquarters; (iii) upon receipt, Committee personnel would prepare a check authorization form to confirm that each invoice was valid and, if so, submit the invoice to the Accounting Department; and (iv) upon receipt, the Accounting Department would date stamp the check authorization form and process a payment check within a few days, and often within 24 hours. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 7.)[10] The Compliance Committee followed the same procedure, with the exception that the Accounting Department did not date stamp the check authorization forms. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 7.)

The Committees established this procedure not only to ensure prompt payment and reporting of expenditures, but also to ensure that fraudulent or otherwise invalid invoices were not paid and/or reported. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 8.) A presidential campaign typically receives hundreds of thousands of dollars in invoices for expenses that either were never incurred or are not attributable to the presidential campaign. (Id.) For example, the Primary and General Committees received numerous invalid invoices from state party events for which the Committees were not responsible. (Id.)[11] The General Counsel concedes that the Committees had a "legitimate" concern regarding the proper processing, verification, and payment of expenditures (at page 10).

The Committees consistently adhered to this procedure for paying invoices. Indeed, of the Primary

[10] This procedure is identical in material respects to the procedure used by the 1988 campaign of President Bush (see Davis Decl. at ¶ 17) and by the Clinton/Gore '92 campaign committee (see Report of the Audit Division on Clinton/Gore '92 Committee and Clinton/Gore '92 General Election Compliance Fund at 27 (December 27, 1994)).

[11] The General Counsel agrees (at page 10) that concern over the receipt of "invalid or even fraudulent invoices from vendors is legitimate," but argues that the concern is limited to payment of such invoices. The reporting of invalid or fraudulent invoices, however, would undermine the goal of accurate disclosure.

Committee invoices that the audit staff identified during the post-election audit process as not reported as a debt or obligation, all but $12,893 were paid within and reported for the same reporting period in which the Accounting Department received the invoice. (Davis Decl. at ¶ 9.)[11] Similarly for the General Committee, only 5 percent of the expenditures challenged by the audit staff (or $55,653) were not paid within and reported for the same reporting period in which the Accounting Department received the invoice. (Id.) For the Compliance Committee, all but three invoices (totalling $30,386) were paid within and reported for the same reporting period in which the check authorization form was dated. (Id.)

The system was extremely successful. Overall, the Primary Committee made expenditures in excess of $38 million, and over 98 percent of those expenditures either were not questioned by the Commission or were paid within the same reporting period as the first indication that the Primary Committee had received the invoice (i.e. the date on the check authorization form). (Id. at ¶¶ 11 and 13.) For both the General and Compliance Committees, the figure is over 99 percent. (Id. at ¶¶ 9, 11, and 13.)[12] The General

[11] In the relatively few instances in which the Accounting Department was unable promptly to process an invoice, each Committee reported the debt on the next disclosure report. (Id.)

[12] Most check authorization forms have two dates. The first is the date placed on the form by campaign personnel responsible for determining the validity of the invoice. (Id. (continued...)

Counsel's assertion that the Committees "did not even attempt to estimate" certain debts and obligations (see G.C. Br. at 10) ignores the extensive efforts made to collect, process, and pay invoices so that they were reported as expenditures in the reporting period.

The reasonableness of the Committees' approach is underscored by the use of a similar system by Clinton/Gore '92 Committee and Clinton/Gore '92 General Election Compliance Fund. The Clinton campaign explained its reporting method as follows:

> "[T]he Committee's accounting staff which was responsible for entering debts and compiling the information to produce the debt schedules had no information concerning those debts until such time as the information regarding the debts was submitted to the accounting department. The Committee is somewhat mystified as to how it was supposed to know about debts prior to the time they were entered into the accounting system." (Final Audit Report at 27 (December 27, 1994).)[4]

at ¶ 17.) The second date is the date stamp placed on the form by the Accounting Department after the invoice was validated. (Id.) Although the Accounting Department date stamp is the proper basis for determining when a debt was outstanding and reportable, the figures in the text use the earlier date and demonstrate the prompt processing of the invoices by each Committee.

[4] The Committees do not know what actions the Commission may have taken with respect to the Clinton/Gore campaign on this issue. If, however, the Commission has decided not to pursue the issue for the Clinton/Gore campaign, the Committees urge the Commission to treat the Bush-Quayle Committees consistently.

All of the Committees' substantial efforts were made in a good faith attempt to collect and report the information required by the statute and the regulations. If, in hindsight, the Commission would have preferred that the Committees establish a different system, this judgment should not distract the Commission from the extensive efforts that were made by the Committees. Nor should the Commission lose sight of the past practice, such as that approved for the 1988 Bush campaign, upon which the Committees reasonably were relying during the 1992 election cycle. Congress recognized that practical difficulties would arise and sought through the "best efforts" provision to give credit to political committees striving in good faith to comply with the federal election laws. We respectfully submit that the Commission should apply the "best efforts" provision as it was intended and take no further action in this regard.[15]

B. The Standard Proposed by the General Counsel Is Arbitrary and Capricious.

The General Counsel takes the position that the Committees "must report debts as of the time of incurrence, not the date of the invoice or check authorization form, and to estimate the amount of the debt or obligation if they are

[15] A decision to take no further action would be consistent with the Commission's treatment of other alleged violations of the requirement to report debts and obligations cited in the General Counsel's brief (at p. 12 n.8). In MURs 2706 and 3494, for example, the Commission took no further action after making a reason-to-believe finding.

