I. INTRODUCTION

The Complainants in these matters allege that social media platform Twitter, Inc.

("Twitter") violated the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended (the "Act"), by denying them the ordinary full use of the platform. Two of the Complainants who were federal candidates argue that the limitations Twitter placed on their accounts act as prohibited in-kind corporate contributions to, or undisclosed independent expenditures supporting, their political opponents. A third Complainant who is not a federal candidate argues that the limits on his account benefit the opponents of the candidates he supports. The MUR 7443 and 7447

Complainants also argue that Twitter, as a platform for political debate, falls within the scope of the Commission's debate regulations and that Twitter's alleged failure to use objective criteria for selecting participants, as required in a debate, results in a prohibited corporate contribution. Twitter disputes both the factual and legal basis of these allegations, stating that it is has not made contributions or expenditures because its actions were undertaken for legitimate commercial reasons and not for the purpose of influencing a federal election. As discussed below, Twitter has credibly explained that it has a commercial motivation behind each of the actions at issue in these complaints, rather than an electoral purpose. Therefore, it appears that

- 1 no contribution or expenditure has been made. Further, while Twitter may be providing a forum
- 2 for debate and discussion, it is not a debate within the meaning of Commission's regulations.
- 3 Accordingly, we recommend that the Commission find no reason to believe that Twitter violated
- 4 52 U.S.C. §§ 30104(c) or 30118 of the Act by failing to disclose independent expenditures or
- 5 making prohibited in-kind corporate contributions.

6 II. FACTS

7 The complaint in MUR 7443 filed by the authorized committee of Congressman Matt

- 8 Gaetz alleges that Twitter "shadow banned" Gaetz, thereby making a prohibited, in-kind,
- 9 corporate contribution to, or an undisclosed independent expenditure supporting, Gaetz's
- opponents.⁴ At the time of the alleged shadow banning, Gaetz was a candidate in the 2018
- Republican primary in Florida's First District. Gaetz bases his allegation on a news report in
- which journalists at Vice News report that they typed Gaetz's name into Twitter's search bar but
- that it did not appear in the auto-populated dropdown of options.⁵ Not having his name appear in
- this search, which makes it more difficult to find his profile, is what Gaetz refers to as shadow
- banning. 6 Gaetz alleges that "similarly situated Republicans" were also excluded from the

The term "shadow ban" generally refers to the situation in which a user is not notified that they have been removed from a social media platform and may continue to interact with the platform, but other users cannot view the content the banned user publishes. The term is also used in instances in which a social media platform has made it more difficult to locate a particular user's published content or account, or in which that user's content is otherwise less likely to appear on another user's social media feed. See G.F., What is "Shadowbanning"?, THE ECONOMIST (Aug. 1, 2018), https://www.economist.com/the-economist-explains/2018/08/01/what-is-shadowbanning.

- search drop down list, but that no Democratic candidates were subject to such exclusion.
- 2 Because of the routine use of Twitter in political campaigns, Gaetz alleges that this decreased
- 3 visibility on the platform relative to his Democratic opponents constitutes a thing of value given,
- 4 and thus constitutes an in-kind contribution to his opponent or an independent expenditure on his
- 5 opponent's behalf.⁸

The complaint in MUR 7447, filed by Paul Nehlen, a candidate in the 2018 Republican

7 primary election for Congress in Wisconsin's First District, alleges that Twitter violated the Act

8 by banning him altogether from the social media platform. He alleges that his Twitter account was suspended in January, 2018 for seven days because he violated Twitter's Rules and Terms of Service and he was required to delete certain tweets before his account was reinstated. After

Nehlen's account was reinstated, he tweeted a link to a page containing a screenshot of the tweets he was required to delete. 10 Nehlen states that, on February 11, 2018, Twitter reversed its reinstatement decision and permanently banned him. 11 He further states that he appealed that decision, and that the appeal was denied. 12 Twitter allegedly disabled the account of his campaign spokesman and permanently banned the spokesman from using the platform. ¹³ When that spokesman sought to continue tweeting from someone else's account, that account was

