

11 CFR 110.6-

I really like this part of the rule because I believe that any political candidate should be truthful and not use any algorithms to boost their popularity. This piece depicts how candidates cannot say or write anything that is not true. This would be essential for the American voter because we could trust our candidates and have an easier time choosing. This is especially important because the election coming up could change America drastically. Additionally, this rule should be pushed tremendously because if artificial intelligence starts being used in campaigns, it could make it impossible to tell what's true and what's not.

I would also like to touch on the second part of this part of the rule. It states how candidates cannot be dishonest in a way that gets them more donations and assistance. I feel like this is a great addition. Money is what gets these campaigns successful and what helps them become mainstream. Money should not come from lies but rather from honest contributions. Furthermore, artificial intelligence helping campaigns get money would be horrible and would result in companies wasting time and money to help them.

Questions:

How are these rules going to be enforced?

What will be the punishment if a candidate is caught using artificial intelligence to boost their campaign?

- Joshua Keirstead

Comments provided by :
Keirstead, Joshua