0 3 0 4 2 8 7 0 5 3 4

unable to verify the correct amount." (G.C. Br. at 10.) Put simply, no campaign, and especially not a presidential campaign, could meet this standard. Presidential campaigns spend millions of dollars in a matter of months. The General Committee, for example, expended over $50 million in just three months. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 15.) These expenditures were "incurred" in locations spread across the country by hundreds of field personnel in thousands of transactions. (Id. at ¶ 14.) It is simply not possible for a political committee to know -- or to estimate -- the expenditures at the time each is incurred.[11]

The Commission should reject the interpretation proposed by the General Counsel for at least two reasons.

First, to our knowledge, the Commission has never applied the standard in the strict form posited by the General Counsel. Keith Davis confirms that the Commission has never in his 17 years of experience required any campaign with which he has been involved to report each and every debt and obligation over $500 as of the time each was incurred, regardless of whether an invoice had been received. (Davis Decl. at ¶ 16.) Rather, both before and after the 1992

[11] The General Counsel suggests that presidential committees can reasonably estimate expenditures at any time because they must "be aware of the amount of their debts and obligations when they are incurred" so as to stay within the overall expenditure limit. (G.C. Br. at 13.) The expenditure limit may require political committees to establish overall budgets, but committees do not, and cannot, track specific debts in all amounts over $500 as they are "incurred."

election cycle, the Commission has accepted reasonable efforts to report debts and obligations as soon as the accounting department in the campaign became aware of them. (Id.)

Taking the specific example of travel on Air Force I and Air Force II, in each of the four presidential elections between 1976 and 1992 at least one of the candidates used government conveyance for campaign travel. Neither the 1988 campaign of then-Vice President Bush nor, to our knowledge, any other campaign since the passage of the Federal Election Campaign Finance Act has reported estimates of unbilled costs incurred for Air Force I and Air Force II. (Id. at ¶ 17.) In 1988, President Bush's campaign experienced difficulties obtaining invoices from U.S. government employees similar to those experienced by the Committees in 1992. (Id.) The 1988 Bush campaign -- like the 1992 campaign -- did not report such expenditures until after the accounting department received invoices. (Id.) Because many of the invoices were not received until weeks or months after the November 1988 election, the underlying expenditures also were not reported until after the election. (Id.) Notwithstanding the full disclosure of this practice to the Commission audit staff, the Commission raised no objection. (Id.)

The General Counsel provides no justification for deviating from the Commission's prior practice.[12] To the contrary, the General Counsel confirms that the regulation in effect during the 1988 election cycle -- requiring debts and obligations to be reported "as of the time of the transaction" -- has the same meaning as the 1992 and 1996 version of the regulation -- requiring reports "as of the date on which the obligation was incurred." (See G. C. Br. at 12.) Adopting a new interpretation of the regulation without adequate justification will not withstand judicial scrutiny. As the D.C. Circuit only recently admonished:

9 8 0 4 3 8 7 0 3 3 6

> "[A]n agency changing its course must supply a reasoned analysis indicating that prior policies and standards are being deliberately changed, not casually ignored, and if an agency glosses over or

the General Counsel's Report takes the position that a computer lease entered into in May 1990 "should have been reported as a debt and an expenditure as of the date of that writing." (First General Counsel's Report at 16 (December 7, 1992) (emphasis added).) Further, notwithstanding the existence of a written contract that went unreported from May 1990 until after the general election, the Commission ultimately took no action and closed the file.

In MUR 2706, the General Counsel recommended taking no action against the campaign for failure to report an outstanding debt because the campaign "did not receive an invoice for the services conducted by . . . the last day of the . . . reporting period." (First General Counsel's Report at 6 (February 7, 1989).) The Commission accepted the recommendation and took no further action.

In MUR 2304, the campaign acknowledged that it had received invoices for approximately $150,000 of the expenditures at issue that "should have been reported as debts and were not." (General Counsel's Report at 3-4 (May 22, 1987).) The Commission entered into a conciliation agreement that resolved the alleged failure to report $225,733 in debts along with $7,050 in illegal contributions for payment of a civil penalty of only $1,500. (Conciliation Agreement for MUR 2304 (May 5, 1988).)

> swerves from prior precedents without discussion it may cross the line from the tolerably terse to the intolerably mute." Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. v. Federal Election Commission, 104 F.3d 448, 453 (D.C. Cir. 1997) (quoting Greater Boston Tel. Corp. v. FCC, 444 F.2d 841, 852 (D.C. Cir.), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 923 (1971)).

Where, as here, the Commission has approved, both before and after the 1992 election cycle, reporting practices by political committees similar to those adopted by the Committees, the Commission should take no further action with respect to this issue.

