FEC Recommends Changes to Election Law

This year, in anticipation of Congressional interest in campaign finance legislation, the Commission expedited preparation of its 1993 legislative recommendations. On January 26, the agency sent the President and the Congress a comprehensive set of 63 recommendations, the largest package it has ever submitted. FEC Chairman Scott E. Thomas said the Commission wanted "suggest changes in the election law which could improve public disclosure, remove unwarranted legal burdens and strengthen enforcement—all to the benefit of the voting public."

Recommendations of Special Significance

In an accompanying letter, Chairman Thomas highlighted certain recommendations as especially significant:

- Presidential Election Campaign Fund. The Commission pointed out that, unless Congress takes action, the Fund will experience a major shortfall for the 1996 Presidential election, leaving primary candidates without any public funding and

Information on Upcoming Special Elections

This article explains the reporting requirements for the special elections listed below. It also provides information on contribution and coordinated party expenditure limits for the specials.

The following special elections have been announced:

- Ohio, 2nd Congressional District, to replace the seat vacated by the resignation of Congressman Willis D. Gradison, Jr. Primary election: March 16. General election: May 4.
- Mississippi, 2nd Congressional District, to replace the seat vacated by Mike Espy, who is now Secretary of Agriculture. General election: March 30. Runoff election (held if no candidate wins a majority in the general): April 13.
- California, 17th Congressional District, to replace the seat vacated by Leon E. Panetta, who is now the general election candidates with less than their full entitlement.

- Incomplete Contributor Information. The agency suggested that Congress take strong measures against committees that fail to provide full disclosure about their contributors.

- "Soft Money." Soft money is generally understood to mean funds that do not comply with the federal prohibitions and limits on contributions. The recommendation suggested that Congress consider placing restrictions on the raising and spending of soft money.

- Random Audits. Although Congress eliminated the FEC's authority to conduct random audits in 1980, the Commission suggested that Congress reinstate the provision to prevent abuse of the law and to promote voluntary compliance.

Recommendations to Simplify the Law

A number of recommendations would simplify the law and ease burdensome requirements. Chairman Thomas listed the five most significant recommendations in this group:

- State Expenditure Limits. The Commission recommended that Congress eliminate the state expenditure limits for Presidential primary candidates receiving public funds. This change would remove a major accounting burden for committees and an equally difficult audit task for the agency but would not substantially affect the election process.

- Fundraising Limit. For the same reasons, the Commission recommended that the fundraising limit for publicly funded presidential candidates be combined with the overall national limit.

- Waiver Authority. This recommendation asked that Congress eliminate unnecessary reporting by authorizing the Commission to waive reports and adjust filing requirements when warranted.

- Electoral Period Limits. The Commission recommended that Congress simplify the contribution limits for candidates by applying a single limit to an entire election cycle instead of the current separate limits for primary and general elections.

- Disclaimer Notices. The Commission suggested that Congress simplify the disclaimer provision by requiring political committees to include a disclaimer on all their communications to the general public.

Recommendations to Clarify the Law

The Commission also sought guidance from Congress on certain difficult and controversial issues that have emerged through the years. Chairman Thomas listed some of those recommendations:

- Candidate Leadership PACs. This recommendation asked Congress to determine whether leadership PACs should be considered affiliated with the candidate's campaign committee and therefore subject to the same contribution limits.

- Candidate's Personal Use of Campaign Funds. The Commission recommended that Congress delineate the extent of the ban on a candidate's personal use of excess campaign funds and clarify whether the ban applies during the campaign, as well as after.

- Volunteer Participation in Exempt Party Activity. The Commission suggested that Congress clarify how much participation by volunteers is necessary in order for a party activity to be exempt from the contribution and coordinated party expenditure limits.

- Nonprofit Corporations and Express Advocacy. The Commission asked Congress to consider making statutory changes that would incorporate the Supreme Court decision that permits certain types of nonprofit corporations to make independent expenditures. (Federal Election Commission v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life, Inc.) The agency also asked Congress to define "express advocacy."
FEC v. People & Politics, Inc.

