MUR No. 6518

COMPLAINT

1. Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington ("CREW") and Melanie Sloan bring this complaint before the Federal Election Commission ("FEC") seeking an immediate investigation and enforcement action against Newton L. Gingrich, Callista Gingrich, Newt 2012, Inc., and Gingrich Productions, Inc. for direct and serious violations of the Federal Election Campaign Act ("FECA").

Complainants

2. Complainant CREW is a non-profit corporation, organized under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. CREW is committed to protecting the right of citizens to be informed about the activities of government officials and to ensuring the integrity of government officials. CREW is dedicated to empowering citizens to have an influential voice in government decisions and in the governmental decision-making process. CREW uses a combination of research, litigation, and advocacy to advance its mission.

3. In furtherance of its mission, CREW seeks to expose unethical and illegal conduct of those involved in government. One way CREW does this is by educating citizens regarding the integrity of the electoral process and our system of government. Toward this end, CREW monitors the campaign finance activities of those who run for federal office and publicizes those who violate federal campaign finance laws. Through its website, press releases and other methods of distribution, CREW also files complaints with the FEC when it discovers violations of the FECA. Publicizing campaign finance violators and filing complaints with the FEC serves CREW's mission of keeping the public informed about individuals and entities that violate campaign finance laws and deterring future violations of campaign finance law.

4. In order to assess whether an individual, candidate, political committee or other regulated entity is complying with federal campaign finance law, CREW needs the information contained in receipts and disbursements reports that political committees must file pursuant to the FECA, 2 U.S.C. § 434(a)(2); 11 C.F.R. § 104.1. CREW is hindered in its programmatic activity when an individual, candidate, political committee or other regulated entity fails to disclose campaign finance information in reports of receipts and disbursements required by the FECA.

5. CREW relies on the FEC's proper administration of the FECA's reporting requirements because the FECA-mandated reports of receipts and disbursements are the only source of information CREW can use to determine if a candidate, political committee or other regulated entity is complying with the FECA. The proper administration of the FECA's reporting requirements includes mandating that all reports of receipts and disbursements required by the FECA are properly and timely filed with the FEC. CREW is hindered in its programmatic activity when the FEC fails to properly administer the FECA's reporting requirements.

6. Complainant Melanie Sloan is the executive director of Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington, a citizen of the United States, and a registered voter and resident of the District of Columbia. As a registered voter, Ms. Sloan is entitled to receive information contained in reports of receipts and disbursements required by the FECA, 2 U.S.C. §

434(a)(2); 11 C.F.R. § 104.1. Ms. Sloan is harmed when a candidate, political committee or other regulated entity fails to report campaign finance activity as required by the FECA. See FEC v. Akins, 524 U.S. 11, 19 (1998), quoting Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 66-67 (1976) (political committees must disclose contributors and disbursements to help voters understand who provides which candidates with financial support). Ms. Sloan is further harmed when the FEC fails to properly administer the FECA's reporting requirements, limiting their ability to review campaign finance information.

Respondents

7. Newton L. Gingrich (hereinafter "Newt Gingrich") is a candidate for the Republican nomination to be President of the United States and the former Chief Executive Officer of Gingrich Productions, Inc.

8. Callista Gingrich is the wife of Newt Gingrich and the current Chief Executive Officer of Gingrich Productions, Inc.

9. Newt 2012, Inc. is a Georgia non-profit corporation and the principal campaign committee of Newt Gingrich.

10. Lisa Lisker is the Treasurer of Newt 2012, Inc.

11. Gingrich Productions, Inc. is a Georgia for-profit corporation that sells books authored by Newt and Callista Gingrich.

Factual Allegations

12. During the first week of March 2011, Newt Gingrich began accepting contributions to test the waters for a potential presidential campaign. See, e.g., Newt 2012, 2011 July 15th Quarterly Report at 15 (attached as Exhibit 1).