Second, adoption of the General Counsel's interpretation would impose a crippling burden on political campaigns. (Davis Decl. at ¶¶ 14-15.) The burden not only would impermissibly infringe protected political speech activities, but also would create an unacceptable risk of arbitrary or discriminatory enforcement -- a risk amply illustrated by the current proceedings. The General Counsel simultaneously has adopted two inconsistent standards in the same investigation. In the Factual and Legal Analyses for the reason-to-believe findings in MURS 4170, 4171 and 4289, the General Counsel explained that the "amount identified by the Audit Division includes only those debts where payments were not reported until reporting periods after the ones in which the [Committee] received invoices." (E.g., Factual and Legal Analysis for MUR 4289 at 2 (September 1996).) At the same time, the General Counsel has included travel-related debts regardless of whether the General Committee had received invoices. (G.C. Br. at 8.) Indeed, the audit staff presumably passed over many of the same travel invoices that the General Counsel now seeks to include.

A regulation that grants unfettered discretion to an enforcement authority will not be upheld precisely because it allows such arbitrary enforcement. In an analogous context, the Supreme Court has explained as follows:

> "[W]e have recognized recently that the more important aspect of the vagueness doctrine 'is not actual notice, but the other principal element of the doctrine -- the requirement that a legislature establish minimal guidelines to govern law enforcement.' Where the legislature fails to provide such minimal guidelines, a criminal statute may permit 'a standardless sweep [that] allows policemen, prosecutors and juries to pursue their personal predilections.'" Kolender v. Lawson, 461 U.S. 352, 358 (1983) (internal citations omitted).[18]

Here, the Committees did not know before the election (and, in view of the inconsistency between the audit staff and the General Counsel, still do not know) what standard will be applied to reporting of debts and obligations.

The Commission should reject the interpretation of the General Counsel and continue to apply Section 104.11(b) to allow political committees to report expenditures, debts, and [18] See also Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156, 162 (1972) ("ordinance is void for vagueness, both in the sense that it fails to give a person of ordinary intelligence fair notice that his contemplated conduct is forbidden by the statute and because it encourages arbitrary and erratic arrests and convictions.") (citations omitted).

obligations as they reasonably become aware of them. Any other approach would constitute an unnecessary, and impermissible, burden on protected First Amendment activities.

C. The Invoices Did Not Become "Debts and Obligations" Under Section 104.11(b) Until After Being Reviewed and Approved by the Committees.

The General Counsel recommends finding probable cause to believe that the Committees violated Section 104.11(b), which provides for the reporting of debts and obligations, "including a loan, written contract, written promise or written agreement to make an expenditure." (11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) (emphasis added).) The omission of the adjective "written" before "loan" is inconsequential, since the regulations make clear that a loan must be "evidenced by a written instrument." (See 11 C.F.R. §§ 100.7(b)(11) and 100.8(b)(12).) These examples of written debts serve to limit the scope of the regulation to similar situations. (See, e.g., Hawkeye Chemical Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 510 F.2d 322, 327 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 965 (1975).) Thus, the requirement to report outstanding "debts and obligations" under Section 104.11(b) is limited to situations in which the political committee has made a written promise or a written agreement to make an expenditure. Then, and only then, will the reporting committee have a reasonably definite basis for determining the amount of its unbilled obligation. This is the way the Commission has always applied the regulation in the past. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 16; MURs 2304, 2706, and 3494 discussed in note 17 above.)

Applying the regulation to the expenditures at issue here, there was no written promise or written agreement by the Committees until they had received and approved the invoice for payment.[19] Accordingly, these expenditures did not become reportable "debts and obligations" within the meaning of Section 104.11(b) until each invoice was received by the Accounting Department, which is indicated by the departmental date stamp on the check authorization form.[20] The Committees complied with this standard. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 9.)

The General Counsel argues that "in context ... the terms 'debts and 'obligations' include but are not limited to the specifically enumerated sources." (G.C. Br. at 11). The context of the regulation, however, indicates that it was not intended to impose such an extraordinarily burdensome

[19] The mere issuance of an invoice by a vendor, the event upon which the audit staff appears to have relied, represents no more than a request for payment by the vendor that may, or may not, reflect a promise or agreement by the recipient Committee. As discussed above, political committees receive significant numbers of invalid invoices. It does not, in any event, reflect a written promise or agreement by the Committees until it is approved.

[20] This interpretation is consistent with the actions of the Clinton/Gore campaign, which did not report outstanding invoices until received by the accounting personnel who prepared disclosure reports.

reporting requirement.[11] The General Counsel agrees that the Commission did not intend to impose any new reporting requirement when it promulgated the current version of Section 104.11(b) in 1990. (G.C. Br. at 12.) This concession is critical.

As observed above, the Commission has never consistently applied the regulation in the manner now proposed by the General Counsel. Indeed, our research has not identified a single presidential committee for which the Commission has sought to enforce an obligation to report debts and obligations as the General Counsel recommends here.

The Commission has not consistently applied the standard proposed by the General Counsel because, as discussed above, it would be impossible to meet. The Committees incurred expenses on a massive scale without a contemporaneous written agreement or written promise. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 14-15.) It would be virtually impossible for the Treasurer to monitor expenses as they are incurred by each individual. Moreover, the Treasurer would have no basis for providing any meaningful estimate of expenditures of which it was not yet aware.[11] If political committees did provide speculative estimates without any basis, the result would be an unintelligible mass of information that would be confusing and misleading. Speculative estimates also would be subject to abuse. By providing inflated "estimates," for example, committees could mask their financial status, hoarding millions of dollars for a last-minute campaign blitz. In contrast, where the committee -- as opposed to a vendor -- produces or affirms a written document promising or agreeing to make an expenditure, it can far more reasonably be charged with knowledge of, and a contemporaneous obligation to disclose, the promise or agreement.