17 disabled as well. 14

1 Nehlen acknowledges that many of his tweets prompted other users to complain to Twitter that the tweets were offensive and violated Twitter's rules. ¹⁵ He states that he has 2 3 received multiple email notices from Twitter regarding these complaints as well as 4 determinations by Twitter that these tweets did not violate Twitter's rules. ¹⁶ Nehlen alleges that 5 only Republican candidates have been banned from Twitter and that Twitter acts in a partisan fashion, "favoring liberal speech on its platform over conservative speech." ¹⁷ 6 7 The complaint in MUR 7550 was filed by a non-candidate who states that he used 8 Twitter to share messages reflecting his support for certain Democratic candidates. He alleges 9 that in February 2018, his account was suspended because of what Twitter told him was "suspicious activity." ¹⁸ Complainant states that Twitter tried to verify his account by sending a 10 11 verification code to his phone but that he was unable to respond because he had a new phone number. 19 Thus, the Complainant alleges that this suspension constituted an in-kind contribution 12 13 to the opponents of the Democratic candidates he supported. 14 Twitter generally responds to each complaint by asserting that it did not make a 15 contribution or expenditure because its activities were not undertaken for the purpose of 16 influencing an election. It explains that each of the activities complained of were the result of 17 actions taken to further Twitter's business interests. Specifically, Twitter states that advertisers, the main source of Twitter's revenue, have expressed concern about "divisive content" that has appeared on Twitter, threatening to take their advertising dollars elsewhere if Twitter did not

- 1 take steps to address "a toxic online environment" where their ads could appear alongside "hate
- 2 speech" or "content that promoted racism." ²⁰ In addition, Twitter states that criticism of its
- 3 "hands-off approach to digital abuse and harassment on its service" may have affected the value
- 4 of its stock and made wary potential buyers of the company. ²¹ In response to these threats to
- 5 Twitter's brand and revenue streams, Twitter asserts that it "began employing 'technology to be
- 6 more aggressive in detecting and minimizing the visibility of certain types of abusive and
- 7 manipulative behaviors."²² Through "automated methods," Twitter attempted to "preemptively
- 8 detect abuse and reduce the reach of abusive behavior on the platform" and remove "content that
- 9 violates Twitter's Rules and Terms of Service."²³ Twitter reports that these measures have led to
- positive results such as reducing the number of abuse reports from users.²⁴

See Twitter, Twitter Rules; Twitter, Hateful Content Policy, https://help.twitter.com/en/rules-and-policies/hateful-conduct-policy.

Id. at 4. Twitter also asserts that its activities fall within the scope of the press exemption contained in 11 C.F.R. § 100.73 and thus it states that its activities are not contributions or expenditures. Id. at 7. Foreseeing this potential defense, MURs 7443 and 7447 Complainants assert that Twitter's actions are not exempted from being contributions or expenditures by virtue of the press exemption because their actions were not for any legitimate press function. MUR 7443 Compl. at 11-12, 15; MUR 7447 Compl. at 14-15, 18.

Finally, Twitter asserts that it is immune from civil liability for its actions pursuant to the Communications Decency Act. MUR 7447 Resp. 14-15, 17-18; see 47 U.S.C. § 230(c) (providing that "no provider . . . of an interactive computer service shall be held liable on account of . . . any action voluntarily taken in good faith to restrict access to or availability of material that the provider or user considers to be obscene, lewd, filthy, excessively violent, harassing, or otherwise objectionable").