13. On April 19, 2011, Gingrich Holdings, Inc. filed its 2011 annual corporate registration with the Office of the Secretary of State of Georgia indicating that Newt Gingrich was the Chief Executive Officer of Gingrich Holdings, Inc. (attached as Exhibit 2).

14. On May 10, 2011, Gingrich Holdings, Inc. changed its name to Gingrich Productions, Inc. The Articles of Amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of Gingrich Holdings, Inc. were signed by Callista Gingrich in her new capacity as Chief Executive Officer of Gingrich Productions (attached as Exhibit 3).

15. On May 11, 2011, Newt 2012, Inc. was incorporated as a Georgia non-profit corporation. See Articles of Incorporation of Newt 2012, Inc. (attached as Exhibit 4).

16. On May 12, 2011, Newt 2012, Inc. filed its 2011 annual corporate registration with the Office of the Secretary of State of Georgia (attached as Exhibit 5).

17. On May 13, 2011, Newt Gingrich filed a Statement of Candidacy to seek the office of President of the United States with the Federal Election Commission (attached as Exhibit 6).

18. On May 13, 2011, Newt 2012, Inc. filed a Statement of Organization with the Federal Election Commission indicating that it was the principal campaign committee of Newt Gingrich (attached as Exhibit 7).

19. On July 14, 2011, Newt Gingrich filed a Public Financial Disclosure Report with the Federal Election Commission (attached as Exhibit 8). The Public Financial Disclosure Report discloses, among other things, the assets owned by Newt Gingrich during the period beginning on January 1, 2010 and ending on July 14, 2011, the date the report was filed with the Commission. and the business mingled to manage the crowd and the candidate. . . . The extent to which Gingrich Productions helps Gingrich for President [i.e., Newt 2012, Inc.] – and vice versa – is obvious on the road. The Gingriches collect signatures of people waiting to have their books signed, and those names are funneled into his political mailing list.” Id. (emphasis added).¹ Accordingly, it appears that Gingrich Productions may be providing a valuable benefit to Newt 2012, Inc. by collecting contact information from potential donors and providing that information to Newt 2012, Inc.

23. The New York Times has also reported on the dual purpose events staged by Newt 2012, Inc. and Gingrich Productions. See Trip Gabriel, Gingrich, Ahead in Polls, Is Still Selling Books, New York Times (Dec. 8, 2011) (attached as Exhibit 11). It appears that many individuals purchasing books at these dual purpose events are under the impression that they are making a contribution to Newt 2012, Inc. when they do so. “Although some buyers are under the impression that sales of their books, like T-shirts or coffee mugs, support the campaign, the proceeds go to the Gingriches personally, even as the campaign is scrambling to pay off debt and raise enough money to run an ambitious national operation.” Id.

COUNT I

24. FECA and FEC regulations prohibit corporations from making contributions in connection with any federal election. 2 U.S.C. § 441b(a) and 11 C.F.R. § 114.2(a). This prohibition includes the provision of any goods or services without charge or at a charge that is less than the usual and normal charge for such goods and services. “Examples of such goods or services include, but are not limited to: Securities, facilities, equipment, supplies, personnel, advertising services, membership lists, and mailing lists." 11 C.F.R. § 100.52(d)(1). Gingrich Productions' organization of the dual purpose events involved expenditures for facilities, equipment, supplies, personnel and advertising services. The participation of Newt 2012, Inc. in these events allowed the campaign committee to take advantage of the expenses borne by Gingrich Productions, Inc. The Federal Election Commission has held that a candidate could not hold a dual purpose event for fundraising and the promotion of a candidate's book because the publisher's payment of the cost of the event would constitute a prohibited corporate contribution by the publisher to the candidate. Advisory Opinion 1982-16 (Green); but cf. Advisory Opinion 2011-02 (Brown) (Commission could not approve a response as to whether a candidate could collect email address of people attending the candidate's book signing and promotional events for the purpose of soliciting contributions in the future).

