FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION

STATEMENT OF REASONS

RESPONDENTS: Martha Coakley; MUR: 6216 Coakley for Senate and Nathaniel C. Stinnett, in his official capacity as treasurer;
Coakley (State) Committee

I. INTRODUCTION

This matter was generated by a complaint filed with the Federal Election Commission by the Massachusetts Republican Party, alleging that Martha Coakley, Coakley for Senate and Nathaniel C. Stinnett, in his official capacity as treasurer ("Federal Committee"); and the Coakley (State) Committee ("State Committee") (collectively the "Respondents") violated the Federal Election Campaign Act, as amended. See 2 U.S.C. § 437g(a)(1). Specifically, the complaint alleges that the State Committee hired consultants whose work may have benefited the Federal Committee, and that the State Committee purchased assets which it later sold to the Federal Committee. After considering the complaint and responses in this matter, the Commission voted to find no reason to believe that Respondents violated the Act or Commission regulations with respect to the asset sale agreement, and further voted to exercise its prosecutorial discretion and dismiss the allegations related to the hiring of consultants. See

II. FACTUAL AND LEGAL ANALYSIS

A. Factual Background

Martha Coakley is the Massachusetts Attorney General and was the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate in the January 19, 2010, special election. She formally declared her Senate candidacy on September 3, 2009, filing her Statement of Candidacy and her federal committee's Statement of Organization the same day. The complaint alleges that, before this date, Coakley used State Committee funds to pay for federal exploratory activity in order to produce a "quick launch" of her Senate campaign.¹ According to the complaint and attached news articles, the State Committee used state campaign funds to benefit the Federal Committee in two ways:

- The State Committee paid to hire Kevin Conroy, the eventual campaign manager for her federal campaign, and Alex Zaroulis, her spokeswoman, in August 2009, and paid for work by two consulting firms, 4C Partners LLC and Liberty Square Group, that benefited the federal campaign; and
- The State Committee paid to buy a fundraising database, redesign Coakley's website, and secure 37 variations of "marthacoakley.com," and bought $6,000 worth of yard signs, posters, buttons, lanyards, and t-shirts featuring her generic campaign logo that were used when Coakley announced her candidacy. The State Committee then sold these assets to the federal committee for $35,725 pursuant to an asset sale agreement on the same day Coakley announced her candidacy.

In their response, the State and Federal Committees have each denied that the State Committee improperly paid for federal exploratory activity, asserting that Coakley hired political consultants for her state reelection campaign in 2010, and that both committees were in compliance with state and federal laws.²

1. Consultants

The State Committee hired campaign staff and several consultants the month before Coakley announced her Senate candidacy on September 3, 2009, "even though [Coakley] faces no challengers for the 2010 attorney general race."³ In particular, according to the complaint, the State Committee hired Alex Zaroulis on August 1, 2009, and Kevin Conroy on August 17,

2009, who migrated to the Senate campaign after Coakley announced her candidacy. Although the complaint alleges that the early hiring of these “key individuals” improperly benefited Coakley’s federal campaign, Coakley representatives asserted publicly that these consultants initially were hired for the state campaign. Zarpulis, who ran Coakley’s communications for the Senate race, states that she “was paid $2,000 from Coakley’s state account because she was originally hired for the attorney general’s race.” Zaroulis also explained the hiring of Conroy, the Federal Committee’s eventual campaign manager, by stating, “It is not unusual for a state campaign to hire campaign staff months, even a year, in advance to prepare for an election. Kevin Conroy was hired for that purpose.”

According to the complaint, the State Committee also paid:

- $9,000 in June and July 2009 for consulting services by a Washington political consulting firm, 4C Partners, LLC;
- $716 in August 2009 to reimburse travel expenses of 4C worker Julia Hoffman, who went on the state campaign payroll in December 2008; and
- $12,000 combined to Liberty Square Group, in June and August of 2009.

Both 4C Partners, LLC and Liberty Square Group were retained by the Federal Committee after Coakley announced her candidacy on September 3, 2009.

2. Transfer of Assets

According to the complaint, the State Committee used campaign funds to buy a fundraising database, redesign her website, secure domain names, and purchase $6,000 worth of yard signs, posters, buttons, lanyards and T-shirts featuring her campaign logo, then sold these assets to the Federal Committee for $35,725 on the same day that Coakley announced her candidacy. Coakley’s Federal and State Committees reported this transaction. Coakley also publicly disclosed the existence of an asset sale agreement between her state and federal campaign committees at the time she declared her candidacy.

