9 DRAFT A

10 Dear Mr. Backer:

11 We are responding to the advisory opinion request you submitted on behalf of Mr. Shaun

12 McCutcheon regarding the application of the Federal Election Campaign Act, 52 U.S.C.

13 §§ 30101-45 (the “Act”), and Commission regulations to whether a separate contribution limit

14 applies to each individual round of vote tallying in Maine’s 2024 ranked-choice voting system.

15 The Commission concludes that it does not. Rather, a single contribution limit applies because

16 the entire ranked-choice voting process, including all necessary rounds of vote tallying,

17 constitutes a single general election under the Act.

18 Background

19 The facts presented in this advisory opinion are based on your letter received on July 23,

20 2024, and publicly available information.

22 will cast ballots on which they may “rank candidates in order of preference, [and then] tabulation

23 proceeds in sequential rounds in which last-place candidates are defeated and the candidate with

24 the most votes in the final round is elected.”<sup>2</sup>

1        After the polls close on Election Day, officials tally the votes and record the number of 2        first-choice votes for each candidate.<sup>3</sup> If no candidate receives more than 50% of the first-choice
3        votes, then the RCV count is conducted under the supervision of the Secretary of State in 4        successive rounds.<sup>4</sup> In each round, “the number of votes for each continuing candidate must be 5        counted.”<sup>5</sup> A “continuing candidate” is any “candidate who has not been defeated.”<sup>6</sup> Each 6        ballot only counts as “one vote for its highest-ranked continuing candidate for that round.”<sup>7</sup>

7        At the end of each round, if more than two candidates remain, the last-place candidate is 8        defeated, and the vote for the next-highest-ranked continuing candidate on the defeated 9        candidate’s ballots is then counted in the next round.”<sup>8</sup> If candidates tie for last place, then the 10       candidate who must withdraw is determined randomly.<sup>9</sup> In the final round, when only two 11       continuing candidates remain, “the candidate with the most votes . . . is elected.”<sup>10</sup>

12       Four candidates have qualified to appear on the ballot in Maine’s 2024 general election

1 Requestor wishes to make contributions totaling $9,900 to Ms. Demi Kouzounas, the Republican
2 nominee.<sup>12</sup> The request contends that the Commission should consider each of the three 3 potential rounds of vote tallying in the RCV process to be separate elections, and thus subject to 4 separate contribution limits.<sup>13</sup> Requestor's $9,900 contribution would be divided into three 5 parts: $3,300 for the first round of the RCV process, which the request asserts is a general
6 election per 52 U.S.C. § 30101(1)(A) and 11 C.F.R. § 100.2(d)(2); a second $3,300 for a 7 potential second round of the RCV process should Ms. Kouzounas qualify; and a final $3,300 for 8 a potential third and final round of the RCV process should Ms. Kouzounas qualify.<sup>14</sup> The 9 request asserts that the second and third rounds would be runoff elections under 52 U.S.C. §
10 30101(1)(A) and 11 C.F.R. § 100.2(d)(2).<sup>15</sup>

11 Under the requestor's proposal, should Ms. Kouzounas accept the contributions, she 12 would not be permitted to spend more than the initial $3,300 in connection with the first round of 13 the RCV process (what the request asserts is the general election); the remaining funds would be 14 held apart as described in the request.<sup>16</sup> If there are no second or third rounds of vote tallying —
15 that is a winning candidate is chosen through the first round — or Ms. Kouzounas is not a 16 candidate in any such rounds, she would be required to refund the additional $6,600 to Mr.
17 McCutcheon.<sup>17</sup> Likewise, should Ms. Kouzounas qualify for a potential second round but not a

2 for the third round to Mr. McCutcheon.<sup>18</sup>

3 Question Presented

4 *May Mr. McCutcheon make a $9,900 contribution to Ms. Kouzounas subject to the 5 above-described terms and conditions? In this context, does each round of voting, 6 tallying, and vote reallocation in Maine’s ranked-choice voting system for U.S. Senate
7 qualify as a separate “election” under the FECA subject to its own independent 8 contribution limit?*

9

10 Legal Analysis

11 No, the individual rounds of vote tallying in Maine’s ranked-choice voting system do not 12 qualify as separate elections under the Act. Rather, the entire ranked-choice voting process,
13 including all necessary rounds of vote tallying, for Maine’s 2024 U.S. Senate general election 14 constitutes a single election, currently subject to a $3,300 contribution limit per individual.

15 According to the Act and Commission regulations, an election — whether general, 16 primary, runoff, or special — is “the process by which individuals, whether opposed or 17 unopposed, seek nomination for election, or election, to Federal office.”<sup>19</sup> Additionally, “general 18 election” is defined as an election “held in even numbered years on the Tuesday following the 19 first Monday in November.”<sup>20</sup> And a “runoff election,” in relevant part, is defined as the 20 election “held after a general election and prescribed by applicable State law as the means for 21 deciding which candidate should be certified as an officeholder elect.”<sup>21</sup>

21 11 C.F.R. § 100.2(d)(2).