25. On information and belief, Gingrich Productions, Inc., by using corporate funds to pay for a portion of the expenses of dual purpose events promoting the candidacy of Newt Gingrich while also promoting the sale of books by Newt Gingrich and by collecting the email addresses of people attending the dual purpose events for the purpose of soliciting contributions to Newt 2012, Inc, in the future, violated both 2 U.S.C. § 441b(a) and 11 C.F.R. § 114.2(a).

COUNT II

26. FEC regulations prohibit corporate officers from facilitating the making of contributions to candidates for federal office. 11 C.F.R. § 114.2(f). Facilitation is defined as using corporate resources or facilities to engage in fundraising activities in connection with any federal election. 11 C.F.R. § 114.2(f)(1). Examples of facilitation include using a list of corporate customers to solicit contributions to a candidate for federal office. 11 C.F.R. § 114.2(f)(2)(i)(C).

27. On information and belief, Newt Gingrich and/or Callista Gingrich, in their capacities as Chief Executive Officer of Gingrich Productions, Inc., authorized the transfer of a mailing list owned by Gingrich Productions, Inc. to Newt 2012, Inc. in the second quarter of 2011 and/or authorized the use of corporate funds to pay for the collection of email addresses of Gingrich Productions, Inc. customers at dual events promoting the candidacy of Newt Gingrich and the sale of books by Gingrich Productions, Inc. for the purpose of soliciting contributions to Newt 2012, Inc. in the future and thereby violated 11 C.F.R. § 114.2(f).

COUNT III

28. FECA and FEC regulations prohibit the conversion of campaign funds by any person to personal use. 2 U.S.C. § 439a(b)(1) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 113.1(g) & 113.2(e).

29. On information and belief, Newt Gingrich accepted payment of $42,000 in campaign funds from Newt 2012, Inc. for the use of a mailing list that belonged to Gingrich Productions, Inc. in violation of 2 U.S.C. § 439a(b)(1) and 11 C.F.R. §§ 113.1(g) & 113.2(e).

COUNT IV

30. FECA and FEC regulations require the principal campaign committee of a candidate for federal office to report all disbursements. 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(4) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.9.

31. By failing to report a disbursement of $42,000 to Newt Gingrich for the purchase of a mailing list, Newt 2012, Inc. and Lisa Lisker, in her capacity as Treasurer of Newt 2012, Inc., violated both 2 U.S.C. § 434(b)(4) and 11 C.F.R. § 104.9.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington and Melanie Sloan request that the Federal Election Commission conduct an investigation into these allegations, declare the respondents to have violated the Federal Election Campaign Act and applicable FEC regulations, and impose sanctions appropriate to these violations and take such further action as may be appropriate, including referring this case to the Department of Justice for criminal prosecution of any violations of 2 U.S.C. § 441b(a).

Gingrich fighting massive debt racked up in campaign's extravagant early days

By Dan Eggen, Published: December 6

Even as he surges ahead in the polls, Republican presidential candidate Newt Gingrich is struggling to get out from under a mountain of debt from luxury jets and other pricey expenses racked up in the early weeks of his campaign.

Creditors say Gingrich has begun paying back nearly $1.2 million in bills he owed at the end of September, and his spokesman says most will be taken care of by the end of the year. Other debts — including $42,000 owed to Gingrich himself for the campaign's use of a mailing list — have already been paid, ahead of those owed to other vendors, according to aides and disclosure records.

The debt puts Gingrich further behind in his ability to match opponents' spending in early-voting states, where he has just started to pay for advertising and is scrambling to catch up on staffing. He has been forced to scrimp on even basic expenses for much of the campaign and has only recently been able to expand his office presence in Iowa and South Carolina.

Although campaigns often operate in the red, Gingrich's debts are unusually high — he spent nearly $3 for every $2 he raised. Mitt Romney, by contrast, reported no debt last quarter.

