PACs CONTRIBUTE ALMOST $70 MILLION TO CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGNS

WASHINGTON -- Political action committees contributed $69.8 million to federal candidates during the first 15 months of the 1993-94 election cycle, down $3.6 million from the $73.4 million given during the same period in the 1991-92 election cycle. This information is contained in a report issued by the Federal Election Commission.

The report indicates that PACs actually contributed over $77 million to federal candidates during the 15-month period, with several million dollars contributed to candidates seeking to retire debts or to raise money for future elections.

The FEC based its report on an examination of 4435 political committees from January 1, 1993, through March 31, 1994, and found that PACs had raised $226 million and spent $181 million. Total spending by corporate PACs continued to increase while non-connected and labor PACs declined. Cash on hand for all PACs at the end of the calendar quarter was over $138 million.

The following chart depicts 15-month PAC activity since 1977-78, when the FEC began its computerized studies. This cycle is the first drop in PAC activity for the period covered. The decline may not continue, and ensuing months may see PAC activity grow.

The information on the following pages provides more detail on PAC finances. The first table compares 15-month PAC activity for five election cycles. Contributions made during the current cycle (overall and for '94 races only) are provided for Senate and House candidates by political party and type of candidate (incumbent, challenger, and open seat).

Rankings of the largest PACs follow the tables. Included in these rankings are the PACs with the largest increases in contributions to federal candidates as well as the PACs with the largest declines.
