Dear Ms. Parker:

We are responding to your advisory opinion request concerning the application of the Federal Election Campaign Act, 52 U.S.C. §§ 30101-30146 (“the Act”), and Commission regulations to your proposal to solicit contributions or donations to state and local party committees. The Commission concludes that as a United States citizen living abroad, you may solicit contributions or donations to state and local party committees, but that you may not knowingly do so from a foreign national. The Commission also concludes that you are not required to notify those whom you solicit about the prohibition on soliciting foreign nationals. Finally, the Commission concludes that you may inform a state or local party committee that you are soliciting contributions or donations to that committee.

Background

The facts presented in this advisory opinion are based on your letter received on August 26, 2016.

You are a U.S. citizen living in Canada. You plan to solicit friends and family by email or text message for contributions or donations to state and local party committees. You would also encourage these individuals to solicit contributions or donations from their friends and family. You include an example of a communication you plan to send:

Sprinklers needed to help the grassroots grow! Donate to [link to a state/local party’s donation page], or Google your own favorite state or local party in a swing state and sprinkle your dollars where they’ll fund the most important get-out-the-vote effort ever. Pass this on!
Advisory Opinion Request at AOR002. You state that you might also encourage friends to include their own message or video in their solicitations. Id.

Some of the individuals you wish to solicit reside outside the U.S. but told you several years ago that they were U.S. citizens. Id. You state that these individuals have their own networks of friends and family “who might be interested to know more about supporting state and local parties’ grassroots activities in swing states.” Id. You also state that you would like to solicit friends who are Canadian citizens but have lived in the U.S. for over five years. Id.

Questions Presented

1) As a U.S. citizen residing abroad, may you solicit contributions or donations to state and local party committees?

2) Are you required to take any steps to ascertain the citizenship status of individuals that you plan to solicit, including U.S. citizens residing abroad and individuals who moved to the U.S. from Canada more than five years ago? Is the answer to this question different if you restrict your email and text message solicitations to friends and family who live in the U.S. and who have not, to your knowledge, lived abroad?

3) Are you required to warn individuals whom you solicit that they are prohibited from soliciting foreign nationals? Does this answer change if you restrict your email and text message solicitations to friends and family who live in the U.S. and who have not, to your knowledge, lived abroad?

4) May you inform state and local party committees about your efforts to solicit contributions or donations to those committees?
Legal Analysis and Conclusions

1) As a U.S. citizen residing abroad, may you solicit contributions or donations to state and local party committees?

Yes, as a U.S. citizen residing abroad, you may solicit contributions and donations from other U.S. citizens to state and local party committees.

The Act and Commission regulations prohibit any foreign national from making a contribution or donation to a committee of a political party. 52 U.S.C. § 30121(a)(1)(B); 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(c). Commission regulations also prohibit any person from knowingly soliciting such a contribution or donation. 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(g); see 52 U.S.C. § 30121(a)(2). These provisions do not prohibit U.S. citizens from making contributions or donations or from soliciting such funds from other U.S. citizens, regardless of residence. See, e.g., 52 U.S.C. § 30121(b) (providing that “foreign national” does not include “any individual who is a citizen of the United States”); 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(a)(3)(iii) (same).1 Indeed, the legislative history of the Act indicates that Congress intended to ensure U.S. citizens living abroad could participate in U.S. elections. See 93 Cong. Rec. S4715 (daily ed. March 28, 1974) (statement of Sen. Bentsen) (responding to question about whether U.S. citizens living abroad could make contributions or donations to candidates, stating that “[i]n no way is [such an individual] precluded from that”). Accordingly, the Commission has consistently noted that the foreign national prohibition does not apply to U.S. citizens living abroad. See, e.g., Factual and Legal Analysis at 14, MURs 6078/6090/6108/6139/6142/6214 (Obama for America) (finding no reason to believe violation of foreign national prohibition occurred where political committee engaged in reasonable inquiry to ensure that funds from foreign banks or foreign addresses were not from foreign nationals), First Gen. Counsel’s Rpt. at 8-9, MUR 6687 (Obama for America) (recommending same). Therefore, because you are a U.S. citizen, the Act and Commission regulations do not prohibit you from soliciting contributions and donations to state and local party committees.