Many of the bills date to the start of Gingrich's campaign in the spring, a time marked by extravagant spending on $30,000 jet flights and upscale hotels. The high campaign expenditures, along with Gingrich's personal spending on Tiffany jewelry and a cruise in the Greek isles, contributed to a mass resignation of staffers in June that nearly torpedoed his presidential aspirations.

"We are beginning to pay off our debts and obligations that the campaign owed. That will be an ongoing process," campaign spokesman R.C. Hammond said. "We have passed a threshold here. Our fundraising has been consistently good for a number of weeks."

Gingrich's financial health could prove crucial in the coming weeks as he attempts to hold on to his sudden lead over Romney and other Republican candidates in many state and national polls. Romney reported raising $32 million through September — more than 10 times the amount Gingrich reported — allowing him to easily fund major advertisements and organizing efforts for early contests in Iowa, New Hampshire and South Carolina.

Gingrich aides say he is catching up after a surge of fundraising in recent weeks, and the campaign aired its first television commercial on Monday with a $250,000 ad buy in Iowa.

"I think we'll have enough money," Gingrich told reporters in Johnston, Iowa, last week. "We'll never have as much money as Mitt Romney, but I think we'll have enough money. We'll have a sufficiency to be very, very competitive."

Bills for private jets

Nearly half of what Gingrich owed at the end of the third quarter was due to Moby Dick Airways, a private jet broker, which has been waiting since June for more than $451,000 from the campaign. The company arranges private charter flights for Republican politicians, speechmakers and other public figures, and it earned more than $6.6 million in business from Gingrich's now-defunct nonprofit group, American Solutions for Winning the Future.

Disclosure records suggest that Gingrich, as a presidential candidate, racked up private-jet charges at a rate of about $100,000 a week with Moby Dick until his campaign imploded in early June, leaving most of the balance unpaid until now.

"I have information from them saying they will pay it, and I am trusting that," Roy Oakley, Moby Dick's president, said in an interview last week. "It's not unheard of, but we don't usually have this kind of problem."

Other top creditors listed by the Gingrich campaign at the end of the third quarter were McKenna Long & Aldridge of Atlanta ($203,000), which Gingrich has used for legal services for years; High Tech Wm of Austin ($91,000), which along with its parent company billed about $700,000 to the Gingrich campaign for Web site services; and CMDI ($50,000), a Falls Church data-management firm.

Several top creditors did not respond to telephone or e-mail messages. McKenna spokeswoman Sabrina McGowan declined to comment, citing client confidentiality.

One of the campaign's biggest creditors is Gingrich himself, who billed his campaign more than $125,000 for a mailing list and travel expenses, about half of which remained unpaid at the end of last quarter.

Hammond said about $42,000 of the debt owed to Gingrich in the second quarter was for the cost of the candidate's personal mailing list, which he sold to the campaign. Hammond said Gingrich was paid for the list in the third quarter. The payment does not appear to be disclosed as required on Federal Election Commission reports, something Hammond said might have been an oversight.

The payment suggests that Gingrich was reimbursed ahead of other creditors for a list that he could have given to the campaign as an in-kind contribution.

Lawrence M. Noble, a campaign finance lawyer and former FEC general counsel, said candidates commonly allow such debts to sit on the books in order to pay other bills first, though there is no legal requirement to do so. Noble said not reporting the payment to Gingrich for the list would be a violation of disclosure laws.

Gingrich, who presided over a $150 million financial empire after leaving Congress, has largely blamed his earlier financial problems on former employees, many of whom have gone to work for rival candidate Rick Perry. Former aides, meanwhile, complain bitterly about the spending habits of Gingrich and his wife, Callista, and have bristled at the candidate's statements blaming staff members.

"We kept arguing over campaign expenses, ever very, very lavish travel expenses," said one former Gingrich adviser, who spoke on the condition of anonymity to talk candidly. "I don't know how you can blame staff for travel costs when you're choosing what jets you're flying on."