[11] The decision in FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life, 769 F.2d 13, 17 (1st Cir. 1985), aff'd, 479 U.S. 238 (1986), cited by the General Counsel at p. 11, merely holds that the term "includes" may not limit the statutory meaning where the context indicates such limitation was not intended. As discussed in the text, the context of § 104.11(b), and the Commission's past and present application of it, indicate that no broader meaning was intended. Further, the Committees should not be subject to civil penalties for relying on a reasonable interpretation of the statute, even if the Commission adopts another interpretation. (Cf. General Electric Co. v. U.S. E.P.A., 53 F.3d 1324, 1333-34 (D.C. Cir. 1995).)

D. The General Counsel's Recommendation Is Based on Flawed Audit Staff Calculations.

The amounts in the General Counsel's brief are based on calculations performed by the audit staff that are flawed for two reasons.

1. The Audit Staff Did Not Properly Determine the Date on Which the Committees Received Invoices.

[11] The General Counsel believes that its interpretation of the regulation is not unduly burdensome because a committee can make a "reasonable estimate of debts and obligations until the correct amount can be verified." (G.C. Br. at 12.) This response does not explain what basis the Committees should have used to provide estimates of debts, many of which the Accounting Department was not even aware of at the time the General Counsel believes the debts should have been reported.

Although the General Counsel now argues that the date on which the Committees received an invoice is not relevant -- only the date of "incurrence" matters -- the calculations of the audit staff (and the Commission's reason-to-believe finding) were based on the assumption that a violation had occurred "where payments were not reported until reporting periods after the ones in which the . . . Committee received invoices." (E.g., Factual and Legal Analysis for MUR 4171 at 9 (September 1996).) These calculations are flawed because the audit staff used an improper method for inferring the date the Committees received invoices.[11]

During the post-election audit process, the Commission audit staff indicated that it was assuming that the Committees received each invoice within several days of the date on the invoice. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 19.) Contrary to the assumption of the audit staff, the date the invoice was prepared is not a reliable indication of when it was received by the Committees. For example, vendors frequently prepare invoices days in advance of posting them in the mail. (Id.) Delivery, especially from vendors outside the Washington, D.C. area, can take a week or more after posting. (Id.) Further, notwithstanding the Committees' explicit instructions to use a [11] The General Counsel has sought to avoid the problem of determining when invoices were received by interpreting the regulation to require reporting even before the receipt of the invoice. As discussed above, however, this interpretation is an insupportable standard that has never been consistently applied by the Commission.

special mailing address, sometimes an invoice was sent to the wrong address or simply not delivered. (Id.) In other instances, again contrary to instructions, the invoice was forwarded through a third party. (Id.) Moreover, also contrary to instructions, the invoice might have been sent to a field office and then had to be forwarded to the Accounting Department. (Id.)

The General Committee encountered particular difficulty in obtaining invoices for travel on government conveyances, including Air Force I and Air Force II. Despite repeated requests from the General Committee, employees of the U.S. government took substantial time preparing invoices. (Id. at ¶ 20.) Many of these invoices arrived weeks or even months after the date on the invoice. (Id.) Nor, even if it had been aware of a reporting requirement, could the General Committee have generated reasonable estimates of such expenditures. In its final audit report, the Commission acknowledged the "inherent difficulties" in determining the amounts due even after the invoice had been received; the difficulties existing before receiving the invoices were imponderably severe. (See Final Audit Report of the General Committee at 7 (December 27, 1994).)[44]

[44] As discussed above, the same problems arose in obtaining campaign-related travel invoices in 1988 for travel on Air Force II by then-Vice President Bush. (Davis Decl. at ¶ 17.) The campaign in 1988 did not report these expenditures until after receiving the invoices -- often well after the general election -- and the Commission raised no objection during the post-election audit. (Id.)

The first confirmation of the date of receipt by a Committee appears on the check authorization form that was completed at the outset of the review process. The Committees have calculated that the following amounts of the invoices at issue were paid within the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form:

Primary Committee:	$1,192,843
General Committee:	$ 848,639
Compliance Committee:	$ 205,201

(See Davis Decl. at ¶¶ 9 and 13.)[25]

2. The Audit Staff Improperly Included Debts and Obligations for Less than $500 That Were Paid and Reported in a Timely Manner.

Section 104.11(b) does not require a debt or obligation for less than $500 to be reported until "the time payment is made or no later than 60 days after such obligation is incurred, whichever comes first." (11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b).) Based on a review of the records, the General Counsel appears to have excluded many debts for less than $500, but nonetheless included approximately $84,000 in such debts that were paid within 60 days. These debts also should be excluded from the invoices at issue. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 21.)