1 In addition to U.S. citizens, the foreign national prohibition also does not apply to non-citizens who are lawfully admitted to permanent residence in the U.S., or to U.S. nationals. 52 U.S.C. § 30121(b).

2) Are you required to take any steps to ascertain the citizenship status of individuals that you plan to solicit, including U.S. citizens residing abroad and individuals who moved to the U.S. from Canada more than five years ago? Is the answer to this question different if you restrict your email and text message solicitations to friends and family who live in the U.S. and who have not, to your knowledge, lived abroad?

Yes, you would be required to ascertain the citizenship status of some of the individuals whom you plan to solicit to avoid knowingly soliciting foreign nationals, while soliciting only U.S. residents would generally limit your obligation to inquire into those individuals’ nationalities.

As noted above, Commission regulations prohibit any person from knowingly soliciting a contribution or donation from a foreign national. 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(g); see also 52 U.S.C. § 30121(a)(2). For the purpose of this prohibition, the regulation defines “knowingly” as (i) having actual knowledge the person solicited is a foreign national, (ii) being aware of facts that would lead a reasonable person to conclude that there is a substantial probability that the person solicited is a foreign national, or (iii) being aware of facts that would lead a reasonable person to inquire whether the person solicited is a foreign national but failing to make such an inquiry. 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(a)(4). The regulation includes a non-exhaustive list of “pertinent facts” that would lead a reasonable person to inquire further as to the citizenship status of a solicited person, including that the potential donor provides a foreign address or resides abroad. 11 C.F.R.
§ 110.20(a)(5). Commission regulations also provide a safe harbor, whereby a person is deemed to have conducted a reasonable inquiry if she seeks and obtains copies of current and valid U.S. “passport papers” for the solicited person, as long as the person conducting the inquiry does not have actual knowledge that the solicited person is a foreign national. 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(a)(7).

Pursuant to these regulations, your responsibility to inquire into the citizenship status of a person whom you solicit depends upon whether you are aware of facts that would lead a reasonable person to believe — or to inquire into whether — the solicited individual is a foreign national. Thus, regarding your plan to solicit friends living abroad, the regulations indicate that these individuals’ foreign residences would generally obligate you to conduct further inquiry to ascertain whether they are currently foreign nationals. 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(a)(5)(ii), (iv). Your prior knowledge that some of these individuals were U.S. citizens a number of years ago does not necessarily relieve you of your obligation to inquire into whether their citizenship has changed during the intervening time, given that they no longer reside in the U.S. Should you choose to do so, you may rely on the safe harbor provision, provided that you do not have actual knowledge that the individual is a foreign national.

You also indicate that you wish to solicit Canadian friends who have moved to the U.S. and have lived there for over five years. Because you have actual knowledge that these individuals were foreign nationals, you may not solicit them for contributions or donations unless you are able to determine that there is no substantial probability that the individuals remain foreign nationals. See 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(a)(4)(iii).

Finally, you ask in the alternative whether you would need to further inquire about the citizenship status of solicited individuals if you solicit only friends or family who live in the U.S. and who have not, to your knowledge, lived abroad. As described above, the Commission’s regulation includes a non-exhaustive list of facts that would lead a reasonable person to inquire further as to the citizenship status of a potential contributor to avoid “knowingly” soliciting a foreign national. 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(a)(4)(iii), (5). One of these enumerated facts is that the potential contributor or donor lives abroad. 11 C.F.R. § 110.20(a)(5)(iv). Limiting your solicitations to friends and family who live in the U.S. and who have not, to your knowledge, lived abroad, therefore would not obligate you to conduct further inquiry about citizenship status due to the residence of the individuals whom you solicit. However, if you are aware of other facts that would indicate a substantial probability that a solicited person is a foreign national, you must still make a reasonable inquiry into that person’s citizenship status.