1 With respect to the specific complaints, Twitter acknowledges that Gaetz, the 2 Complainant in MUR 7443, along with 600,000 other accounts worldwide (including 3 Republicans and Democrats) temporarily did not appear in the auto-populated dropdown of the search window.²⁵ Twitter states that Gaetz and other similarly situated users were not appearing 4 5 in the auto-populated dropdown as a result of Twitter's larger efforts to "detect and minimize the visibility of certain types of abusive and manipulative behavior."26 The factor that resulted in 6 Gaetz and many others not appearing in this search function, even when users searched for their 7 8 specific name, was the actions of other accounts that they interacted with that had "high indicia of misuse or abuse."²⁷ Twitter states, however, that it decided it was unfair to remove accounts 9 10 from this search function based on the actions of others, and reversed course within 24 hours of 11 the issue being identified so that Gaetz and other affected accounts once again appeared in the search predictions.²⁸ 12 With respect to Nehlen's account, at issue in MUR 7447, Twitter explains that he was 13 14 banned for misusing Twitter's services by "facilitating intimidation," "employ[ing] violent imagery," and espousing "white supremacist and anti-Semitic views." Twitter asserts that, in

- light of the statements of potential advertisers' concerns with being "associated with violence,
- 2 bigotry or hate," it acted on a commercial motivation to ban Nehlen from the platform rather
- 3 than risking further damage to its brand and alienating advertisers.³⁰

III. LEGAL ANALYSIS

The Act and Commission regulations prohibit any corporation from making contributions to a candidate's principal campaign committee.³⁵ Entities that are not political committees within the meaning of the Act must file disclosure reports with the Commission when they make independent expenditures that aggregate in excess of $250 during a calendar year with respect to a given election.³⁶ "Contribution" and "expenditure" are defined to include any gift of money or "anything of value" for the purpose of influencing a federal election. ³⁷ The Commission has previously concluded that a commercial vendor providing services to political committees will not make a contribution for the purpose of influencing an election when its business activity

"reflects commercial considerations and does not reflect considerations outside the business relationship."³⁸ A commercial vendor need not make its services available to committees representing all political ideologies, but rather may establish objective business criteria to protect ³³ Id. at 6; MUR 7550 Compl.

Twitter notes that "[t]his type of automated re-verification process occurs nearly ten million times a week on Twitter." MUR 7550 Resp. at 1 (emphasis in original).

³⁵ 52 U.S.C. § 30118(a).

³⁶ 52 U.S.C. § 30104(c)(1). An independent expenditure is an expenditure that expressly advocates the election or defeat of a clearly identified federal candidate and that is not made in concert or cooperation with, or at the request or suggestion of, the candidate or his or her committee or agent, or a political party committee or its agent. Id. § 30101(17).

³⁷ 52 U.S.C. § 30101(8)(A), (9)(A); 11 C.F.R. §§ 100.52(a), 100.111(a).

- 1 commercial viability of its business without making contributions to the committees that meet
- 2 those criteria.³⁹
- Though each of the three MURs presents a different set of factual circumstances, in each
- 4 instance Twitter's action that Complainants allege is a contribution or independent expenditure
- 5 was part of an effort to "preemptively detect and reduce the reach of" content that Twitter
- 6 believes negatively affects its brand and ability to attract advertisers. 40 Thus, the actions taken
- 7 by Twitter appear to reflect commercial considerations, rather than an effort to influence a
- 8 federal election.

With respect to MUR 7443, Twitter asserts that it temporarily changed its search function as part of its efforts to "increase the quality of the discourse it hosts" and it appears to have had no partisan basis or intent to influence an election, as it affected more than 600,000 accounts treating "liberals, conservatives, and non-political actors alike." Twitter explained its original decision, noting that "[t]he then-operating assumption was that accounts associated with other abusive accounts are themselves more likely to be abusive." As to MUR 7447, Twitter's decision to ban Nehlin was made in response to posts "facilitating intimidation," "employ[ing] violent imagery," and espousing "white supremacist and anti-Semitic views," which it states

Advisory Op. 2017-06 (Stein and Gotlieb) at 6; see also Advisory Op. 2012-28 (CTIA — The Wireless Association) at 3, 8-9 (no contribution to committee where "wireless service providers may decide, due to commercial considerations, to accept proposals from some political committees and not others"); Advisory Op. 2012-26 (Cooper for Congress, et al.) at 10 (no contribution to committee where its participation was subject to "objective and commercially reasonable" criteria); Advisory Op. 2004-06 (Meetup) at 1 (explaining that a corporation may provide goods and services to political committees without being considered to have made an inkind contribution so long as it does so "on the same terms and conditions available to all similarly situated persons in the general public").

