FEC REPORTS ON POLITICAL PARTY ACTIVITY FOR 1993-94

WASHINGTON -- Both major parties made substantial efforts to assist Congressional candidates during the 1993-94 election cycle, according to a two-year study just released by the Federal Election Commission. From January 1, 1993, through December 31, 1994, national, state, and local Republican party committees reported federal receipts of $245.6 million and disbursements of $234.7 million during 1993-94. While down about 8% from 1992 levels, these figures represent a 19% increase in fundraising and 10% increase in spending since 1990, the last Congressional election cycle.

Democratic committees raised $139.1 million and spent $137.8 million during 1993-94. While these totals are about 20% lower than the presidential cycle in 1992, they represent increases of 62% in receipts and 52% in disbursements from the last comparable cycle in 1990.

The two parties achieved virtual parity in direct support of Congressional candidates during 1993-94, with Republican committees contributing $2.8 million and spending $20.4 million on behalf of House and Senate Campaigns. Democratic contributions totaled $2.2 million while coordinated expenditures totaled $21.1 million.*

The following chart provides a comparison of political party activity during the past nine election cycles:

| Party | | 1993-94 | 1991-92 | 1989-90 | 1987-88 | 1985-86 | 1983-84 | 1981-82 | 1979-80 | 1977-78 |

Democratic party committees ended the 1994 election cycle with cash on hand of $3.8 million and debts of $10 million. This represented a decline of 44% in cash balances and an increase of 108% in debts outstanding from 1992. Republican committees had cash balances of $4.6 million (down 10% from the prior cycle) and debts of $5.9 million (56% lower than their outstanding debts at the end of 1992).

Following the pattern of past election cycles, contributions from individuals accounted for $212 million (86%) of Republican party receipts. Individuals gave $94.7 million to Democratic party committees, representing 68% of their receipts. PAC support continued to favor Democrats, with $12.8 million (9% of receipts) given to Democratic committees versus $4.8 million (2% of receipts) contributed to Republican committees. However, PAC contributions to Democratic party committees declined from the $15.1 million given in 1992, while PAC support of Republican committees increased slightly, from $4.5 million.

The 1993-94 election cycle was the second in which non-federal receipts of national party committees (soft money) were reported to the FEC. Republican national party organizations raised $59.4 million in non-federal funds, up 15% from 1992, and spent $55.4 million, up 11%, while Democratic national party organizations raised $46.9 million, up 27%, and spent $47.8 million, 36% more than in 1992.

Soft money is used to pay a portion of the overhead expenses of the national party organizations. A portion of it is also transferred to state and local party committees for use in state and local elections, while some is contributed directly to candidates in non-federal races. Some is used for issue advocacy and generic party advertising. It also supports construction and maintenance of national party headquarters.

Attached to this release are various charts, graphs and tables describing overall political party financial activities during the cycle:

- Statistical details of 1993-94 political party activity;
- Details of contributions and coordinated expenditures by candidate status, i.e. incumbent, challenger and open-seat;
- Comparable summary statistics for six election cycles;
- Summary information on 1993-94 non-federal activity;
- Pie charts showing categories of receipts for federal and non-federal accounts of RNC and DNC;
- Transfers from the national committees' federal and non-federal accounts to each state;
- Party contributions and coordinated expenditures for each 1994 general election candidate;

The FEC's final Report on 1993-94 financial activity of political party committees will be issued later this year.

[*Note: Coordinated expenditures are monies spent by national and state party committees on general election nominees and are in addition to contributions. Under the election law, these expenditures, like contributions, are limited in amount. Party committees may work with candidates' campaigns to determine how the monies should be spent, but the campaigns do not receive the funds. Expenditures are reported directly by the party committees on special schedules on their financial disclosure reports.]