3) Are you required to warn individuals whom you solicit that they are prohibited from soliciting foreign nationals? Does this answer change if you restrict your email and text message solicitations to friends and family who live in the U.S. and who have not, to your knowledge, lived abroad?

No, you are not required to warn the individuals whom you solicit, regardless of where they live, that they are prohibited from soliciting foreign nationals.

In addition to prohibiting any person from knowingly soliciting a foreign national for contributions or donations to a party committee, Commission regulations also prohibit knowingly providing substantial assistance in the solicitation of a foreign national. 11 C.F.R.
§ 110.20(h)(1). Substantial assistance “means active involvement in the solicitation, making, receipt or acceptance of a foreign national contribution or donation with an intent to facilitate successful completion of the transaction.” Contribution Limitations and Prohibitions, 67 Fed.
Reg. 69, 928, 69,945 (Nov. 19, 2002).
Merely including in your solicitation the phrase “Pass it on!” or a similar exhortation for the individuals whom you solicit to conduct their own solicitations does not constitute “active involvement” in their solicitation. See id. at 69,946 n.9 (citing IIT, An Int’l Inv. Trust v. Cornfeld, 619 F.2d 909, 922 (2d Cir. 1980) (internal citation omitted), for proposition that to satisfy “substantial assistance” standard courts have historically required “accessor[ies] to an activity” to “participate in it” or take “action to make it succeed”); cf. Factual and Legal Analysis at 5-6, MUR 6528 (Michael Grimm for Congress, et al.) (finding reason to believe that respondent violated regulation where respondent provided foreign national’s name to intermediary; requested that intermediary solicit foreign national for contribution; and informed foreign national that he could not contribute unless he used intermediary to conceal source of contribution). Thus, if you solicit only lawful potential contributors (as described above), and then those individuals, without any further action on your part, solicit others, your solicitation would not amount to knowingly providing substantial assistance in the solicitation of a foreign national. Accordingly, you are not required to include a warning about the prohibition on soliciting foreign nationals.

4) May you inform state and local party committees about your efforts to solicit contributions to those committees?

Yes, you may inform state and local party committees about your efforts to solicit donations for those committees.

The Act and Commission regulations do not prohibit a person from informing a political party committee about that person’s efforts to solicit contributions or donations to that party committee. Although certain communications that are coordinated with a party committee constitute in-kind contributions to the committee, 11 C.F.R. § 109.21(b), merely informing the committee about the solicitations as proposed does not render the proposed solicitations coordinated communications. See 11 C.F.R. § 109.21(a), (c), (d). Thus, as described in your request, informing state and local party committees about your solicitation efforts will not cause the solicitations to become in-kind contributions.

This response constitutes an advisory opinion concerning the application of the Act and Commission regulations to the specific transaction or activity set forth in this advisory opinion request. See 52 U.S.C. § 30108. The Commission emphasizes that, if there is a change in any of the facts or assumptions presented, and such facts or assumptions are material to a conclusion presented in this advisory opinion, then you may not rely on that conclusion as support for its proposed activity. Any person involved in any specific transaction or activity which is indistinguishable in all its material aspects from the transaction or activity with respect to which this advisory opinion is rendered may rely on this advisory opinion. See 52 U.S.C.
§ 30108(c)(1)(B). Please note that the analysis or conclusions in this advisory opinion may be

2 The facts presented in your request do not indicate that you will be engaging in two-way communication with any party committees concerning your solicitations or asking those committees to take any action. Therefore, the Commission does not opine on the potential ramifications under the Act of any interactions between you and a party committee other than informing the committee of the solicitations as proposed.

3 In addition, your solicitations by email would constitute uncompensated internet activity that is exempt from the regulatory definitions of “contribution” and “expenditure.” See 11 C.F.R. §§ 100.94, 100.155.