On December 7, 1992, the U.S. District Court for the District of Minnesota dismissed, with prejudice, this suit in which the FEC sought injunctive relief and monetary civil penalties. (Civil Action No. 3-91-588 (JMR).) Both parties in the litigation agreed to a dismissal given that People & Politics had virtually no funds, had ceased doing business and had initiated procedures to dissolve. While neither the FEC nor the defendant conceded its position on the merits, they agreed that any further expenditure of resources in the action was not warranted.

The FEC had alleged that People & Politics had made prohibited corporate contributions by distributing 16,000 free copies of its magazine, a 1988 voter guide, to political committees and to candidate and committee agents. The Commission’s position is described in Advisory Opinion 1988-47.

AO 1992-41

Solicitation of Members

The Insurance Coalition of America (INCA), a nonprofit corporation, may solicit PAC contributions from those members who have authorized a deduction of one dollar per month from the value of their life insurance or annuity policies. However, given INCA’s one-dollar-a-month standard, members who pay a one-time $25 fee under an alternative membership plan are only eligible for solicitation for 25 months. After that, they would no longer meet one of the requirements for a solicitable member: making regular dues payments. Before soliciting contributions, INCA must wait until the first dollar is deducted, under the first plan, or until payment is made, under the alternative plan.

An incorporated membership organization may solicit contributions to its separate segregated fund (PAC) from its individual members. 2 U.S.C. §441b(b)(4)(C); 11 CFR 114.7(a). To qualify as a solicitable member, an individual must have “some relatively enduring and independently significant financial or organizational attachment.” See Federal Election Commission v. National Right to Work Committee, 459 U.S. 197, 204 (1982). In determining whether an organization’s membership qualifies for solicitation, the Commission has considered whether the members have (1) the right to participate in the governance of the organization and (2) the obligation to help sustain the organization through regular payments of a set amount. See, for example, AO 1985-39.

INCA’s members appear to satisfy the first factor because they have the right to vote for the corporation’s governing body. The deduction of one dollar a month from the value of the member’s policy (transmitted quarterly to INCA by the insurance provider) satisfies the second factor, but the one-time membership fee of $25 does not. This $25 lifetime membership plan is distinguishable from the situation in AO 1987-5, where certain members (those 65 years old or older) who had paid dues for 10 years were granted a dues-free membership. The Commission concluded that those members had made “a substantial financial commitment” and thus retained their status as solicitable members. By contrast, INCA requires only a one-time payment of an insubstantial amount. The $25 payment would be sufficient for solicitable membership status for 25 months. INCA could then either renew the membership every 25 months for a $25 dollar payment or implement some other plan that requires payment on a regular basis (such as $12 yearly dues).

The campaign finance law precludes simultaneous solicitations for membership and for contributions to the organization’s PAC. INCA, therefore, should not begin to solicit a member until the first deduction from the policy or the first payment is made. At that point the member will have met the obligation to pay dues. Should a member withdraw authorization for the deduction or fail to make a periodic payment, that individual could not be solicited until he or she resumed payment.

Bank Deposit Lost in Mail

A bank deposit mailed in October 1992 and containing ten contribution checks to the Jerry Lewis for Congress Committee was lost in the mail. Based on documentation provided, in this specific case the Committee may treat the replacement checks it receives in 1993 as contributions for the 1992 general election rather than for the 1994 primary even though it has no outstanding debts for the 1992 election. The donors must designate their replacement checks as contributions for the 1992 general election, and the Committee must receive the checks within a reasonable time after receipt of the advisory opinion. (Thirty days would be considered reasonable.). If the original checks are found, they must be returned to the contributors.

FEC regulations require that contributions be deposited within 10 days of the treasurer’s receipt. 11 CFR 103.3(a). In this case, documentation provided by the Committee indicated that it took reasonable steps to comply with the deposit regulation and that the loss of checks was beyond its control. The Committee submitted copies of the checks and the deposit slip, reported two of the contributions in a 48-hour notice, contacted the contributors to verify that the checks were still outstanding and contacted the bank to confirm that the checks had never been received.