⁴⁰ MUR 7443 Resp. at 3.

Id. at 2, 4; see also Dorsey Testimony at 1 ("Twitter does not use political ideology to make any decisions, whether related to ranking content on our service or how we enforce our rules. . . . We do not shadowban anyone based on political ideology.").

- were the kinds of posts about which major advertisers had expressed concern. 43 Finally,
- 2 regarding MUR 7550, Twitter states that it suspended a user's account after a failed attempt to
- 3 verify that the account was not, as it appeared to be, a bot disseminating spam. With respect to
- 4 each of these matters, Twitter has credibly explained its commercial motivations behind its
- 5 decisions as part of a larger effort to protect its brand and attract advertisers. In light of this
- 6 commercial, rather than electoral, purpose, we recommend that the Commission find no reason
- 7 to believe that Twitter's actions were either contributions or expenditures.⁴⁴

The allegation in the MURs 7443 and 7447 complaints that Twitter has violated the 9 Commission's debate regulations by failing to follow objective criteria to pick participants in a debate by banning the Complainants also misses the mark.⁴⁵ That multiple candidates may choose to express their opinions via their Twitter accounts does not make Twitter the host of a debate. The Commission has interpreted a debate to necessarily involve "face-to-face appearances or confrontations," noting that this has been "an inherent characteristic of candidate debates since the prototypical Lincoln-Douglas Debates in 1858."46 Twitter may be said to be providing a forum for debate and discussion, but it is not a debate within the meaning of Commission's regulations.

MUR 7447 Resp. at 1, 4, 8-10.

Because our recommendations ultimately conclude that Twitter's actions are not contributions or expenditures under the Act, it is unnecessary to determine whether the press exemption or Communications Decency Act would apply under the circumstances.

⁴⁵ See MUR 7443 Compl. at 16-17; MUR 7447 Compl. at 19-20; see 11 C.F.R. §§ 110.13, 114.4(f).

Advisory Op. 1986-37 (National Conservative Foundation) at 4 (determining that a forum that did not include face-to-face confrontations was not a debate for purposes of the Commission's regulations: "Although the format and structure of these debates varied from one instance to another, the common element in all of them was a face-to-face confrontation. The Commission's nonpartisan candidate debate regulations were drafted with this historical, traditional concept of candidate debates in mind").

MUR 7443, 7447, & 7550 (Twitter, Inc.) First General Counsel's Report Page 12 of 13

1 Moreover, the Commission's debate regulations operate as an exception for activity that 2 may otherwise be considered a contribution or expenditure, and the regulations are not intended 3 to bring into regulation activity that is not for the purpose of influencing an election. The 4 purpose of the regulations is to "provide a specific exception so that certain nonprofit 5 organizations and the news media may stage debates, without being deemed to have made prohibited corporate contributions to the candidates taking part in the debate." ⁴⁷ Because, as 6 7 explained above, Twitter's alleged activities in connection with these matters do not have the 8 purpose of influencing an election and are thus not contributions or expenditures in the first 9 place, determining whether the exception would apply is unnecessary. 10 Accordingly, we recommend that the Commission find no reason to believe that Twitter 11 violated the Act by making prohibited contributions or failing to disclose independent 12 expenditures.

IV. RECOMMENDATIONS

- 1. Find no reason to believe that Twitter, Inc. violated 52 U.S.C. §§ 30104(c) or 30118 by making prohibited in-kind corporate contributions or failing to disclose independent expenditures;
 - 2. Approve the attached Factual and Legal Analysis;
- 18 3. Approve the appropriate letters; and
