STATEMENT OF POLICY REGARDING COMMISSION ACTION IN MATTERS AT THE INITIAL STAGE IN THE ENFORCEMENT PROCESS

AGENCY: Federal Election Commission

ACTION: Statement of Policy

SUMMARY: The Federal Election Commission ("Commission") is issuing a Policy Statement to clarify the various ways that the Commission addresses Matters Under Review ("MURs") at the initial stage of enforcement proceedings. The Commission may take any of the four following actions at this stage: (1) find "reason to believe,"
(2) "dismiss," (3) "dismiss with admonishment," and (4) find "no reason to believe."

EFFECTIVE DATE: [Insert Date of Publication in Federal Register]

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended, 2 U.S.C. § 431 et seq. ("FECA" or "the Act"), grants the Commission "exclusive jurisdiction with respect to civil enforcement" of the provisions of the Act and Chapters 95 and 96 of Title 26.

2 U.S.C. § 437c(b)(1). Enforcement matters come to the Commission through complaints from the public; information ascertained in the ordinary course of the Commission's supervisory responsibilities, including referrals from the Commission's Reports Analysis and Audit Divisions; referrals from other government agencies; and self-reported submissions.

The FECA provides that "upon receiving a complaint" or upon the basis of information ascertained in the course of carrying out its supervisory responsibilities, the Commission "shall make an investigation of such alleged violation" of the Act where the Commission, with the vote of four members, determines that there is "reason to believe that a person has committed, or is about to commit" a violation of the Act, 2 U.S.C. § 437g(a)(2); see also 11 C.F.R. § 110.10(f). Commission "reason to believe" findings have caused confusion in the past because they have been viewed as definitive determinations that a respondent violated the Act. In fact, "reason to believe" findings indicate only that the Commission found sufficient legal justification to open an investigation to determine whether a violation of the Act has occurred. Indeed, the Commission has recommended that Congress modify the FECA to clarify this point. See Legislative Recommendations in 2003 and 2004 FEC Annual Reports. Other kinds of dispositions at this preliminary stage would also benefit from clarification to ensure consistency and promote understanding of the Commission’s reasons for taking action. Thus, the Commission is issuing this policy statement to assist complainants, respondents, and the public in understanding the Commission’s findings at this stage of the enforcement process.

Generally speaking, at the initial stage in the enforcement process, the Commission will take one of the following actions with respect to a MUR: (1) find “reason to believe” a respondent has violated the Act; (2) dismiss the matter; (3) dismiss the matter with admonishment; or (4) find “no reason to believe” a respondent has violated the Act. This policy statement is intended to clarify the circumstances under which the Commission uses each of these dispositions.

A. “Reason to believe”

The Act requires that the Commission find “reason to believe that a person has committed, or is about to commit, a violation” of the Act as a predicate to opening an investigation into the alleged violation. 2 U.S.C. § 437g(a)(2). The Commission will find “reason to believe” in cases where the available evidence in the matter is at least sufficient to warrant conducting an investigation, and where the seriousness of the alleged violation warrants either further investigation or immediate conciliation. A “reason to believe” finding will always be followed by either an investigation or pre-probable cause conciliation. For example:

- A “reason to believe” finding followed by an investigation would be appropriate when a complaint credibly alleges that a significant violation may have occurred, but further investigation is required to determine whether a violation in fact occurred and, if so, its exact scope.
A "reason to believe" finding followed by conciliation would be appropriate when the Commission is certain that a violation has occurred and the seriousness of the violation warrants conciliation.

A "reason to believe" finding by itself does not establish that the law has been violated. When the Commission later accepts a conciliation agreement with a respondent, the conciliation agreement speaks to the Commission's ultimate conclusions.
When the Commission does not enter into a conciliation agreement with a respondent, and does not file suit, a Statement of Reasons, a Factual and Legal Analysis, or a General Counsel's Report may provide further explanation of the Commission's conclusions.

The Commission has previously used the finding "reason to believe, but take no further action" in cases where the Commission finds that there is a basis for investigating the matter or attempting conciliation, but the Commission declines to proceed for prudential reasons. As discussed below, the Commission believes that resolving these matters through dismissal or dismissal with admonishment more clearly conveys the Commission's intentions and avoids possible confusion about the meaning of a reason to believe finding.

B. Dismissal and Dismissal with Admonishment

Under Heckler v. Chaney, 470 U.S. 821 (1985), the Commission has broad discretion to determine how to proceed with respect to complaints or referrals. The Commission has exercised its prosecutorial discretion under Heckler to dismiss matters that do not merit the additional expenditure of Commission resources.\(^1\) As with other

\(^1\) The FECA and Commission regulations also recognize the Commission's authority to dismiss enforcement matters. See 2 U.S.C. § 437g(a)(1); 11 C.F.R. §§ 111.6(b) and 111.7(b).
actions taken by the Commission, dismissal of a matter requires the vote of at least four Commissioners.

Pursuant to the exercise of its prosecutorial discretion, the Commission will dismiss a matter when the matter does not merit further use of Commission resources, due to factors such as the small amount or significance of the alleged violation, the vagueness or weakness of the evidence, or likely difficulties with an investigation, or when the Commission lacks majority support for proceeding with a matter for other reasons. For example, a dismissal would be appropriate when:

- The seriousness of the alleged conduct is not sufficient to justify the likely cost and difficulty of an investigation to determine whether a violation in fact occurred; or

- The evidence is sufficient to support a "reason to believe" finding, but the violation is minor.

The Commission may also dismiss when, based on the complaint, response, and publicly available information, the Commission concludes that a violation of the Act did or very probably did occur, but the size or significance of the apparent violation is not sufficient to warrant further pursuit by the Commission. In this latter circumstance, the Commission will send a letter admonishing the respondent. For example, a dismissal with admonishment would be appropriate when:

- A respondent admits to a violation, but the amount of the violation is not sufficient to warrant any monetary penalty; or

- A complaint convincingly alleges a violation, but the significance of the violation is not sufficient to warrant further pursuit by the Commission.
C. “No reason to believe”

The Commission will make a determination of “no reason to believe” a violation has occurred when the available information does not provide a basis for proceeding with the matter. The Commission finds “no reason to believe” when the complaint, any response filed by the respondent, and any publicly available information, when taken together, fail to give rise to a reasonable inference that a violation has occurred, or even if the allegations were true, would not constitute a violation of the law. For example, a “no reason to believe” finding would be appropriate when:

- A violation has been alleged, but the respondent’s response or other evidence convincingly demonstrates that no violation has occurred;
- A complaint alleges a violation but is either not credible or is so vague that an investigation would be effectively impossible; or
- A complaint fails to describe a violation of the Act.

If the Commission, with the vote of at least four Commissioners, finds that there is “no reason to believe” a violation has occurred or is about to occur with respect to the allegations in the complaint, the Commission will close the file and respondents and the complainant will be notified.

D. Conclusion

This policy enunciates and describes the Commission’s standards for actions at the point of determining whether or not to open an investigation or to enter into conciliation with respondents prior to a finding of probable cause to believe. The policy does not confer any rights on any person and does not in any way limit the right of the Commission to evaluate every case individually on its own facts and circumstances.