FEC regulations also require that post-election contributions not exceed the committee's net debts for the election. 11 CFR 110.1(b)(3)(iii) and 110.2(b)(3)(ii). In AO 1989-10, the Commission said that a committee could not accept post-election contributions to restore funds that had been embezzled by the treasurer. Unlike that committee, the Lewis Committee lost the checks before they were deposited, and there was no wrongdoing by committee staff.

The Commission strongly suggested that the Committee advise donors to stop payment on the lost checks to prevent their deposit in the Committee's account if they are found.

AO 1992-43
Preemption of State Law's Fundraising Restrictions

The Federal Election Campaign Act preempts the fundraising restrictions of a Washington State law as it relates to fundraising by state legislators and their authorized federal committees to retire campaign debts. State Senator Tim Ervin may therefore raise funds to retire the campaign debt of his 1992 federal campaign committee without regard to the state law's time constraints on conducting such activity.

Section 11 of Initiative 134 (passed by Washington State voters in November 1992) prohibits state officials or persons acting on behalf of state officials or state legislators from raising campaign contributions to retire debts during the following period: one month before through one month after a legislative session. The prohibition is also in effect during special legislative sessions. (For purposes of this opinion, the Commission assumed that section 11 was meant to apply to debt retirement by federal—as well as state—candidates.)

The Federal Election Commission Act and the rules prescribed thereunder “supersede and preempt any provision of State law with respect to election to Federal office” 2 U.S.C. § 453. The report of the House Committee responsible for drafting the provision stated: “Federal law occupies the field with respect to...limitations on campaign expenditures, the sources of campaign funds used in Federal races...and the conduct of Federal campaigns....” H.R. Rep. No. 93-1239, 93rd Cong., 2d Sess. 69 (1974). The Act's preemptive power over the regulation of federal campaign finance activity encompasses the receipt of contributions to retire federal campaign debts.

Although legislative history suggests that Congress may not have intended the Act to supersede state laws regulating the political conduct of state employees (i.e., "little Hatch Acts"), the Hatch Act is aimed at regulating the conduct of Executive Branch government employees. Such laws are not aimed at elected legislators, whose jobs, of necessity, contain a political element. Section 11, insofar as it relates to the behavior of state legislators and their authorized federal campaign committees, is therefore not a "little Hatch Act" and is consequently preempted by the Act and FEC regulations.

The Commission did not express any views on whether the Act would preempt section 11 as applied to other types of state officials and employees.

1992 House and Senate Campaigns of General Election Candidates

Spending by the campaigns of 1992 House and Senate general election candidates jumped to $504 million, $113 million more than was spent by 1990 campaigns during the same period (January 1 of the year before the election through 20 days after the general election). The 1992 campaigns raised $498 million from January 1, 1991, through November 23, 1992, and had $67 million in cash on hand.

The campaign activity of House general election candidates showed a marked increase in 1992 compared with 1990. Receipts rose by 27 percent, and there was a 41 percent increase in disbursements. Median disbursements of House challengers tripled for Republicans and doubled for Democratic challengers. However, median disbursements of open-seat candidates dropped 7 percent for the Republicans and 14 percent for the Democrats. These comparisons are shown in the graphs on the opposite page.

Comparisons of Senate activity are difficult because of six-year terms, staggered elections and, this year, the 1 "Other Committees" include PACs and all other committees that are not party committees.

2 Candidates in the 1990 election cycle contributed $2.49 million and loaned $12.17 million to their own campaigns from their personal funds. The figures for candidates in the 1992 cycle are: contributions, $6.61 million; loans, $19.90 million.

unusual occurrence of two Senate contests in California.
The increased financial activity in the 1991-92 election cycle may be attributable to an increase in the number of House challengers and open-seat races caused by Congressional redistricting and several incumbent departures.

A press release issued December 30, 1992, provides comprehensive information on 1992 House and Senate campaigns based on their post-election reports. The release includes:

- Summary data on 1992 activity;
- Data on each 1992 House and Senate general election candidate:
- Comparisons of 1992 activity with activity in previous election cycles:

1992 Year-End PAC Count

By December 31, 1992, the total number of PACs registered with the FEC had grown to 4,195, an increase of 70 PACs since the last count was taken in July 1992. See table below.

