DISCLOSURE REPORTS OF NATIONAL POLITICAL PARTY FUNDRAISING SHOW REPUBLICAN COFFERS UP 43 PERCENT OVER LAST CYCLE

WASHINGTON -- National committees of the Republican Party raised over $52 million for federal elections and spent $43.6 million from their federal accounts in 1995's first six months, compared to the Democrats' $20.4 million in receipts and $19.6 million in expenditures. These figures are obtained from Federal Election Commission analyses of disclosure reports.

Federal accounts of the two parties' National Committees, Senatorial Campaign Committees, and Congressional Campaign Committees show the Republican Party increased receipts by 43 percent over the same period in the 1993-94 election cycle, while Democratic Party committees registered only a 10 percent increase in receipts over that period. Fundraising by the RNC and NRCC for the first six months of the present election cycle indicates a reversal of a downward trend present since the 1985-86 cycle. The NRCC reported receipts of $13.4 million, up from $4.6 million in 1993-94, while the RNC totalled $24.8 million, up from $16.8 million the previous cycle (attached chart).

Individuals constituted the bulk of the receipts for both parties. Republicans reported $48.1 million from individuals and $2.5 million from PACs. Democrats reported $16.1 million from individuals and $3.6 million from PACs. Democratic federal committees finished the six-month period with $2.4 million cash on hand, but listed $2.7 million in debts. Republican totals were $9.4 million cash on hand and $1.9 million in debts.

The Republicans outraised Democrats by $6 million in non-federal, or "soft money" activity. Soft money is raised outside the limitations and prohibitions of the Federal Election Campaign Act, and must be deposited in separate non-federal accounts, not to be used in connection with federal elections. Republican committees raised $16.8 million in soft money for the first six months of this year, while Democratic committees raised $10.8 million. For the same reporting period in 1993, Democrats raised $8.6 million in soft money, with Republicans reporting $6.5 million.

Charts attached to this release provide summary data for the financial activities of the Republican and Democratic national party committees during the first six months of the 1995-96 election cycle and comparisons for the same period in the previous five election cycles. Comparable data on non-federal party activity is available for only the previous two cycles. The FEC began requiring national party committees to disclose their non-federal accounts in January 1991.