Campaigning frugally

Gingrich and his aides say he has cut back on spending dramatically since the campaign's near-collapse in June, always flying commercial and sometimes driving himself to appearances. He often stayed with friends, such as former Iowa congressman Greg Ganske, though he has recently gone back to lodging in name-brand hotels.

In addition, the candidate regularly piggybacks on already scheduled public gatherings, with the aim of attracting free "earned media," or press coverage, rather than buying ads or paying for his own events. Last week in Iowa, for example, Gingrich appeared at a conservative group's pizza party, addressed a Nationwide Insurance forum, appeared at a conference of electrical co-ops and was the keynote speaker at a local GOP dinner.

The Gingrich campaign reported collecting about $2.9 million in contributions through Sept. 30, and Hammond said about $4 million more came in from October until mid-November. He declined to say how much has been collected since then; the next FEC reports are not due until January.

On Wednesday, more than a dozen K Street lobbyists are sponsoring a Washington fundraiser for Gingrich at the Occidental Grill & Seafood restaurant, with tickets going for $1,000 per person. "There is a groundswell of support for Newt," said lobbyist Daniel F.C. Crowley of K&L Gates, one of the dinner's co-sponsors.

Rick Tyler, a former Gingrich spokesman who left the campaign in June but remains supportive of his candidacy, said he is confident that Gingrich will get his finances in order.

"Newt will pay them, I've got no question in my mind about that," Tyler said. "He's got integrity, and he pays his debts."

Staff writer Jason Horowitz in Iowa and staff researcher Lucy Shackelford in Washington contributed to this report.

Gingrich's book-selling efforts test law transporting them to the book-signings, storing them — must be born by the business, he said. However, the public must trust the campaign's word on this, because its financial reports to the FEC aren't required to show enough detail to figure out what travel costs it paid for.

The extent to which Gingrich Productions helps Gingrich for President — and vice versa — is obvious on the road. The Gingrichs collect signatures of people waiting to have their books signed, and those names are funneled into his political mailing list. At Gingrich's campaign web site — www.newt.org — a schedule of events regularly promotes the book-signings, and a column called "Callista's Canvas" features this link: "Callista Gingrich's Ellis the Elephant, the Sequel, Coming Soon."

Callista Gingrich held her own story-telling and book-signing event at a Christian academy in Hilton Head, S.C., last week while her husband attended a private fundraiser nearby. With a costumed Ellis the Elephant — the protagonist of her book, "Sweet Lord of Liberty" — she read the book, posed for pictures and signed copies that her assistant, Gingrich Productions employee Anna Haberlein, had sold. A horde of local TV crews and national political reporters attended the event, granting loads of free publicity to a private enterprise that was promoted on Newt Gingrich's campaign web site.

More typically, the two Gingrichs appear together, seated at a table after a political speech or at a local bookstore. He is usually trying to sell two of his most recent nonfiction titles, "A Nation Like No Other" or "Rediscovering God in America." She sells the children's book. In Naples, the Gingrichs sat at one table, signing books and greeting supporters; Haberlein stood at another, selling stacks of several titles to fans as they waited their turn to meet the candidate.

President Obama, in contrast, conducted his book tour for "The Audacity of Hope" in the fall of 2006, months before he launched his campaign.

Gingrich Productions won't say whether book sales have risen as Gingrich has surged in the polls, but it's hard to imagine they haven't as the size of the crowds has swelled with his popularity. At the Books-a-Million in Florida, more than 500 people waited in line, some for hours, to greet the candidates.

What is clear is that Callista Gingrich's children's book is doing well. There will be a second printing this year, and in addition, Scholastic has agreed to carry the title at its book fairs, meaning the book will be sold in thousands of elementary schools across the country in the coming year.

An FEC opinion issued this year stated that a campaign Web site may promote a book in a "de minimus" way. The opinion was issued to address the book tour earlier this year of U.S. Sen. Scott Brown (R-Mass.), who was seeking guidance about promoting his book, using his campaign mailing list to sell the book and holding campaign events in cities where the book's publisher had paid his travel costs. The FEC could not reach agreement about the last question, but previous opinions have suggested that the campaign should pay.