[25] Although the Commission audit staff had full access to these invoices, the General Counsel claims that these calculations have not been adequately documented by the Committees. The supporting documents are included as Exhibits C, D, and E so that the Commission may perform its own calculations.

The General Counsel appears to have included these smaller amounts because it erroneously aggregated debts and obligations for each vendor. Section 104.11(b), however, addresses single debts or obligations and makes no provision for aggregation by vendor. The General Counsel does not dispute that these amounts should be excluded, but states that the Committees have provided insufficient documentation to support the calculations. (G.C. Br. at 13-14.) The invoices are included in Exhibits C, D, and E to this response, so the Commission staff may perform its own calculations.

After eliminating invoices paid during the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form and those for less than $500 paid in a timely manner, the disclosure of only the following amounts in debts and obligations remains at issue:

Primary Committee:	$ 518,090
General Committee:	$ 175,903
Compliance Committee:	$ 30,386

(See Davis Decl. at ¶¶ 23, 24, and 25.) The Committees respectfully submit that, at a minimum, the Commission should limit its consideration of any further action to these invoices.

E. Even If the Commission Were To Find Probable Cause to Believe that the Committees Are in Violation of the Reporting Requirement in Section 104.11(b), No Civil Penalty Is Warranted.

As a final consideration, in assessing whether to take further action, the Commission should consider those factors that a district court uses to evaluate whether a civil sanction is warranted:

> "(1) the good or bad faith of the defendants; (2) the injury to the public; (3) the defendant's ability to pay; (4) the necessity of vindicating the authority of the responsible federal agency." Federal Election Commission v. Furgatch, 869 F.2d 1256, 1258 (9th Cir. 1989).

Applying these factors to the present case indicates that no sanction is warranted.

First, the Committees undertook substantial efforts to collect and report the information at issue. Indeed, there is no suggestion that the Committees acted in anything less than utmost good faith. The Committees' practice gave them no financial benefit or advantage over the opposition; all bills were paid, and all expenditures were reported. Further, in the interest of cooperation, but without conceding error, the Committees filed "amended reports which materially disclosed the debts and obligations" identified by the Commission during the post-election audit process. (G.C. Br. at 7 and 9.)

Second, the issue concerns only the timing of disclosure, not the failure to disclose, much less acceptance of illegal contributions or exceeding of expenditure limits.

Put into perspective, the issues raised by the General Counsel do not warrant significant sanctions. To begin with, the Committees followed well-established practices reviewed and approved by the audit staff in prior audits. (See pp. 17-18 above; Davis Decl. ¶ 16-17.) Moreover, over 98 percent of the Primary Committee's total expenditures and over 99 percent of the General and Compliance Committees' expenditures either were not questioned during the post-election audit process or were reported as expenditures at least for the reporting period following the date of the invoice. (Davis Decl. at ¶ 11 and 13.) With respect to the invoices at issue, the majority were reported as expenditures during the reporting period immediately following the period in which the invoices were dated. (Id. at ¶ 13.)

It is also noteworthy that, since a substantial part of the invoices at issue were created and received after the last reporting period before the election at issue (e.g., id. at ¶ 26), there was no intent or effect of depriving voters of information pertinent to their votes.

Third, imposition of a civil fine would require the Primary and Compliance Committees to engage in expensive and burdensome fundraising activities that could cost as much as the net amount raised. (See Davis Decl. at ¶ 27-28.)

Fourth, where, as here, the Committees have filed amended reports and responded to the requests of the Commission during the post-election audit, there is no further need to vindicate the authority of the Commission. Nor, given the five years that have passed and the withdrawal of President Bush and the Committees from the political process, is there any need for prospective relief.

This case is similar in important respects to that in Federal Election Commission v. National Education Association, 457 F. Supp. 1102 (D.D.C. 1978). In NEA, the organization had adopted a "reverse check-off" system for collecting political contributions from its members. Although the court held "that reverse check-off is a per se violation of [the federal election laws]," it nonetheless ordered the NEA only to return money to members that wanted a refund and declined the Commission's request to assess a civil penalty. The court explained that:

> "[the] violation is not in the nature of intentional disregard of the rights of its dissenting members through coercion, threats, and reprisals. Rather, it is indirect infringement of those rights through excessive zeal in trying to have a more efficient collection system." Id. at 1112.

Similarly, the Committees did not intentionally disregard their obligations. To the contrary, they established an efficient accounting system that, they believed, would meet the requirements of the federal election laws without imposing an undue burden on the campaign.

As a final consideration, the Commission's treatment of the non-presidential committees in the MURs cited by the General Counsel (at p. 12 n.8) further supports a decision to take no further action in this case. In MUR 2706, the Commission took no enforcement action against the committee for the failure to report the debts and obligations at issue. The Commission also took no action on the debts and obligations issue in MUR 3494 despite the existence of a written contract in May 1990 that was not reported until after the general election. In MUR 2304, the committee was alleged to have received $7,500 in illegal contributions and to have failed to report debts and obligations of $225,000. The Commission resolved both issues in the MUR by entering into a conciliation agreement with a civil penalty of only $1,500.

It would, we respectfully submit, be disproportionate and unfair for the Commission to seek substantial civil penalties against the Committees in light of their good faith efforts to report all expenditures and debts and obligations as required by law.

