Dear Mr. Jordan·

As per your letter of August 9, 2000, I am taking valuable time from my busy schedule to answer the ridiculous charges filed by the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. First of all, I should state my position and philosophy so you may better understand my refuting to the charges. I've served over 36 years in Government service under both parties. I was schooled to not become involved in politics. I am first generation American who was taught by immigrant parents to respect the law, to exercise the right to vote, but not to influence others on politics. Some months ago, I received a solicitation from the above accusers for donations and I wrote them a letter stating my philosophy and in particular, my distrust of the "Pinoccio" in the White House. I have a very strong inclination that this is the reason for the accusation. In your analysis of this matter, I wish you would take into account my non-political views, my past training, not having the vaguest idea of who Rich Rodriguez is or where the 20th District is. I unequivocally deny the charge of illegal contributions and strongly believe the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee is strictly motivated as vigilantes who give the Campaign Committee a deserved slimy reputation.

In spite of the vigilante committee and moral decay in our representatives, I remain optimistic about our country. As specified in the Freedom of Information Act, I formally request that the reported evidence of my donation be furnished to me by return mail

Sincerely,

R. E. De Leon, President
