FEC BROCHURE SERIES EXPLAINS ELECTION LAW

WASHINGTON -- Public availability of a series of 10 brochures discussing specific areas of the Federal Election Campaign Act has been announced by the Federal Election Commission. Each brochure deals with a topic which has attracted the interest of the general public or of groups which are involved with election law.

Written and designed for readability and clarity, the brochures parallel and expand on other Commission publications. Most of the topics are aimed at helping the general public better understand the FEC and Federal election laws. Others seek to reach out to individuals and groups involved in political activities, such as candidates, party committees, and political action committees.

Among the subjects included are: Volunteer Activity; Local Party Activity; Candidate Registration; Using FEC Campaign Finance Information; Contributions; Independent Expenditures; Corporate and Labor Communications; Corporate and Labor Facilities; Political Ads and Solicitations; and Advisory Opinions.

Copies of the brochures may be obtained from the Commission's Office of Public Communications, (202) 523-4068, or the Public Records Office, (202) 523-4181. The Commission's toll free number is (800) 424-9530.