For the reasons set forth above, the Commission should find that no violations have occurred and/or close the investigations.[27]

ROBERT B. HOLT
OIL PROPERTIES
MIDLAND, TEXAS 79705

STATEMENT BY ROBERT B. HOLT

1. My name is Robert B. Holt. From September 1991 through July 1992, I served as Finance Chairman of the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. During that period, I spent more than half my time fundraising for President George Bush's reelection campaign.

2. Immediately after resigning as Finance Chairman of the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc., in late July 1992, I began fundraising with the Republican National Committee for its Victory '92 effort. From late July 1992 through the election on November 3, I spent more than half my time engaged in fundraising for Victory '92.

3. I have also been involved in fundraising for George Bush's previous campaigns and for the 1989 Presidential Inaugural. For years, I have done fundraising for the Republican National Committee and for its Eagles program. Recently, I have agreed to serve as Finance Chairman for George W. Bush's campaign for Governor of Texas.

4. I conduct my fundraising activities on a volunteer basis. When the federal election laws are applicable, and consistent with my understanding of them, I always seek payment for travel and telephone expenses from the entity on whose behalf those expenses are incurred. My assistant send invoices to that entity on letterhead bearing the name "Robert B. Holt", my business name. When I receive payment of the invoices, the proceeds are deposited into my checking account, and all expenses are paid out of that checking account. This account is used for all of my business and volunteer activity. Any reimbursement for business or volunteer activity flows through this account as in a normal commercial transaction.

I DECLARE UNDER PENALTY OF PERJURY under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

EXHIBIT B

DECLARATION OF KEITH A. DAVIS

1. During the 1992 Presidential election campaign, I served as Assistant Treasurer to the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee, Inc. ("the Primary Committee"), Bush-Quayle '92 General Committee, Inc. ("the General Committee"), and Bush-Quayle '92 Compliance Committee, Inc. ("the Compliance Committee") (collectively, the "Committees"). As part of my responsibilities, I was involved with virtually every aspect of the finances of the Committees. This declaration is based upon my personal knowledge.

2. I have more than 17 years of experience working with political committees in their efforts to comply with the federal election laws and have been involved with numerous post-election audits of political committees by the Commission. In 1988, for example, I served as Assistant Treasurer to the presidential primary and general election campaign committees for then-Vice President Bush and was the principal contact with the Commission during the post-election audits. Similarly, in 1996, I served as Treasurer to one presidential campaign committee and have been involved in the post-election audits of that committee as well as several other committees.

3. Mr. Robert Holt provided fundraising services to the Primary Committee that were typical of the services that the Primary Committee, as well as other campaigns with which I have experience, purchased from commercial vendors. For example, he developed a fundraising strategy, contacted potential donors, recruited individuals to serve on the Finance Committee, gave speeches, and provided advice to the candidates. Mr. Holt devoted over half of his time to fundraising responsibilities during much of the 1992 primary campaign. It was the Primary Committee's understanding that Mr. Holt provided these services in the same manner he has provided similar services to other political and charitable organizations. For example, Mr. Holt provided similar services on the same basis to President Bush's 1988 primary campaign.

4. Although he chose to volunteer his time, Mr. Holt submitted invoices to the Primary Committee for his expenses as did other vendors. The Primary Committee paid and reported each invoice on a timely basis. Accordingly, the Primary Committee treated Mr. Holt as a commercial vendor, notwithstanding his choice to volunteer his time.

5. The Primary Committee had a cash balance of millions of dollars from the beginning of the primary campaign through early August 1992. The Commission states in its Analysis that the maximum outstanding balance owed to Mr. Holt was $12,598. The average outstanding balance was much lower, usually less than half that amount. Even at its maximum balance, and considering the period it was outstanding, this balance provided no, or at most a negligible, financial benefit to the Primary Committee.

6. Each of the Committees took extensive measures, and spent substantial resources, to ensure prompt payment and reporting of campaign expenditures and, where prompt payment was not made, to report outstanding debts and obligations. For example, the Primary and General Committees assigned field personnel to travel with the candidates and pay vendors during or immediately after each event. These expenditures were reported daily by facsimile to the Committees' national headquarters and included on the next expenditure disclosure report to the Commission. The purpose and intent of the Committees throughout the process was to report in good faith all expenditures and debts and obligations in the manner and time required by the statute and regulations.

7. Where expenses could not be paid immediately, the Primary and General Committees' standard practice for processing and paying invoices was as follows: (i) vendors were instructed to use a special mailing address, which was checked daily by the national headquarters, or risk forfeiting the right to payment; (ii) if, however, the vendor did not use the special mailing address, Committee personnel were instructed to forward invoices immediately to the national headquarters; (iii) upon receipt, Committee personnel would complete a check authorization form and submit the invoices, if approved, to the Accounting Department; and (iv) upon receipt, the Accounting Department would date stamp the invoice and process a payment check within a few days, and often within 24 hours. The Compliance Committee followed the same procedure, with the exception that its Accounting Department did not place a date stamp on the check authorization forms.

