PACs CONTRIBUTE $94 MILLION TO 1990 CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATES

WASHINGTON -- Congressional candidates received $94 million from political action committees during the first 18 months of the 1990 election cycle, according to a study by the Federal Election Commission.

The FEC study, which covered activity from January 1, 1989, through June 30, 1990, shows PAC receipts rose 3.3 percent to $275 million while spending increased 8.3 percent to $233 million when compared to the same period in the previous election cycle.

Overall, PACs contributed $79 million to incumbents, $6.5 million to challengers and $8.1 million to open seat candidates. Democratic candidates received $59 million from PACs compared to $34 million for Republicans. These committees made independent expenditures of more than $600,000 for or against 1990 candidates. Non-connected PACs represented the bulk of this type of activity.

Corporate PACs led all categories in terms of contributions to federal candidates by giving $35 million, followed by trade/member-ship/health, $26 million; labor, $20 million; non-connected, $8.5 million; corporations without stock, $2 million; and cooperatives, $1.7 million.

The tables and rankings on the following pages provide comparative data on PAC financial activity. One table details contributions by PACs for the 18-month period and includes statistics for activity with regard to all federal candidates and the contributions made only to those candidates seeking election in 1990. (Several million PAC dollars are contributed each cycle to candidates who are raising money for future elections or retiring debts.) Other tables compare 18-month financial activity by type of PAC and by election cycle.

"Top 50" rankings of the largest PACs follow the tables.

(Note: Because information comes from different reports, numbers contained in this study may differ from those in the FEC's August 5, 1990, study on 18-month congressional candidate activity. PACs may have reported making contributions while candidate committees may not have to report receipt of those funds until the next filing deadline. Also, the line on campaign reports indicating PAC receipts may include money from other sources, such as state and federal candidates' committees.)