"Generally, the FEC is not so concerned about the campaign subsidizing the book tour as much as they are concerned about the corporation benefiting the campaign," said Larry Noble, a campaign finance lawyer in Washington. "What you do is the best you can of coming up with rules that prevent the book tour from subsidizing the campaign."

On one point the FEC has been clear, and it reiterated the point in the Brown opinion: Candidates may not collect royalties on books that the campaign purchases and then gives away or sells at campaign events. Brown proposed donating those royalties to a charity, which the FEC permitted. Gingrich's campaign has not bought any books, and it is the publishing business, not the campaign, that sells the books at speeches, campaign spokesman R.C. Hammond said. That allows the Gingrichs to keep the profits.

In the end, nothing stops campaigns from using their political events to gin up book sales, said Ryan, the election watchdog lawyer. And that's where the law, and its interpretation, fall short, he said. "It would be flatly illegal for the campaign to buy the book and sell them for the profit of the Gingrichs," Ryan said. "But if the person buying the book thinks they're buying the book to help the political campaign, and they don't really care about the book much, that would arguably be wrong too. If they're selling books and pocketing the profit in a way that can be deemed part of a campaign, that looks a lot like converting campaign resources to personal use."

"Big Brother in the form of an increasingly powerful government and in an increasingly powerful private sector will pile the records high with reasons why privacy should give way to national security, to law and order, to efficiency of operation, to scientific advancement and the like."

Justice William O. Douglas

I despise people who go to the gutter on either the right or the left and hurl rocks at those in the center.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower

Gingrich, Ahead in Polls, Is Still Selling Books

By TRIP GABRIEL

Even as he widens his lead in the polls, Newt Gingrich spends substantial time on an activity that raised questions about his ultimate motive when he was a back-of-the-pack candidate: selling and signing $25 copies of his books.

As his primary foe, Mitt Romney, and the White House intensify their efforts to negatively define Mr. Gingrich, his sole public event on Friday is at a bookstore in Washington. On Saturday he flies to Des Moines for a Republican debate but plans to squeeze in an afternoon book-signing.

Experienced campaign strategists cannot recall a top-tier contender devoting so much time to pitching products while seeking the White House. Mitt Romney, who also has a book out, has never sold it while stumping, his campaign said. President Obama, a best-selling author in 2007, did not incorporate sales events into campaign appearances, according to a spokesman for his re-election committee.

Mr. Gingrich's devotion to book-selling, Republican strategists said, raises questions about the propriety of a candidate who is generating personal income while seeking the White House, as well as whether he is making the optimum use of limited campaign time.

Mr. Gingrich said that book sales, far from a distraction, effectively conveyed his views and values. They are "the cultural wing of what we're doing," he said in an interview. "I am a cultural teacher, with a political campaign to change a government. And that's how I see myself."

Mr. Gingrich, who now holds strong leads in the latest polls in Iowa, South Carolina and Florida, may be having the last laugh after a mutiny by staff members this spring who complained about his preference for selling books and DVDs of movies he makes with his wife, Callista, over meeting with voters.

"A Nation Like No Other," published in June, is Mr. Gingrich's 16th nonfiction title. It has sold 15,000 hardcover copies, according to Nielsen BookScan.

Mrs. Gingrich, also an author, sells an illustrated children's book, "Sweet Land of Liberty," about Ellis the Elephant, at campaign events. Although some buyers are under the impression that sales of their books, like T-shirts or coffee mugs, support the campaign, the proceeds go to the Gingriches personally, even as the campaign is scrambling to pay off debt and raise enough money to run an ambitious national operation.

"People who are seriously considering someone for president of the United States, I'm not sure they see that the process should be financially beneficial to the candidate," said Jim Dyke, a former executive for the Republican National Committee. "I don't know that it presents a presidential feeling to be there pushing your own book."