8. The Committees established this procedure not only to ensure prompt payment and reporting of expenditures, but also to ensure that fraudulent or otherwise invalid invoices were not paid and/or reported. A presidential campaign typically receives hundreds of thousands of dollars in invoices for expenses that either were never incurred or were not attributable to the presidential campaign. For example, the Primary and General Committees received numerous invalid invoices from state party events for which the Committees were not responsible. Reporting invalid invoices requires amendments to reports, which involves considerable administrative time and expense. Moreover, a report that includes invoices ultimately determined to be invalid is as misleading as a report that omits valid invoices.

9. The Committees consistently adhered to their procedure for paying invoices. Of the invoices identified by the audit staff during the post-election audit process as not timely reported as debts or obligations by the Committees, the vast majority were paid within the same reporting period in which the Accounting Department received the invoice (as indicated by the date stamp on the check authorization form) and were reported on the expenditure disclosure report for that period. The amounts for the Primary and General Committees are set forth below:

Committee	Invoices at Issue	Amount Paid in Same Period as Date Stamp
Primary	$1,767,548	$1,754,655
General	$1,052,098	$ 996,445

For the Compliance Committee, $205,201 of the $235,587 in invoices questioned by the Commission were paid within the same reporting period as the date indicated by the individual filling out the check authorization form. The remaining invoices amount to only $12,893 for the Primary Committee, $55,653 for the General Committee, and $30,386 for the Compliance Committee. These calculations (and all other calculations concerning the reporting of debts and obligations set forth herein) were performed by me or under my supervision using the documents included in Exhibits C, D, and E to the Committees' responsive brief.

10. In the relatively few instances in which the Accounting Department was unable promptly to process an invoice, the Committees reported the debt on the disclosure report for that period.

11. This system was extremely successful. Of the $38,870,000 in total expenditures by the Primary Committee and $5,042,000 by the Compliance Committee, the Commission has raised a question about the timing of the disclosure of less than 5 percent. Of the $55,239,000 in total expenditures by the General Committee, the Commission has raised a question about the timing of the disclosure of only 2 percent.

12. With respect to the invoices at issue, the Committees were successful in quickly processing, paying, and reporting the expenditures. There are three dates that track the progress of the invoices for the Primary and General Committees: (i) the date of the invoice, which presumably indicates when it was prepared by the vendor (although not necessarily the date it was sent to the Committee), (ii) the date on which the check authorization form was first filled out, which is the best indicator of the date on which it was received by the national headquarters, and (iii) the date stamp of the Accounting Department, which indicates when the invoice was approved by the Committee. The invoices for the Compliance Committee have only the first two dates.

13. As discussed above, virtually all of the invoices at issue were paid during the same reporting period as the Accounting Department date stamp. The large majority -- $1,192,843 for the Primary Committee and $848,639 for the General Committee -- was paid within the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form. Similarly, a majority -- $1,313,457 for the Primary Committee and $623,299 for the General Committee -- was paid by the end of the reporting period immediately following the date of the invoice.

14. The Committees did not understand the 1990 amendment to the regulations to require a change to this longstanding accounting practice. Rather, the rules appeared to apply to "written" agreements that set forth a predetermined amount to be paid on a definite date, and to be applicable to committees settling debts for less than full value. All or virtually all of the debts and obligations at issue here were incurred without the benefit of such a written contract. Even to attempt to keep track of the thousands of expenditures made by hundreds of campaign personnel working across the country at any given time would create an administrative nightmare that would cripple a campaign.

15. The Primary Committee made over $38 million in expenditures in less than a year. The General Committee made over $50 million in expenditures in less than three months. It would be virtually impossible for the Treasurer to monitor expenses as they are incurred by each individual. Further, the Committees would have had no basis for estimating debts and obligations at the time they were incurred. To attempt to provide speculative estimates without any basis would not provide the Commission or the public with meaningful information and, if anything, would be highly misleading.

16. Based on my experience in working with campaign finance issues for political committees and with Commission audits of committee finances from 1980 through and including the 1996 election cycle, no political committee has ever been required to estimate outstanding debts and obligations at the time of their incurrence as proposed by the General Counsel. Rather, political committees routinely establish procedures for collecting, processing, paying, and reporting expenditures and outstanding debts similar to the procedures adopted by the Committees, and the Commission previously has accepted such procedures during its post-election audits.

17. To my personal knowledge, President Bush's 1988 primary and general campaign committees did not report debts and obligations for which invoices had not yet been received by their accounting departments. The 1988 campaign of President Bush -- like the 1992 campaign -- experienced difficulty in obtaining invoices concerning travel on government conveyances, including Air Force II. Many of these invoices were not received by the campaign -- and thus were not reported -- until weeks or months after the general election. Although the Commission auditors of the 1988 committees were fully aware of this practice, they raised no question concerning this method of reporting.

18. Consistent with this general practice, the Committees in 1992 did not treat invoices as outstanding debts and obligations within the meaning of 11 C.F.R. § 104.11(b) until they were received by the Accounting Department. Nevertheless, and without conceding error, the Committees submitted amended reports as requested by the Commission.