1           In adopting the definitions of elections, the Commission further explained that,

2        “[g]enerally, each candidate will participate in two elections: The primary . . . and the general
3        election.”<sup>22</sup> Even when the primary process consists of multiple parts — for example a 4        convention or caucuses and a primary — the Commission normally counts the entire process as 5        a single election for the purposes of contribution limits.”<sup>23</sup>

6           The Act defines a contribution to include any gift, subscription, loan, advance, money or 7        anything of value made by any person “for the purpose of influencing any election for Federal 8        office.”<sup>24</sup> Under the Act, no person shall make contributions to any candidate, his or her 9        authorized committee, or their agents, “with respect to any election for Federal office” that in the 10       aggregate exceed $3,300.<sup>25</sup>

11        Contribution limits “apply separately with respect to each election as defined in 11 CFR 12        100.2.”<sup>26</sup> A candidate participating in multiple distinct elections, therefore, is eligible for 13        separate contribution limits.<sup>27</sup> Here, however, only a single election will be held. Although

1 Maine’s RCV system will tabulate votes over the course of several rounds, the election will be 2 held on a single date: Tuesday, November 5, 2024. This election, under the plain language of 3 Commission regulations, is a general election.<sup>28</sup> The request does not indicate, and the 4 Commission is not aware of, any date after November 5 prescribed by Maine law on which 5 voters will be able to cast votes for U.S. Senate candidates in Maine’s 2024 election.<sup>29</sup> Instead, 6 the request argues that the separate rounds of counting votes, all of which will be cast in the 7 general election of November 5, 2024, constitute separate distinct runoff elections. That 8 argument is unavailing.

9 A 2011 opinion of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit is consistent with this 10 conclusion.<sup>30</sup> In upholding the constitutionality of San Francisco’s use of RCV in municipal 11 elections, the Court noted that in an RCV election “voters must submit their preferences before 12 polls close, and … they are not provided an opportunity to revise their choices.”<sup>31</sup> Once polls 13 close, “[t]he series of calculations required by the algorithm to produce the winning candidate 14 are simply steps of a single tabulation, not separate rounds of voting.”<sup>32</sup>

15 Maine law further supports the determination that the entire RCV process is a single 16 election. It defines ranked-choice voting as “the method of casting and tabulating votes in which 17 voters rank candidates in order of preference, tabulation proceeds in sequential rounds in which

1 last-place candidates are defeated and the candidate with the most votes in the final round is
2 elected.<sup>33</sup> The italicized language is key — a candidate is elected by receiving the most votes in 3 the final round. Rounds of vote tallying prior to the final round therefore cannot result in the 4 selection of a candidate and cannot be considered separate elections.

5 Maine's campaign finance rules for its state-level primary elections also suggest the state
6 intended for its RCV elections for federal office to be treated as single elections.<sup>34</sup> Maine 7 currently only allows for a single contribution limit of $1,950 for gubernatorial, state legislative, 8 and county-level candidates running in primary elections despite the fact that these elections may 9 be conducted via RCV.<sup>35</sup> Maine does not provide for additional contribution limits for 10 individual rounds of ranked-choice vote tallying in these state-level elections.

11 The request raises the example of traditional runoff elections held in certain states, 12 comparing the general election where no candidate secures 50% or more of the votes to the first 13 round of vote tallying in Maine's RCV election.<sup>36</sup> The request asserts that the first round of 14 RCV tabulation should be treated as a general election under the Act, and any subsequent rounds
15 of RCV vote tallying should be treated as runoff elections are treated in these states.<sup>37</sup> Each

1 round of vote tallying would, according to the request, receive its own contribution limit.<sup>38</sup>
2 However, the request fails to acknowledge that fact that when such a runoff election occurs, 3 candidates have a second, separate opportunity to campaign before voters cast another ballot, 4 thus demanding additional resources for campaigning.<sup>39</sup> In contrast, Maine’s RCV process by 5 its explicit terms results in the election of a candidate, and does not allow for any additional 6 periods of campaigning and voting.<sup>40</sup>

7 Finally, the request cites Advisory Opinion 2006-06 (Busby) for support for separate 8 contribution limits, but fails to acknowledge that Busby concerned two separate elections for two 9 different terms of office where voters happened to be casting ballots on the same day.<sup>41</sup> In 10 Advisory Opinion 2022-08 (NRCC), the Commission also allowed separate contribution limits 11 where court orders “created a new electoral situation that required candidates to file in 12 congressional districts with new boundaries and prepare, plan, and campaign for a new election 13 more than three months away held under new rules and, potentially, against new opposing 14 candidates.”<sup>42</sup> Neither of these situations are analogous here. The same set of electoral 15 boundaries, rules, and candidates persist throughout the RCV process for Maine’s 2024 U.S.

3 Conclusion

4 The Commission concludes that the individual rounds of vote tallying in Maine's ranked-5 choice voting system do not qualify as separate elections under the Act and Commission
6 regulations. Rather, the Commission determines that the entire ranked-choice voting process,
7 including all necessary rounds of vote tallying, for Maine's 2024 U.S. Senate general election
8 constitutes a single election.

<sup>43</sup> The request argues that each round of vote tabulation is a distinct election because "the candidates participating in [the] second and each subsequent round of tallying and vote reallocation are necessarily different than in the initial round." AOR009. However, candidates who are "eliminated" in rounds of vote tabulation prior to the final round in Maine's RCV process are still participants in the same overall election given that all candidates have the same opportunity to receive votes on election day and participate in the overall process. The request is also incorrect to suggest that "[t]he identities of the voters who participate in later rounds will . . . typically differ, since some ballots are likely to become "exhausted" and therefore not counted in second and subsequent rounds." Id. The Ninth Circuit addressed a similar argument in Dudum v. Arntz, 640 F.3d at 1109-11, where the appellant argued that "voters whose ballots are exhausted do not have their ballots counted in further stages of the tabulation . . . meaning that exhausted ballots are discarded, and so not counted, in determining the election's ultimate outcome. Id. at 1109 (internal quotations omitted). The court disagreed, saying that "[e]xhausted ballots are not disregarded in tabulating election results, and the result of not counting them is identical to counting them while explicitly recognizing that the system often produces a winner who attains a plurality, not a majority, of the total votes cast." Id. at 1111 (internal quotations omitted).
