Dear Ms. Mathews:

This refers to your letter dated February 1, 2013, requesting an advisory opinion regarding whether 1787 National Committee, Inc. (“1787”) is a “national committee” of a political party for purposes of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended (“the Act”), and Commission regulations. The Commission concludes that 1787 is not a national committee of a political party.

Background

The facts presented in this advisory opinion are based on your letter (“AOR”), which attached 1787’s Bylaws.

1787 was incorporated on January 17, 2013, and registered with the Commission as a nonconnected political committee on January 24, 2013. The purpose of 1787 is to “plan the nominating convention, promote candidates, adopt the party platform and rules, and fundraise for the 1787 Party.” Bylaws of the 1787 National Committee, Inc., Art. 1, Sec. 1.1. The 1787 Party is “on track to achieve ballot access for at least twelve congressional candidates in ten states for the 2014 election,” but the 1787 Party has not yet placed any Federal candidates on any ballot. (See AOR at 3, 5.)

Question Presented

Is 1787 the national committee of a political party within the meaning of the Act and Commission regulations?
Legal Analysis and Conclusion

No, 1787 is not the national committee of a political party within the meaning of the Act and Commission regulations.

The Act defines a “national committee” as “the organization which, by virtue of the bylaws of a political party, is responsible for the day-to-day operation of such political party at the national level, as determined by the Commission.”\(^1\) 2 U.S.C. 431(14); see also 11 C.F.R. 100.13. Thus, at the threshold, the Commission must first determine whether the requestor is responsible for the operation of a “political party” within the meaning of the Act. See, e.g., Advisory Opinion 1995-16 (U.S. Taxpayers Party) at 2; Advisory Opinion 1980-03 (Citizens Committee) at 2.

The Act defines a “political party” as an “organization which nominates a candidate for election to any Federal office whose name appears on the election ballot as the candidate of such . . . organization.” 2 U.S.C. 431(16). Accordingly, to qualify for political party status, an organization must place a Federal candidate on the ballot under the organization’s name.

The mere intention to place candidates on the ballot does not suffice. In Advisory Opinion 1980-03 (Citizens Committee), the Citizens Party intended to nominate candidates for Federal office, but “the nominating process [was] in the early stages of planning and no individuals ha[d] been nominated as candidates of the Citizens Party in

\(^1\) For the 2013-14 election cycle, a national committee of a political party may accept contributions of up to $34,200 per year from individuals, whereas such contributions to a nonconnected committee are limited to $5,000 per year. See 2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)(B)-(C), 441a(c)(1)(B); 11 C.F.R. 110.1(c)(1), (d); see also http://www.fec.gov/press/press2013/20133001_2013-14ContributionLimits.shtml any forthcoming or previous Federal election.” Advisory Opinion 1980-03 (Citizens Committee) at 2. The Commission determined that until such time as the [Citizens Party] has received verification from any State election official that a Citizens Party candidate for a Federal office has satisfied ballot access requirements in that State and that the candidate’s name will appear on the election ballot as the Citizens Party candidate, the Citizens Party does not qualify as a “political party” under the Act.

Id. The Commission has never recognized an organization as a political party without the organization first placing identified Federal candidates on the ballot.2 An organization need only place a single Federal candidate on a ballot to qualify as a political party, 2 U.S.C. 431(16), but the 1787 Party has not yet placed any candidates for Federal office on any ballot. Thus, the 1787 Party does not qualify as a “political party” under the Act and Commission regulations. Accordingly, 1787 is not the national committee of a political party.3

2 See, e.g., Advisory Opinion 1995-16 (U.S. Taxpayers Party) (organization qualified as political party after its presidential candidate had achieved ballot access in several states under designation of political parties affiliated with requestor); Advisory Opinion 1992-44 (U.S. Taxpayers Party) (same); Advisory Opinion 1992-30 (Natural Law Party) (organization qualified as political party after it had placed 31 congressional candidates on ballot in 14 states, and its designated presidential candidate had achieved ballot access in 13 states); Advisory Opinion 1988-45 (Populist Party) (organization qualified as political party after its presidential candidate appeared on nine states’ ballots under organization’s name); Advisory Opinion 1980-96 (Anderson) (State organizations qualified as political parties after they had obtained ballot positions for specific presidential candidate).

3 The Commission would reach the same conclusion if the 1787 Party had demonstrated that it is a “political party.” In Advisory Opinion 1992-44 n.7 (U.S. Taxpayers Party), the Commission noted that it determines national committee status based not on the party’s “planned” activities but on its ongoing or completed party building activities and successful ballot access efforts. Although 1787 describes many future party building activities it intends to undertake, its activities to date appear to have been limited to those steps necessary for its initial formation, such as adopting by-laws, recruiting members, and creating the shell of a website. Accordingly, 1787 has not at present “engaged in sufficient activity on a national level for the committee to qualify as a national committee.” Advisory Opinion 1988-45 (Populist Party); see also Advisory Opinion 1992-30 (Natural Law Party), Advisory Opinion 1992-44 (U.S. Taxpayers Party).