The number of PACs, however, does not necessarily correspond with financial activity, since many PACs have little or no activity. For example, according to their reports, 23 percent of all PACs made no contributions or independent expenditures between January 1, 1991, and November 23, 1992, the closing date of their post-election reports.

The Ohio primary was announced too late for the Record to provide advance notice of the reporting dates. However, candidates on the ballot in that election were notified of the reporting deadlines by mail. The reporting dates for that election are included in the accompanying table for information purposes.

Reporting by Candidate Committees

Pre- and Post-Election Reports.

Principal campaign committees of candidates on the ballot in a special election must file the appropriate report or reports as shown in the table. If a candidate loses the first election and does not proceed to the next election, there is no reporting requirement for the second election.

Note also that reporting is required only if the individual has become a "candidate" under the Federal Election Campaign Act. Candidate status is triggered when campaign activity exceeds $5,000 in either contributions or expenditures. 2 U.S.C. §431(2). At that point, the candidate and the principal campaign committee become subject to the Act's registration and reporting requirements. 1 The close of books is the end of the reporting period. The period begins the day after the closing date of the last report filed. If the committee is new and has not previously filed a report, the first report must cover all activity that occurred before the committee registered and, if applicable, before the individual became a candidate.

2 Reports sent by registered or certified mail must be postmarked by this date. Reports sent by other means must be received by the filing date.

3 The post-general report is required only if there is no runoff election.

4 The post-runoff report and the midyear report may be combined if the combined report covers through June 30 and is filed by July 8 as shown in the table. Alternatively, a committee may file two separate reports:
   1. Post-Runoff Report — close of books: June 28; mailing date and filing date: July 8
   2. Midyear Report — close of books: June 30 (report would cover just two days, June 29 and 30); mailing date and filing date: July 31.

5 A midyear report must be filed by all House and Senate committees and by all PACs and party committees (except monthly filers). In the case of the California runoff election, the midyear report may be combined with the post-runoff report (see footnote 4).

6 All committees must file a year-end report.
Special Elections

48-Hour Notices. Principal campaign committees must file 48-hour notices on contributions of $1,000 or more received after the 20th day, but more than 48 hours before, the date of any election in which the candidate participates. The notice must be received by the Federal and state filing offices within 48 hours after the campaign's receipt of the contribution. 2 U.S.C. §434(a)(6A); 11 CFR 104.5(f).

This requirement applies to all contributions of $1,000 or more, including:

- Monetary and in-kind contributions;
- Loans (other than bank loans);
- Guarantees and endorsements of bank loans; and
- Contributions, personal loans and endorsements of bank loans made by the candidate. 2 U.S.C. §431(8X(A); 11 CFR 100.7(a).

For information on the content of the notice, see 11 CFR 104.5(f) and the Campaign Guide.

Midyear Reports. Because semiannual reporting is required during an off-election year, principal campaign committees must file a midyear report in addition to special election reports. 11 CFR 104.5(a)(2). However, for committees participating in the California special election, the midyear report must be combined with the post-runoff report; see the reporting table, previous page.

Reporting by Party Committees and PACs

Semiannual Filers. Party committees and PACs filing on a semiannual (rather than monthly) basis are subject to special election reporting if they make previously undisclosed contributions or expenditures in connection with a special election by the close-of-books date shown in the reporting table. 11 CFR 104.5(c)(1)(ii) and (h).

For example, if a PAC made a contribution on February 25 to a candidate running in the Ohio primary, the committee would not have to file a pre-primary report because the contribution was made after February 24, the close of books for the primary. If the committee made a general election contribution to the same candidate on May 3, the committee would have to file a pre-general election report in which it would have to disclose both the primary and general election contributions.

Monthly Filers. PACs filing on a monthly basis are not required to file pre- and post-special election reports but may have to file 24 hour reports, as explained below. See 2 U.S.C. §434(a).9).

