Subject Harry Reid's Money Request

Democrat FEC commissioner Ann Ravel defended the request during the open meeting, the Examiner reports, stating the use of the funds in such a way would be the "appropriate mechanism for a person who will continue to be doing a public service as a historic figure in our country, to achieve purposes that are important to the American public."

Dear Ms. Ravel: FYI, Harry Reid is one of the most corrupt and self-serving politicians in the history of American politics. In view of his lifetime federal retirement benefits for his (dis)service to this country, he does not deserve one more penny of public funds. The greatest service Harry Reid could do for America is simply to disappear from politics and live quietly off of the millions of dollars of ill-gotten gains he has pocketed during his political career. Assuming that you, personally, have any ethics to begin with, you lose all credibility and respect for even entertaining Reid's absurd request, let alone supporting it publicly. SB