19. The Commission audit staff indicated during the post-election audits that it used the date of the invoices to infer the date on which they were received by the Committees. However, the date an invoice was prepared is not a proper indication of when it was received by the respective Committee. For example, vendors frequently prepare invoices days in advance of posting them in the mail. Delivery, especially from vendors outside the Washington, D.C. area, can take a week or more after posting. I specifically recall that many invoices were dated weeks or even months before the date on which they were delivered to the Committees. Further, sometimes an invoice was sent to the wrong address or simply not delivered. In other instances, the invoice was forwarded through a third party. Moreover, the invoice might have been sent to a field office before being forwarded to the Accounting Department.

20. The General Committee experienced particular difficulties in obtaining invoices for expenses related to travel on government conveyances, including Air Force I and Air Force II. John Allen, Budget Liaison Director for Presidential Travel for the General Committee, made repeated requests for the invoices. Despite his efforts, employees of the United States government took substantial time in preparing invoices, and the General Committee often received these invoices weeks or months after the date on the invoice. As the Commission has previously recognized, the General Committee did not, and could not, know the amount of the invoices prior to their receipt.

21. The Commission appears to have adopted an erratic approach with respect to the reporting of outstanding debts and obligations of less than $500. With respect to the Primary Committee, the Commission appears to have typically excluded single debts for less than $500 from the calculation of the $1,767,548 at issue in the reporting of debts and obligations. Nonetheless, the total includes $56,615 in single debts for less than $500 that were paid within 60 days as required by Section 104.11(b). With respect to the General Committee, the Commission typically appears to have included single debts for less than $500 in its calculation of the amount at issue. The total of such debts included by the Commission for the General Committee is $27,556.

22. Some national vendors, such as AT&T, provided services to numerous Primary and General Committee field offices and issued separate invoices from the vendor's own regional offices.

23. After eliminating the invoices paid during the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form as well as the expenses for less than $500 paid in a timely manner, the remaining invoices at issue for the Primary Committee amount to $518,090.

24. After eliminating the invoices paid during the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form as well as the expenses for less than $500 paid in a timely manner, the remaining invoices at issue for the General Committee amount to $175,903.

25. After eliminating the invoices paid during the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form, the remaining invoices at issue for the Compliance Committee amount to $30,386.

26. Of the $203,459 in General Committee invoices that were not paid during the same reporting period as the date on the check authorization form, over 60 percent -- $128,099 -- are dated after October 14, 1992 and would not have been required to be disclosed prior to the general election even if the date on the invoice triggered a reporting requirement. Indeed, half of all of the General Committee invoices at issue -- $507,387 -- are dated after the last period for which reports were due to the Commission prior to the general election.

27. The Committees do not have funds available to pay any significant civil penalty. In order to raise such funds, the Primary and Compliance Committees would have to engage in time consuming and burdensome fundraising activities. (The General Committee is prohibited from engaging in any fundraising.) The only realistic method for raising any substantial funds would be a direct mail appeal to the Primary and Compliance Committee contributor lists.

28. The cost of raising funds during an election campaign typically amounts to about one third of the funds raised. To raise funds five years after an election, however, the cost would be substantially greater. Since many of the contributors on the Committees' mailing lists have already contributed substantial amounts to those Committees, raising additional funds would be more difficult and less reliable than during the 1992 Presidential election campaign. The difficulty in raising funds now for the 1992 campaign is increased further by the extensive fundraising efforts made by the 10 Republicans that sought the nomination for the 1996 Presidential election. As a result of these factors, I estimate that raising the funds necessary to pay a civil penalty could easily cost as much a the funds raised. These costs do not include the time and effort by volunteers helping with the fundraising efforts.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed in Alexandria, Virginia, on April 22, 1997.

To: Evelyn Griswold

From: Douglas A. Knoche

Subject: over time charges for the Bush/Quayle package

Date: March 26, 1992

Dear Evelyn,

The overtime charges in question was a result of adding shifts in all departments to meet the required mail date. We also needed to ask for help by outside suppliers.

If you recall, the original schedule requested could not be accomplish. We where trying to meet this original drop dates, but due to the lateness of the tapes and artwork this became difficult. The date was reschedule, giving us less time to meet the new required mail date. The shortness of time is only one factor that would force an overtime charge. A second factor would be that because of all the delays and the uncertainty as to when the materials and tapes would arrive.

Overtime is determine by how many over time hours required to make a mail date. As I have mentioned, this job required us to add a Saturday night shift and two Sunday shifts to accomplish the desired date. At one point before several days where added to the schedule we estimated that the overtime charges could reach as high as $40,000.00. We feared, at one point, the entire job might be all overtime. We thought we would have to ask many of our employees along with outside vender employees to work 16 hour shifts at time and a half. Fortunate this was not the case. However, we did work many hours overtime and should have billed you $23,458.00. Instead you and I negotiated this amount down to $18,000.00.

I feel this should explain what goes into determining overtime charges. It is CCA desire to lessen as much overtime as possible.

RE: DIDION TRAVEL--INVOICES #3917 AND #19005
DATE: JULY 6, 1992

The credit for this invoice was accepted on check #13967 dated June 16, 1992 in the amount of -$994.00. This invoice must be processed. Because the incorrect invoice number was referenced for the credit (19005 instead of 3917), the invoice number for this transaction will be 19005-01.