B. Analysis

1. Asset Sale Agreement

Federal candidates and officeholders, or entities directly or indirectly established, financed, maintained or controlled by them, are restricted from soliciting, receiving, directing, transferring, or spending nonfederal funds. See 2 U.S.C. § 441i(e)(1)(A). In addition, section 110.3(d) of the Commission’s regulations provides, in material part, that transfers of funds or assets from a candidate’s campaign committee for a nonfederal election to his or her principal campaign committee for a federal election are prohibited. See 11 C.F.R. § 110.3(d). The State of Massachusetts permits labor organizations to make contributions to candidates, and the State 11 On the same day that Coakley announced her candidacy, the Federal Committee made a $35,725 disbursement to the State Committee for the “Purchase of Assets from State Committee to Federal Committee.” See Coakley for Senate, October 2009 Quarterly Report, (amended) at 2893. One week later, the State Committee reported receiving $35,725 from “Martha Coakley, for Senate Committee” for “Federal Committee purchasing State Committee Assets.” See Reports of Martha Coakley, OCPF, supra. This entry in the State Committee’s Massachusetts’ campaign finance report included a notation: “$ to be Purged to Charity MA 02129.” On November 25, 2009, the State Committee reported making an expenditure for the purpose of a “Donation” to Genise Hopperage School for Girls, in the same amount it received for the sale of the assets to the Federal Committee, $35,725.

12 See Johnson, supra. The Coakley response did not include a copy of the agreement.
Committee’s disclosure reports show that it accepted union contributions during 2009. See Mass. Gen. Law. 55:8 (prohibiting corporations, but not labor organizations, from making contributions); see generally Reports of Martha Coakley, OCPF, supra. Therefore, the Federal Committee’s receipt of assets purchased with these nonfederal funds could have potentially been a violation of 2 U.S.C. § 441i(e)(1)(A).

However, the Commission has permitted the transfer of a nonfederal committee’s assets to the campaign committee of a candidate for federal office where the assets are sold at fair market value. See Explanation and Justification: Transfer of Funds from State to Federal Campaigns, 58 Fed. Reg. 3474, 3475 (Jan. 8, 1993) (“the rule should not be read to proscribe the sale of assets by the state campaign committee to the federal campaign committee, so long as those assets are sold at fair market value”); see also Statement of Reasons of Chairman Walther, Vice-Chairman Petersen, and Commissioners Bauerly, Hunter, and Weintraub, MUR 5964 (Schock for Congress) (permitting the transfer of a nonfederal committee’s assets to the campaign committee of a candidate for federal office when such transfer was conducted under current market practices and at the usual and normal charges); Advisory Opinion 1992-19 (Mike Kreider for Congress Committee). The Commission’s regulations define “usual and normal charge” as “the price of those goods in the market from which they ordinarily would have been purchased at the time of the contribution.” 11 C.F.R. § 100.52(d)(2).

The response in this matter stated that the Federal Committee purchased the assets from the State Committee in order to be in full compliance with the Act. Although the response did not specifically detail the amount paid by the Federal Committee for these assets, the Committee’s 2009 October Quarterly Report shows a $35,725 disbursement to the State Committee for the “Purchase of Assets from State Committee to Federal Committee” that was made on the day Coakley announced her Federal candidacy. The Commission does not have any information to suggest that the fair market value of the assets exceeded $35,725. Furthermore, the Committee acknowledged that the asset transfer would have constituted an unlawful contribution pursuant to 11 C.F.R. § 110.3(d) "[i]f these goods were transferred to the [Federal Committee] without the committee paying the usual and normal charge." Response of Federal and State Committees at 3. The Federal and State Committees then explicitly asserted that the asset transfer did not violate the law. Id. Because there is no information to suggest that the amount paid by the Federal Committee for the assets was not fair market value, the Commission determined that there is no reason to believe that Martha Coakley, Coakley for Senate and Nathaniel C. Stinnett, in his official capacity as treasurer, and the Coakley (State) Committee violated the Act or Commission regulations with respect to the asset sale agreement.

2. Payments for Consultants

With regard to the potential use of state consultants to perform work for the federal campaign, Coakley’s Federal and State Committees have publicly denied that State Committee funds were used to pay for Federal Committee consulting fees. See supra Section II.A.1.

Zaroulis, who ran Coakley’s communications for the Senate race, states that she initially received payments from the State Committee for services related to Coakley’s state campaign. Id. She also explains that the State Committee hired Kevin Conroy, the Federal Committee’s eventual campaign manager, to prepare for Coakley’s Attorney General re-election campaign for the November 2010 state election. The State Committee reports reveal that Zaroulis and Conroy were on its payroll on August 1, 2009 and August 17, 2009, respectively. Although the State Committee’s August payments to the consultants occurred in close proximity to Coakley’s September 3, 2009 announcement of her Federal candidacy, and the Respondents did not address the allegation that the State Committee paid for consulting services that benefited the Federal Committee, the use of the Commission's limited resources to pursue this matter is not warranted here, as it would appear that any amount of State Committee consultant payments attributable to the Federal Committee would be minimal. Accordingly, the Commission has voted to dismiss, as a matter of prosecutorial discretion, the allegations relating to the hiring of consultants. See Heckler v. Chaney, 470 U.S. 821 (1985).