24-Hour Reports on Independent Expenditures

PACs (including monthly filers) and other persons making independent expenditures in connection with a special election may have to file 24-hour reports. This report is required if the committee or person makes independent expenditures aggregating $1,000 or more after the 20th day, but more than 24 hours before, the day of the election. The report must be filed within 24 hours after the expenditure is made. For more information, see 11 CFR 104.4(b) and (c) and 104.5(g). See also “Where to File” for special filing requirements.

Where to File Reports

Filing with the Federal Office. Principal campaign committees file reports and 48-hour notices with the Clerk of the House of Representatives or the Secretary of the Senate, as appropriate. Other committees file reports with the FEC (except that those supporting only House candidates file with the Clerk of the House and those supporting only Senate candidates file with the Secretary of the Senate). 11 CFR Part 105.

Twenty-four-hour reports on independent expenditures are filed with the Clerk of the House (for expenditures supporting or opposing House candidates) or with the Secretary of the Senate (for expenditures supporting or opposing Senate candidates).

Addresses and further filing information are provided in the Form 3 and Form 3X instructions.

Filing with State Offices. Copies of all reports and notices, including 48-hour notices and 24-hour reports, must simultaneously be filed with the appropriate state election office listed below. Party committees and PACs need file only that portion of the report applicable to the candidate seeking election in that state (e.g., the Summary Page and the schedule showing the contribution or expenditure). 2 U.S.C. §439(a)(2)(B). candidate in the general election. The state committee's spending limit is separate from the national committee's limit. 11 CFR 110.7(b)(1).

House Seats. In the five states holding special elections, the 1993 coordinated party spending limit for a general election House candidate is $28,460. This figure is based on the formula used for states with more than one Representative: $10,000 multiplied by the cost of living adjustment (COLA). The 1992 COLA (used to calculate 1993 spending limits) was 2.846, as certified by the Secretary of Labor. 11 CFR 110.7(b)(2)(i) and 110.9(c).

Texas Senate Seat. The coordinated party spending limit for the Texas Senate election is based on the following formula: 2 cents times the 1992 Texas voting age population (VAP), multiplied by 2.846, the 1992 COLA. 11 CFR 110.7(b)(2)(i)(A) and 110.9(c) and (d). The spending limit could not be published in this issue because the Secretary of Commerce had not yet certified the 1992 Texas VAP. For further information, call the Commission.

Runoff Elections. With respect to the possible runoff elections in Mississippi, California and Texas, Commission precedent since 1983 indicates that there is no separate party spending limit for the runoff because it is considered a continuation of the first election and not a separate general election. AO 1983-16. The Commission was recently asked to review this precedent in Advisory Opinion Request (AOR) 1993-2, which was submitted by the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. The AOR seeks guidance on whether there is a separate coordinated party spending limit for the Texas runoff. The Commission is expected to consider this matter on February 23, too late for inclusion in this issue of the Record. For information, call the FEC.

Prohibition on Transfers from Nonfederal Campaigns
Campaigns of candidates participating in the special elections should be aware that a new rule prohibiting transfers from nonfederal campaigns to federal campaigns is currently before Congress for legislative review. The Commission expects the new rule to go into effect in late March or early April. See page 3 of the January 1993 Record for a discussion of how this rule will apply to transfers in the 1994 election cycle, including 1993 special elections.

Updated Brochures Available

The Commission recently updated two brochures:
1. The FEC and the Federal Campaign Finance Law
2. State and Local Elections and the Federal Campaign Finance Law

The first brochure, published in both English and Spanish, provides an overview of the Commission and the election law. It briefly summarizes the three major elements of the law: public disclosure of campaign finance information; the restrictions on contributions and expenditures; and the Presidential public funding program. It also gives a short history of the law and describes the FEC’s functions.

Intended as an introduction to the law and Commission resources, the brochure is useful for students and others who want general information without the technical detail. The brochure also provides a useful list of other agencies to call for information on election-related topics such as voting, tax questions and telephone solicitations.

Both versions of the updated brochure are available in large quantities.

The second brochure covers the federal prohibitions that apply to state and local election activity and also discusses federal preemption of state law, citing numerous advisory opinions. The updated version incorporates advisory opinions issued since the 1984 edition.