Steve Schmidt, who managed Senator John McCain's 2008 presidential bid, said Mr. McCain never sold books while campaigning. But "we live in a new age," he said, one where Mr. Gingrich's sales efforts are consistent with how he leveraged his political capital to start businesses after quitting the House, consulting for nearly $2 million for Freddie Mac, for example.

"As Republican voters give consideration to a Gingrich nomination, one of the considerations is understanding what you're getting," Mr. Schmidt said. "He monetized his years of being speaker for consulting gains. Why wouldn't there be an expectation that he monetizes his front-running status?"

Campaign autobiographies have been fixtures at least since Jimmy Carter's "Why Not the Best?" introduced the little-known governor to a national audience. Nearly every Republican candidate this year has a book out, and at least two besides Mr. Gingrich — Herman Cain and Michele Bachmann — made book-store appearances part of wooing voters.

Mr. Gingrich, who also writes historical novels with a co-author, said there was nothing wrong with selling books while campaigning. "I believe in free enterprise, and I think it's O.K. to make money," he said.

More than 100 buyers who lined up for his signature Saturday after a town hall-style appearance on Staten Island seemed to agree.

Kenneth May, a technician for an oil refinery in New Jersey, held three copies of Mr. Gingrich's book that he planned to share with friends. "I'm helping his campaign as far as I'm concerned," he said. "Plus it helps me to learn more about him."

The operation was smooth and efficient. An aide wrote each customer's name on a Post-it note on the title page and slid it over to Mrs. Gingrich. She inscribed the book with the buyer's name before sliding it to her husband.

Mr. Gingrich, wielding a blue Sharpie and sipping a Diet Coke, scrawled his name and shook the buyer's hand. He rarely spoke before turning to the next customer.

Campaign finance experts said that promoting a book for personal profit while running for office was within the law. The book signings are run by Gingrich Productions, of which Mrs. Gingrich is president, a company that produces and promotes the couple's books and documentary films. There is a link to it from the campaign's Web site, and people can buy the full back catalog of Mr. Gingrich's books.

Mrs. Gingrich's sales have clearly benefited from piggybacking on her husband's celebrity. She recently sold more than 50 copies of her $15 book to elementary students after a reading in South Carolina, where an aide dressed as Ellis the Elephant.

At readings, aides collect customers' e-mails to add to fund-raising pitches for the campaign. The Federal Election Commission debated the practice in January but deadlocked and did not issue an opinion.

An experienced Republican consultant, Mark McKinnon, said he doubted voters perceived Mr. Gingrich as mercenary. "On the contrary, I think voters view book-related events as just making the candidates more substantive," he said.

Mr. Gingrich's latest novel, "The Battle of the Crater," is about black Union troops in the Civil War, which Mr. Gingrich said he would discuss and promote widely during Black History Month in February. "It has a lot of different signals to a lot of different people that there are things in American history worthy knowing," he said. "You have to see me as a teacher."

When Mr. Gingrich was an also-ran earlier in the year, there was speculation that he was mainly seeking to raise his value as an author and a paid television commentator. Observers pointed to Mike Huckabee, who won the 2008 Iowa caucuses, dropped out of the race soon after but ended up with his own Fox News show.

"Pat Buchanan perfected this process years ago," said Rick Tyler, a former longtime aide and a co-writer with Mr. Gingrich. "Pat would go run for president and then get a better contract with CNN. Others picked up on it."

Mr. Tyler said, "We worked for years restoring Newt's brand because it was damaged once he left the speakership." In 2008, they had a New York Times best seller with the nonfiction book "Real Change."

But when "A Nation Like No Other" was released in June, just as the campaign was imploding, it flopped, Mr. Tyler said.

Now things are different.

"The behaviors of someone running for president and someone trying to gain market viability are exactly the same," he said. "You can't tell them apart."
